(1) Acquittal—Appeal—Duty of Court in dealing with—Circumstances not justifying interference—Ss. 417 and 439, Crim. Pro. Code—Making preparations or assembling for the purposes of committing dacoity—Ss. 399 and 402, Penal Code, Ingredients of these offences defined—Assembly for the purpose of breaching Railway lines or damaging telegraphs, distinct offences—Value of an approver's evidence to be seen in each particular case—Corroboration—Evidence Act, S. 114, cl. (b)—High Court's power of acquitting a prisoner without appeal.

1. An acquittal cannot be set aside in appeal simply on the ground that the appellate Court might have taken a different view of the evidence for the prosecution had it tried the accused person as a Court of Original Jurisdiction, where a Criminal Court which has the advantage, not possessed by the appellate Court, of hearing the statements of and seeing the demeanour of the witnesses, has acquitted an accused person after fully and carefully considering the whole evidence in the case and has given reasonable grounds for arriving at the various conclusions.

It is also no ground for setting aside an acquittal that it is based at most on a doubtful weighing of facts (a).

2. An assemblage of 5 or more persons for the purpose of concealing plans for committing a dacoity yet remote or contingent or for discussing the possibility of committing it is not within the meaning of S. 402, Penal Code, which postulates a determination to commit a dacoity.

3. Assembling for the purpose of adopting measures, making preparations or even unsuccessfully attempting to break a Railway line, to damage telegraph posts, or to cut telegraph wires in order to cause trouble and injury to the Government, but without expecting any illegal gain therefrom, is not at all sufficient to prove either an offence under Ss. 399 or 402 of the Penal Code, or to corroborate an approver's evidence to establish commission of the crimes under the aforesaid two sections, although the above-mentioned acts constitute serious offences punishable under other Laws.

4. No hard and fast rule can be laid down either that in no case should an approver's evidence be rejected as regards a particular incident simply because on that point it happens to be uncorroborated, or that, in every case, regardless of all other facts and considerations, an approver's evidence must be thrown aside as worthless unless it is corroborated by independent evidence of a trustworthy character.

The question of the value to be attached to the statements of an accomplice or approver must be decided in every case upon the particular and peculiar circumstances of that case.

5. Under S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code, High Court can acquit a prisoner even if he has not appealed against his conviction. Blehinta v. The Crown, 7 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.)=82 Ind. Cas. 833=17 Cr. L.J. 97.

(2) Revision—Criminal cases—Burden of proof—Benefit of doubt—Evidence for the prosecution found to be weak and biased.

The Magistrate convicted the accused of the offence of theft and the conviction was upheld on appeal. On revision the Chief Court set aside the conviction on the ground that the Magistrate having found that the evidence for the prosecution was weak and biased and it was possible that the accused removed the property stolen (grass) under the impression that he had the right to do so, it was his duty to acquit the accused. *Ram Jas v. Where the accused received an advance of money from the complainant and contracted to pay it off by delivering ballast.

(3) Ss. 1 and 5—Breach of contract—Jurisdiction of Magistrate where employer resides or carries on business.

When the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act has been extended under S. 5 to an area outside a Presidency town, residence or earning on business by the employer within that area confers a right to prefer the complaint to the nearest Magistrate empowered in that area.

Under S. 1 of the Act it is clear that what gives jurisdiction is the fact of the employer residing or carrying on business within a Presidency town. If the employer resides or carries on business within a Presidency town he can prefer his complaint to the Magistrate or Police irrespective of the place where the work was to be performed or where the breach was committed (a). *All Mohamed v. (4) S. 2—Applicability of Act—Contractor not artificer, labourer or workman.

The Workmen's Breach of Contract Act applies only to persons falling within the definition of "artificer, labourer or workman." To make the Act applicable the relation between the parties to the contract must be that of labourer and employer of labour. A contractor is not ordinarily an artificer, labourer, or workman, and the Act does not apply to a contractor of labour or an agent for the supply of goods

(2) Ss. 17, 19—Ferry dispute—Object of appointing special constables—Prosecution under S. 19, when illegal.

The only legitimate object of appointing special constables is to strengthen the ordinary Police force by the addition of suitable persons. When such appointments are not made with the object above stated, proceedings under S. 19 of the Police Act will not be permitted.

So where the members of one party to a ferry dispute were appointed as special constables, but no instructions for the performance of any kind of Police duty were issued to them and the circumstances showed that it was never really intended to employ them as Police officers, held, their prosecution under S. 19 of the Act for refusing to serve as special constables was illegal. *Fardip Singh v. (3) S. 19. See No. 2, supra.

(4) S. 23—Preventive powers of Police officers—S. 149, Crim. Pro. Code—Power to stop pws held without license.

There is no authority for the proposition that the Police are empowered to prevent only cognizable offences. Some colour is given to this proposition by S. 149, Code of Criminal Procedure, which provides only for the prevention of cognizable offences by the Police. But S. 23 of the Police Act, 1861, appears to give wider powers for preventing offences in general.

The word "offences" in that section is not defined in the Police Act, and it does not appear to be governed by the definition of "offence" in S. 40 of the Penal Code (enacted in the previous year 1860). The Police Act was clearly intended to give the Police force, then newly formed, extensive powers of preventing breaches of the law, and it is not outside their powers to stop a pws which is being held, without a license. King-Emperor v. Nga Kala, 3 L.B. 829=17 Cr. L.J. 347=35 Ind. Cas. 528.

(5) S. 32—Order forbidding jattrawls to frequent railway stations—Order illegal.

An order was issued by the Superintendent of Police forbidding persons known as jattrawls to frequent the railway station, thoroughfares and other public places at Moghal Sarai without having first obtained a license. The accused was a Gangputra and he was convicted under S. 32 of the Police Act of having acted as a jattrawal without a license:

Held, that having regard to S. 32 and the three preceding sections a general order like the one in question was ultra vires and the conviction was illegal. Krishna Lal v. Emperor, 14 A.L.J. 1072=17 Cr. L.J. 448=35 Ind. Cas. 1008.

LINDSAY, J.

(6) S. 34, (6) (1)—'Riotous'—Quarrelling in a public street—Interference of Chief Court.

Where the Magistrate convicted the accused of an offence under sub-S. 6 (1) of S. 34 of the Police Act for quarrelling in the Bazaar at Dalhousie and awarded sentences of simple imprisonment, and the convictions and sentences were affirmed on appeal, the Chief Court refused to interfere on the ground that a finding of fact could not be impeached on revision and the decision was not contrary to law, for the word 'riotous' is sufficiently wide to cover the case of a person who creates a row in a thoroughfare. Jagat Ram v. The Crown, 52 P.L.R. 1916=29 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.)=36 P. R. 1916 (Cr.)=17 Cr. L.J. 273=34 Ind. Cas. 993.

Act X of 1873 (Oaths).

(1) S. 4—False statement in the course of a non-judicial inquiry—Indian Penal Code, S. 193—Reg. VIII of 1827.

Hayward, A.J.C.—The appellant has been convicted of giving false evidence in a proceeding before the Additional City Magistrate, under S. 193, Indian Penal Code.

The appellant's false statement was made in proceedings held by the Additional City Magistrate upon an enquiry made as to the true heir of a deceased driver by the North-Western Railway. It did not appear, however, that the Magistrate had any authority to hold any proceedings in such a matter.

Held, (i) that the proper course would have been to have referred the parties to the District Court for an enquiry under Reg. VIII of 1827, or other special Act.

(ii) There was no authority for such proceedings by a Magistrate under the Railways Act.

(iii) That the Magistrate in holding those proceedings was not a person authorized to administer an oath or affirmation in the exercise of powers conferred upon him by law within the meaning of S. 4 of the Oaths Act X of 1873.

(iv) The appellant was not legally bound by an oath or by an express provision of law to state the truth in those proceedings within the meaning of S. 191 of the Indian Penal Code.

(v) That he could not be legally convicted of having given false evidence under S. 193 of the Indian Penal Code (a). Allahwarayo v. The Crown, 10 S.L.R. 64=17 Cr. L.J. 368=35 Ind. Cas. 672.

The Agent for the Mewas Estates has jurisdiction to try the case of a murder committed at the village of Boripanda in the Nala State.

The High Court of Bombay has power to entertain the appeal of an accused person convicted by the Agent (S. 4 of Act XI of 1846 and r. 44 made thereunder): and if necessary, to resort to the provisions of S. 428 of the Crim. Pro. Code for the purpose of obtaining any additional evidence that may be necessary. Emperor v. Khalpa Ranchod, 18 Bom. L.R. 789=3 Bom. Cr. G. 208=17 Cr. L.J. 533=36 Ind. Cas. 581.

Act I of 1878 (Opium).

- (1) S. 9 (c)—Illicit possession of opium—Possession of substance unfit for use as opium and containing only traces of opium.

The accused were convicted under S. 9 (c) of the Opium Act for being in illicit possession of two and a half seers of opium. The substance seized from the possession of the accused was on chemical analysis found to contain traces of opium amounting to less than one per cent, and to be unfit for use as opium. There was no evidence as to whether the traces of opium could be extracted from the mass and used as opium: Held, that the conviction could not be sustained. Mahomed Kazi v. King-Emperor, 20 C.W.N. 1206=17 Cr. L.J. 412=35 Ind. Cas. 972.

SANDERSON, C.J. and WALMSLEY, J.

- (2) Ss. 9, cls. (c) and (e) and 3—Opium—Possession by servant—Master's liability—Onus of proof—Acquittal—Appeal against the same—When to be allowed—Export—Definition under S. 3.

N, on entering the train for Delhi, was searched, but only a small and legitimate amount of opium was found upon him. His servant A, who was not with him, but entered the train at a later stage, was searched and a large quantity of opium (10 seers 6 chittak) was found concealed in his bedding. A stated that he was in possession of the opium under the directions and on behalf of his master, N, while N asserted that he knew nothing about the matter and that A's possession was on his own account. Upon these facts, the Magistrate convicted N, not only under S. 9, cl. (c) of the Opium Act, of the offence of being in possession of opium unlawfully, but also, under S. 9, cl. (e) of the Act, of the offence of exporting the same unlawfully. The Sessions Judge, on appeal, set aside the convictions, and against the acquittal the Government preferred an appeal to the Chief Court.

I.—Imperial Acts—(Continued).Act I of 1878 (Opium)—(Concluded).

Held that the conviction under S. 9, cl. (e), Opium Act, was wrong as there was no 'export' of opium (vide definition of the term 'export' in S. 3 of the Act).

Held, further, that, as the opium was found in the possession of A, it was for the prosecution to prove affirmatively and clearly that the possession of A was merely that of a servant acting under the authority of his master N (a).

Held also that, the prosecution having failed to prove that A was in possession of the opium on N's behalf N could not be convicted of an offence under S. 9, cl. (c) of the Act.

Held also, that the finding of the Sessions Judge was not so clearly and palpably wrong on the evidence as to justify the setting aside of his judgment of acquittal (b). The Crown v. Nawab, 15 P.R. 1916 (Cr.)=46 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.)=17 Cr. L.J. 194=34 Ind. Cas. 306.

Held, that, a person is said to set fire to a thing if he puts a match to it or sets it on fire directly, and not if it catches fire as an indirect consequence of his act.

The accused kindled a fire in his master's garden which spread to an unclassified forest, and thence to a reserved forest:

Held, that the accused could not be said to have set fire to either of the forests within the meaning of S. 25 (b) of the Forest Act, but he is guilty under S. 76 of the Act. Rao v. The Crown, 51 P.W.R. 1916=20 P.R. 1916 (Cr.)=17 Cr. L.J. 458=36 Ind. Cas. 139.

- (2) S. 41, cl. (b), sub-cl. (a), r. (4)(a)—Rule ultra vires.

Rule 4, cl. (a) of the rules made under S. 41 of the Forest Act is ultra vires. Hence the prohibition contained in the said rule about the moving of firewood from private land without a certificate from the holder or manager of such land is not a proper prohibition. Clause (b), sub-cl. (a) of S. 41 of the Forest Act under which the said r. - (4) Ss. 19 (f), 20 and 29—Sanction when necessary—Irregularity, when not curable—Crim. Pro. Code, S. 537.

Proceedings may be instituted against any person under S. 20 of the Arms Act for the secret possession of arms in contravention of the provisions of S. 14 or S. 15 without previous sanction under S. 29. If however in such a case a Magistrate finds that the intention to conceal the possession is not made out he should discharge the accused under S. 20. Proceedings under S. 19 (f) may then be instituted if and when the necessary sanction thereto is given under S. 29.

The absence of sanction when required under S. 29 is a defect that cannot be cured by S. 537, Crim. Pro. Code.

Per Parlett, J.—It is the want of sanction required by S. 195 alone which is curable under S. 537 and the absence of sanction required by any other provision of law cannot be so remedied. To take the contrary view would render almost nugatory the requirements of the law regarding sanction. The Legislature has enacted with respect to certain offences that no Court shall take cognizance of them or, in the case of S. 29 of the Arms Act, that no proceedings shall be instituted against any person in respect of them, without the previous sanction of a specified authority. Without such sanction a Court is not competent to take cognizance of or to hold any proceedings in respect of such offences, and if it does so its proceedings, unless covered by cl. (b) of S. 537, are entirely without jurisdiction and invalid. The absence of sanction when required under S. 29 of the Arms Act is a defect fatal to any proceedings held without such sanction. Po Cheln v. King-Emperor, 8 L.B.R. 452=17 Cr. L.J. 209=34 Ind. Although a trade-mark is false and fraudulent the accused is not to be dealt with criminally unless the prosecution has been filed within the time limited by S. 15 of the Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889).

The expression first offence in the above said section within 3 years of which the prosecution must be filed "must be construed as the first offence of the series. The recourse to the Criminal Courts is only provided as a speedy remedy to traders who are diligent. If the words 'first offence' were applied to the most recent instance of use of a false trade-mark it would be open to the party aggrieved to stand by for years and then take action, and this construction would render the provision of law as to limitation entirely nugatory.

Hence a prosecution filed more than three years after the accused first imported goods with a false trade mark is barred under the above section. Jagan Nath v. The Crown, 10 S.L.R. 45=17 Cr. L.J. 337=35 Ind. Cas. 671.

Act I of 1910 (Press).

(1) Ss. 3, 4, 17, 19 and 22—Power of High Court—Jurisdiction of Magistrate to cancel order first exempting—Keeping of printing presses and publication of newspapers, legitimate business—Construction of S. 4—Difference between Ss. 124-A and 153-A of Penal Code and S. 4 of the Press Act—Consideration of extracts as falling under the sub-clauses to S. 4.

Abdur Rahim, Offg. C.J.—The provisions of the Press Act are applicable to all printing presses: Under S. 3 (1), the Magistrate is to take security from any person who makes a declaration before him with respect to any printing press apart from any question whether it was set up before or after the Act.

The use of the words 'or may' before the words "cancel or vary any order under this sub-section" indicates that an order dispensing with the deposit of security is not included in the words "any order within this sub-section." But in an application under S. 17 of the Act an order purporting to be made under S. 3 (1) by the Magistrate, even if illegal, cannot be set aside.

It is true in one sense that a proviso is part of the section to which it is attached. But in ordinary legal parlance a proviso is to be distinguished from the enactment to which it is generally appended either for the purpose of explaining what particular matters are not within the meaning of the enactment or for providing exceptions and qualifications to the enactment or for other similar purposes. The proviso is something subordinate to the main clause and the general rule is that what is contained in the proviso is not to be imported by implication into the clause, which would tend to extend its scope beyond what is warranted by the natural meaning of the words used by the Legislature.

S. 3 (1) imposes a serious disability on persons desiring to keep printing presses. It must have the effect of, hampering the carrying on of, what is ordinarily, not only a perfectly legitimate business, but one which has played such an important part in the diffusion of knowledge and progress of civilization.

As regards the order of forfeiture, S. 22 read with Ss. 17 and 19 debars the Court from interfering with it except on the ground, namely that the extracts in question are not of the nature described in the sub-sections to S. 4.

The Act imposes no duty upon Government to issue any warning or to ask for any explanation before taking action.

S. 4 vests the local Government with a discretion so large and unfettered that the keeping of printing presses and the publication of newspapers becomes an extremely hazardous undertaking in the country. It may be doubted if it is possible for the keeper of any printing press in the country to maintain such an efficient expert supervision over matters that are printed as to detect everything that might be regarded to fall within the "wide-spread net" of S. 4. Similarly a newspaper may be consistently staunch in its loyalty to the Government, its general policy may be above all reproach, the sincerity and bona fides of the intention of the Editor may not be liable to question, but if any letters or other writings, are let in, may be, through carelessness, which come within the scope of any of the clauses to S. 4, the Government may at once without any trial or even a warning forfeit the security, and in this way ultimately put an end to the newspaper itself. That the influence of a periodical on the public life of the country is on the whole decidedly beneficial need be no bar to the Government action. The Local Government, it may be assumed, will not indiscriminately exercise the power which it possesses under the enactment, but the vesting of such unlimited power in the Executive Government is undoubtedly a serious encroachment on the freedom which the press in India enjoyed before the passing of the Act. The Act, as is well known, was passed in order to counteract the manifold ingenious devices adopted by the anarchists of Bengal for carrying out their propaganda. We are not concerned with the question whether the Legislature was justified in applying such a drastic press law to the whole of India, while the evil sought to be met was mainly connected with the activities of a band of young revolutionists in one corner of the country.

On the construction of S. 65 of the Government of India Act, 1915, as at present advised it seems to me that the construction put upon "unwritten laws" by Norman, J., is what is really required by the plain meaning of the words used. There is no difficulty in conceiving that the Imperial Parliament with all its great traditions in upholding the cause of liberty should have been unwilling to grant to the Indian Legislature, constituted as it is, any Legislative powers which would enable the Government of India to encroach upon those fundamental rights of the people, the violation of which especially by a foreign Government, is so calculated to lead to a disturbance of that peace in the realm which it is the highest concern of the Crown always to assure. That the provision of S. 43 of 3 and 4 Will. IV, Cap. 85, was not to be regarded as of no practical value and importance or as something quite obsolete is made clear by its repetition in identical language in S. 65 of the Government of India Act of 1915.

The Government acting under S. 4 of the Press Act need not hear the person whose property it seizes, need not take any evidence nor is it bound to follow any kind of procedure which would ensure that the forfeiture was made after proper deliberation with due regard to the rights of the parties concerned and in the true interests of the State.

The right of appeal to the High Court under the provisions of Ss. 17 and 19 does not make any substantial difference, as the onus is cast upon the owner of the confiscated property to prove that the order of forfeiture was wrong and in such circumstances the right must be treated as more or less illusory.

The onus is laid under Ss. 17 and 19 upon the person whose security has been forfeited to prove that the publications selected by the Government at their own discretion may not have the tendency described in the various clauses. That is not only reversing the ordinary procedure in trials, but the difficulty of proving such a negative as this must in many cases be insurmountable.

It is unnecessary to determine any of the questions, whether the Press Act is ultra vires or at least Ss. 1, 17, 19 and 22 of the Imperial Legislature, for the simple reason that this Court is constituted and this application has been made under the special provisions of the Press Act itself and S. 22 of that Act prevents all interference on our part except on the ground mentioned in Ss. 17 and 19.

Undoubtedly the language of S. 4 of the Act is extremely, nay, dangerously wide, but the interpretation of the learned Judges in 41 Cal. is unreasonably wide. The words "whether by inference, suggestion, allusion, metaphor, implication or otherwise" are merely by way of explanation, and do not in any way enlarge the meaning of the words "which are likely or may have a tendency directly or indirectly." By "tendency," is meant the natural effect of the words used on the readers of the newspaper in question; no regard should be paid to the effect which they may possibly produce on the minds of abnormally constituted persons, or persons whose acquaintance with the language is inadequate, or on those who might content themselves with reading certain passages or expressions apart from the context or to the interpretation which men of ingenious minds may put upon them. All that has to be taken into account is the effect which the words are by their nature likely to produce on a normal average reader understanding them in their plain natural meaning.

Apart from Expl. 2, in applying S. 4 (1), the intention of the editor or the writer is not to be considered, if it is not shown that the words in their plain ordinary meaning may not tend to produce the objectionable effects mentioned in cls. (a) to (f).

The clauses lump together the offences defined by Ss. 124-A and 159-A of the Penal Code with this difference that no question of intention of the editor or writer of the articles arises apart from Expl. 2.

"Hatred and contempt," which are ordinary English words, mean something more than mere disapproval or dislike.

'Government' as used in the section denotes an established authority entitled and able to administer the public affairs of the country, and does not mean merely the British connection. But it is not identical with any particular individuals who may be administering the Government. "What is contemplated in the section is the collective body of men, i.e., the Government defined under the Indian Penal Code. It means the person or persons collectively in succession who are authorised to administer the Government for the time being. One particular set of persons may be open to objection and to assail them and to attack them and excite hatred against them is not necessarily exciting hatred against the Government because they are only individuals and not representatives of that abstract conception which is called Government. The individual is transitory and may be separately criticised, but that which is essentially and inseparably connected with the idea of Government established by law cannot be attacked without coming within" this section.

All criticisms of the measures of a Government must in some degree involve reflections on the Government itself. But S. 4 allows less scope to criticisms directed against the Government itself than to criticisms of measures of the Government.

Comments on the measures and actions of the Government are exempted from the operation of S. 4 provided the person making the comment does not excite or attempt to excite thereby hatred or contempt against the Government. But the protection afforded by this explanation is extended only to comments on Government's measures and actions and not to attacks on the Government itself which have to be judged by the light of S. 4 alone without reference to Expl. 2.

In certain stages of society, reforms in the constitution of the Government are a biological and political necessity. To say that such questions are not open to public discussion, supposing that the law is not violated by the manner and the methods adopted in such discussion, would be opposed to all sound maxims of constitutional law.

The difficulties of a foreign Government constituted as it is in this country, are necessarily very great. It is not to be expected that it should be in complete touch with the genuine sentiments, feelings and aspirations of the people. The information that it can command must at best be second hand and is often likely to proceed from interested sources. With the best of intentions, it is liable to make many mistakes, sometimes serious blunders. These and other inherent difficulties of the Government as at present constituted may or may not justify the demand for Home-rule, and it may be that Self-Government is necessary for the full growth of the people. But the law does not permit a publicist discussing the Government actions and failures to impute base and dishonourable motives.

I am prepared to acquit the petitioner of any wilful attempt to disseminate disaffection or hatred against the Government of the country or to create feelings of hatred against any class of His Majesty's subjects. But I have been unable to hold that some of the extracts from the publication in "New India" cited before us may not have such a tendency.

Agting, J.—The present Bench is a special tribunal constituted under a special enactment for a single specific purpose—namely to determine whether certain words contained in the newspaper (and specified in the order of forfeiture) are or are not of the nature described in S. 4 (1) of the Press Act.

The interpretation of the learned Judges on the construction of S. 4 (1) of the Press Act in 41 Cal. is too wide.

There is nothing in the Act which throws on the applicant the onus of proving that the words, which are made the ground of forfeiture, do not fall within the scope of the section. It cannot be deduced from the words of S. 19.

Whether the words are likely or may have a tendency to produce certain results must be determined primarily by inference from their own nature. The words themselves form the main evidence in the case; and the Act throws no onus on either side. The words of section "are likely or may have a tendency," does not "embrace the whole range of varying degrees of assurance from certainty on the one side to the very limits of impossibility on the other." The wording of the section is not so all embracing that even a person "acting in the highest interests of humanity and civilisation" is confronted with an almost hopeless task in showing that the words he has used do not fall within it.

That the wording of the section is very wide is, however, undeniable, and in some respects it clearly goes beyond the provisions of the Penal Code.

The governing words "are likely or may have a tendency" undoubtedly leave the question of intention quite immaterial and confine our attention to the natural effect of the words without reference to what the writer meant or wished to be understood.

In the case of comments on the measures of Government an intention to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection is necessary to bring them within the scope of cl. (c) of S. 4 (1). The intention is of course deducible from the words of the extracts themselves.

To give effect to the interpretation that Government means only the British connection would go far to render the task of governing

India impossible. The true interpretation is to be found in the General Clauses Act (X of 1897) which governs the Press Act as regards definitions of terms. The addition of the words "established by law in British India" seems to be intended to emphasize the fact that it is the Government existing at the time that is sought to be protected from attacks of the kind forbidden.

"Hatred" and "contempt" do not mean only such hatred and contempt as would lead to the commission of the crimes referred to in other clauses of sub-section, e.g., murder, violence, resistance to the law, intimidation of public servants and others.

S. 124—A, I.P.O., was practically recast so as to make it clear that Strachey, J.'s, interpretation of the law in 22 Bom. was correct. The interpretation of Strachey, J., on the words of S. 124-A, Penal Cod., which are identical with those of the Press Act in 22 Bom. is quite correct.

The phrase "dwelling adversely on its foreign origin or character" must not be understood in too comprehensive a sense, or divorced from the context. All unfavourable criticism of a Government's constitution, policy or measures must necessarily tend to arouse dissatisfaction. So far there is nothing illegitimate. But between dissatisfaction on the one hand and hatred, contempt and disaffection on the other, there is a vast gulf.

It is open to any one to draw attention to the non-Indian elements in the Government of India and to argue that these impair the efficiency of that Government and that it would be to the public advantage, if they were replaced by Indian elements. That is legitimate criticism. But it is not legitimate to go further and to use the existence of the non-Indian elements of Government as a means of exciting hatred, contempt and disaffection against Government. That as Strachey, J., puts it, would be to hold up the Government to hatred and contempt by dwelling adversely on its foreign character and origin. It all depends on the manner in which and the object with which the circumstances are used in argument.

As regards intention, it seems to me most unsafe to judge of the intention of the petitioner in publishing the specified article, by reference to other articles previously published at long intervals, of time, and mostly in other connections.

Seshagiri Iyer, J.—S. 22 only enacts that the declaration is a notice to all persons that the Government have declared the forfeiture and does not declare that the forfeiture has been legally made.

* The foundation of our jurisdiction under the Act is S. 17. It is a statutory right that we are asked to exercise, and we can grant relief only in respect of the grounds on which the party can seek our intervention.

It is true that the language of S. 22 reads as if all proceedings under the Act are liable to be revised by us. But the apparent intention of the Legislature is that only such proceedings under the Act as lend themselves to attack on the grounds mentioned in S. 17 should be revised by the High Court.

The use of the expression "no proceeding purporting to be taken under the Act" may have been inserted ex majori cautela.

The true aim to be kept in view is to construe the statute in such a way as to carry out its main intention. In doing that, inaccurate and loosely worded phrases have to be subjected to some pruning and adjustment.

Proceedings under S. 3 are not subject to our revisional jurisdiction under Ss. 17 and 22 of the Press Act.

The view of Norman, J., "Allegiance and protection are reciprocally due from the subject and the sovereign. It is evident that the strict observance of the laws which provide for such liberty and security ensures the faithful and loving allegiance of the subjects. No man can study the History of England, or can read the great judgment passed by the High Court of Parliament by the Bill of Rights on King James II, without seeing that on the faithful observance by the sovereign of the unwritten laws and constitution of the United Kingdom, as contained in the Great Charter and other Acts, depends in no small degree the allegiance of the subjects. It would be a startling thing to find that rights of so sacred a character could be taken away by an act of a subordinate Legislature. It would be strange indeed if a great popular assembly like the Parliament of England had put into the power of a Legislature which has not, and in the nature of things could not have, any representative character, the power of abrogating or tampering with such fundamental laws" quoted and approved."

There is no presumption that an Act is not intended to interfere with existing rights. An Act of Legislature in this behalf cannot be regarded as interfering with the allegiance of the subject.

The foundation of all criminal laws in India would be shaken to its root, if it is held that the Legislature has no power to enact laws depriving the subject of his liberty. So also with reference to property. It is impossible to argue—I do not wish to commit myself definitely to an opinion on this matter—that any Act of the Legislature which permanently deprives the subject of his property without vesting in a judicial tribunal the power to pronounce on the legality or justice of the step taken, may be said to strike at the root of the allegiance due from the subject.

Instead of taking the decision of the Court first, and then declaring the forfeiture, the process has been reversed; such a procedure cannot be said to affect the allegiance of the subject.

S. 4 of the Press Act is not ultra vires of the powers of the Imperial Legislature.

In construing the words of a section a consideration of the seriousness of the consequences is no right test. The law has to be administered as it is found.

The word 'likely' in S. 4 (1) of the Press Act refers to the probable inference that may be drawn. When that word is followed by the words 'may have a tendency' the contention that the barest possibility of the words conveying a particular impression was contemplated seems not unreasonable. But the Legislature must have had in mind not an unthinking perverse and blind possibility but the consequence, however far-fetched and remote it might be, which can be deduced by a reasonable human being. The process by which the inference has to be drawn is very tightly worded. When the probability or possibility is to be reached directly or indirectly whether by inference, suggestion, allusion, metaphor or implication or otherwise, it looks as if all egress is barred.

The word 'otherwise' used in S. 4 (1) is the finishing stroke. It is no wonder that the learned Chief Justice of the Calcutta High Court pronounced the right vested in the High Court as "illusory."

While the operative portion of S. 4 deals purely with the language employed, divorced from considerations of motive or intention the Expl. II furnishes a ground of exemption, and it can be shown under it that there was no intention to excite or to attempt to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection.

'Disaffection' means 'disloyalty.'

It is true that in the vast majority of cases the intention must be gathered from the language employed, but it is possible to show that what prima facie appears objectionable should not be given the meaning attributable to the words employed.

The times have changed a great deal since the learned Judge delivered his charge. If I may use a very hackneyed expression, the angle of vision has changed largely.

When Strachey, J., in 22 Bom. says "dwelling adversely on its foreign origin and character" would make a man guilty of exciting hatred and contempt, I am not prepared to accept it, without qualification. In my opinion, suggestions to the effect that an indigenous agency would be more suitable in certain departments of the administration and should be more largely employed in others, should not be regarded as exciting hatred or disaffection. Of course language may be employed which may render the advocacy dangerous. But prima facie I would be unable to discern in criticisms of this kind an intention to excite hatred or contempt. I would also qualify the phrase which says that 'attributing indifference to the welfare of the people' would amount to sedition. If criticism attributing indifference to the welfare of the people is couched in language, which imports corrupt or malicious motives, the writer cannot escape, but if it aims only to draw attention to a weak point in the administration in the hope that criticism may lead to the redress of grievances or the removal of a disability, the writing cannot be condemned. Subject to these reservations, I accept the summing up of Strachey, J., in 22 Bom. as fairly accurately explaining the words "hatred" and "contempt."

To public political articles great latitude is given and the articles must be dealt with in a free, fair and liberal spirit. Dealing as they do with the public affairs of the day, such articles, if written in a fair spirit, and bona fide, often result in the production of public good, and should not be viewed with an eye of narrow criticism.

The important question which might have necessitated a great deal of discussion, was fairly solved by the admission of the learned Advocate-General that he had instructions to say that the discussion as to Home Rule was not per se objectionable. A reservation was made that the discussion might amount to bringing into hatred or contempt the Government established by law in British India, if the methods advocated to gain "Home Rule" and the language employed in pushing it forward were calculated to disseminate hatred or contempt.

There can be no doubt that two essentials should be kept in mind in asking for changes in the machinery of Government. The allegiance to the throne and person of the Sovereign should be held as inviolate; and there should be no suggestion that the connection which makes India an integral part of the British Empire should be severed. Within these limits it is permissible to ask that the details of the administrative machinery should be readjusted to meet the exigencies of the times.

A demand for change there will be in the most perfect form of popular Governments. That demand ex-necessitate would show that the existing machinery is out of gear in some particular or other. In one sense such a criticism may excite disaffection towards the Government established by law. It is conceivable that there may be even dislike, but if the object is to rearrange the personnel and even in a measure substitute new classes of men in the places occupied by the old, provided the advocacy is attributable to a genuine desire to strengthen the feeling of loyalty and the link that binds the empire, there can be no room for saying that hatred, contempt or disaffection was preached.

The demand that there should be alterations in the State is one of those claims which every law-abiding subject interested in the well-doing of the Government might legitimately advance.

I am not to be understood as suggesting that the expression "Government established by law in British India" applies only to British Sovereignty and the British connection.

I adopt Mr. Justice Strachey's definition of these words. He says: "It means, in my opinion, British rule and its representatives as such, the existing political system as distinguished from any particular set of administrators." It is the system of Government that S. 4 (1) (c) contemplates, and not the persons who for the time being carry on the details of the administration. Cl. (a) does not require much comment. A great deal will depend upon the language used. Cl. (c) is not easy to define. The objects aimed at must be those which would render friendly co-operation between the different races living in India impossible. The language must be such as to lead to the breaking of the peace. Otherwise, any argument tending to suggest the particular persons are not carrying on the machinery of Government efficiently may be said to incite the people to interfere with the maintenance of law and order. Dissatisfaction with men and measures is believed in many quarters as a healthy sign of progress. It is not necessarily incompatible with a desire not to interfere with the administration of the law or with the maintenance of law and order.

In my opinion, there must be some connection between the subject-matter of the articles tendered and of the articles which are objected to. Annie Besant v. The Government of Madras, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 385=5 L.W. 1=39 M. 1085.

(3) Ss. 3 and 22—Meaning of proceeding in S. 22—Power of Court to issue certiorari when issued—When act judicial—Duty of Magistrate under S. 3, ministerial—Exercise of power by ministerial or executive officer in excess—Remedy—Right of suit.

Abdur Rakim, Offg. C. J.—The High Court in which the old Supreme Court of Madras is absorbed has all the jurisdiction and authority of the Court of King's Bench in England. This includes the power to issue the writ of certiorari.

This jurisdiction cannot be taken away by any Act of the Legislature except by express words or by necessary implication. There is nothing in S. 22 of the Press Act which can be said to have deprived the High Court of this power.

The first part of S. 22 does not refer to the validity of an order of forfeiture but to the fact that it has been made. The word 'proceeding' in S. 22 means proceedings under S. 4 and other similar section of the Act relating to the order of forfeiture and does not include an order of the Magistrate under S. 3 (1) of the Act.

The High Court has jurisdiction to issue the writ of certiorari in order to remove the proceedings of Courts or of persons entrusted with judicial functions out of the ordinary course of legal procedure for the purpose of quashing them.

The statutory powers of revision and control are available only over the proceedings of ordinary Courts: A writ of certiorari is issued not only to Courts but to tribunals specially constituted and entrusted with duties of a judicial character.

The writ of certiorari lies only with respect to judicial acts and not to ministerial acts. Proceedings will not be removed by a writ to a superior Court unless they are capable of being determined there. A writ is granted only in respect of matters which, but for some special legislation creating special tribunals, would have been within the ordinary jurisdiction of the superior Court.

Whether an act is judicial or not depends on the nature of the powers conferred by the Legislature, the character of the act sought to be quashed and the nature and extent of the discretion vested with the authority and other similar considerations.

The Legislature, in delegating to the Magistrate the functions under S. 3 (1), does not regard him as a Court but as an executive officer entrusted with the performance of certain administrative duties.

The Press Act has conferred upon the Presidency Magistrate novel powers, which were never known to be exercised by this Court or by any superior Court in the land.

If an executive or administrative officer acts in excess of his powers, such acts are not liable to be reviewed by the High Court whether by means of a writ of certiorari or under its ordinary revisional powers. The only remedy open to an aggrieved person in such cases would be by an action.

Ayling, J.—The Magistrate when he cancels or varies an order under the sub-section to S. 3 need not record special reasons. The recording of special reasons is limited to an order dispensing with security.

The term "proviso" as applied to the second paragraph of S. 3 (1) is a misnomer. The effect of the paragraph is simply to give the Magistrate additional powers over and above those conferred by the first paragraph. The words "an order" cover an order dispensing with security. The sub-section is designed to give the Magistrate a full discretion both as regards requiring security and determining the amount, and this discretion is not once for all but may be revised from time to time.

The proceeding referred to in S. 22 includes proceedings of a Magistrate under S. 3 (1).

In cases of a newly constituted offence or liability, the Legislature may, without any undue jealousy of the power of the Court, elect to take away the power of interference of certiorari absolutely or in respect of proceedings with jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction of the Court is equally barred in respect of proceedings purporting to be taken under the Press Act, as in respect of proceedings taken under the said Act with jurisdiction, by reason of S. 22. The Chief

Presidency Magistrate's order under S. 3 (1) cannot hence be set aside.

The Press Act is an entirely new enactment brought into force in the interests of public tranquillity and imposing novel liabilities on the keeper of presses and publishers of newspapers chiefly in the matter of security. It is self contained and complete.

As to whether the order of the Magistrate under S. 3 (1) was a judicial act or not, if it were necessary to determine, I should not be prepared to dissent from the conclusion of the other Judges that it is an administrative one.

By depositing security as required by the order the petitioner has not waived her right to subsequently question its validity.

The petitioner took no action whatever till more than three months later, when the Government, proceeding on the assumption that the initial order of the Magistrate was valid, took further steps under S. 4 and forfeited the security. The exercise of the extraordinary power to issue certiorari being discretionary ought not be exercised in such circumstances.

Seshagiri Iyer, J.—The High Court has the same powers over persons resident within the local limits of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction as are exercised by the Court of the King's Bench in England.

Even after the Press Act, I of 1910, the right to keep a Press and to use it, is a common law right inherent in every subject and has not the slightest resemblance to the exercise of a trade or calling for which a license should be taken out.

It is not a condition precedent to the issue of a writ, that this Court should be able to place itself in the position of the Court whose order is complained against.

The fact that the power to issue a writ has been engrafted into legislative provisions is not an argument for holding that that power does not exist aliunde. The writ may assume various forms. There must be the exercise of some right or duty to decide in order to provide scope for a writ of certiorari at Common Law.

Unless the power to issue the writ of certiorari is expressly taken away, it inheres in the Court. Even if it is taken away, the High Court can interfere if there has been a want of jurisdiction, in the inferior Court or if fraud has been practised in the procuring of the judgment.

S. 22 of the Press Act does not expressly or by implication take away the right of interference by the High Court.

Prima facie an order passed by an officer who acts ordinarily judicially may be presumed to have been passed by him in that capacity. The officer need not be sitting as a Court to attach to himself judicial functions.

A proviso must be considered with relation to the principal matter to which it stands as a proviso and should not be read as enlarging the scope of the section.

Act I of 1910 (Press)—(Concluded).

(a) There is nothing in the Act which compels the Magistrate to hold any enquiry, although he is not debarred from doing so. (b) The nature of the information to be laid before him is not specified. (c) The Magistrate is not bound to state any reasons. (d) He has then unfettered discretion in fixing the amount. (e) A special provision is made in S. 22 of the Act granting the same protection for proceedings passed in good faith as are secured to Judicial Officers by Act XVIII of 1850. These considerations show that the action of the Chief Presidency Magistrate is not judicial but only ministerial.

The power to dispense with the security only qualifies the rule which imposes the security. The order contemplated by the second clause of the proviso is different in nature from that which the first part enables the Magistrate to make.

The Chief Presidency Magistrate has no power to demand security after once dispensing with it at the time of the declaration. Annie Besant v. Emperor, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 497 = 4 L.W. 625 = 32 M.L.J. 151 = 39 M. 1164.

S. 23 (1) of the Criminal Tribes Act (1911) is not altogether easy of interpretation; but it would appear that the phrase "second conviction" has reference to the words in the sentence "is hereafter convicted" and not to the earlier words "having been convicted." The section will thus read, "whoever, having been convicted, is hereafter convicted, shall on second conviction be punished with imprisonment for a term of not less than seven years;" and the words "second conviction" must be taken to signify a first conviction for a scheduled offence after the coming into force of the Act following upon either one or many convictions of scheduled offences prior to the Act; and a third conviction of cl. (b) to signify a second conviction so following.

The words on a second conviction cannot be taken to mean second after the notification. In re Sellamani, 32 M.L.J. 212 = 17 Cr. L.J. 149 = 33 Ind. Cas. 629.

Emergency Legislation Continuance Act (1 of 1915), if ultra vires—Ordinances 3 and 5 of 1914—Power of Governor-General in Council to pass Act embodying provisions of ordinances—Ordinance 3 of 1914—S. 11, effect of—Jurisdiction of Courts to quash orders of internment passed under Emergency Legislation Continuance Act—Indian Councils Act, 1861 (24, 25 Vict., c. 67), Ss. 22, 23.

Under S. 23 of the Indian Councils Act, 1861 (24, 25 Vict., c. 67), no ordinance can have any force of law for more than six months from its promulgation but the power of the Governor-General in Council to pass an Act embodying the provisions of an ordinance is in no matter controlled or taken away by that section. It is clear that the Governor-General in Council has power to pass an Act like the Emergency Legislation Continuance Act (1 of 1915) which embodies the provisions of Ordinances 3 and 5 of 1914.

Held (as to the contention that inasmuch as S. 11 of the Ordinance No. 3 of 1914 which is embodied in the Emergency Legislation Continuance Act of 1915 seeks to oust the jurisdiction of the Courts, it offends against S. 22 of the Indian Councils Act, 1861), that the Emergency Legislation Continuance Act of 1915 is not ultra vires of the Governor-General in Council and the High Court has not power to call in question orders passed thereunder. It is for the Governor-General in Council to be satisfied on the materials before them and the Court cannot call for the materials or examine them.

In England the common law rule that when an Act is repealed and the repealing Act is repealed by another which manifests no intention that the first shall continue repealed the repeal of the second Acts revives the first does not apply to repealing Acts passed since 1850 and the last repeal does not now revive the Act or provisions before repealed unless words be added reviving them. The same principle or rule of law applies to this country. S. 9 of the General Clauses Act (1 of 1869) expressly provided that for the purpose of reviving either wholly or partially a Statute, Act or Regulation repealed, it shall be necessary expressly to state such purpose, and the same is the effect of Ss. 6 and 7 of the General Clauses Act (X of 1897). In the matter of Jawa Nathoo, 20 C.W.N. 1327.

There are two distinct stages in the preliminary procedure when an owner is required to do a certain thing by the Municipal authority; there is first the initial notice under S. 175 of the Bengal Municipal Act, followed by objection, if any, on the part of the person notified, and there is next the explanation or notification of the order absolute, if any, made after his objection had been heard. This procedure is, by virtue of S. 175, applicable in its entirety to a case under S. 202.

Proceeding before a Magistrate on application under S. 202 is without jurisdiction, where there is a failure to observe the essential preliminary steps due to non-compliance with provisions of Ss. 178 and 179. Nabib v. Noakhali Municipality, 23 C.L.J. 598 = 17 Cr. L.J. 265 = 34 Ind. Cas. 985.

The accused was prosecuted under S. 271 of the Bengal Municipal Act for disobeying a requisition under S. 230. The report of the offence was made by the out-door Inspector and it was submitted to the District Magistrate by the Chairman with a recommendation to prosecute the accused. The Inspector appeared before the Magistrate and was examined as the complainant. The document which was submitted by the Chairman to the Magistrate bore an eight-anna stamp. It further appeared that the notice against the accused was issued on the authority of the Vice-chairman. There was no written order of delegation of duties or powers by the Chairman to the Vice-chairman which could cover this order made by the Vice-chairman.

Held—that because the report of the offence made by the Inspector which was submitted by the Chairman to the District Magistrate bore an eight-anna stamp, it did not follow that it must be regarded as a petition of complaint and that the Chairman was merely in the position of a complainant.

That the order or consent of the Commissioners necessary under S. 353 for the institution of a prosecution under the Act is an order or consent by the Chairman as representing the Commissioners which the Chairman can give under S. 44.

That in the present case the order of the Chairman was an order or consent in writing by the Chairman within the meaning of S. 353 and was sufficient.

That it being clear that the act of the Vice-chairman was done with the express consent of the Chairman subsequently obtained, the case was covered by the proviso to S. 45. Chairman of Hughly-Chinsura Municipality v. Krista Lal Mullick, 20 C.W.N. 824 = 24 C.L.J. 57.

But this is not the only penalty to which a tenant exposes himself if he removes the crop of a field which he holds under the baidi system. The object of S. 71, sub-S. The coolies were, in fact, taken to Assam to work in the labour districts. In one case a cooly was stopped at Goalando, in others, they were found in the labour districts and sent back to their own country. The petitioners were convicted under S. 161 of the Assam Labour and Emigration Act, 1901. Held, that the conviction could not be maintained and must be set aside, as the above said section would not be applicable to the present case as the coolies did not leave Sambalpur with the object of going to a labouring district and labouring there.

"Purpose" means "the object to be attained or to be kept in view," and "emigration" to be emigration within the meaning of the Act must be emigration with the idea that "the object to be attained or kept in view" by the emigrant is arrival in a labour district and labouring there. *Manik Ram Ahir v. The accused, who were peons and mill hands, on a hot afternoon, betook themselves to the cool shades of a Masjid, where they amused themselves by playing cards for insignificant stakes. Held, that the sentence passed was altogether out of proportion to the criminality of the acts

6.—U.P. Acts:Act I of 1900 (U.P. Municipalities).

(1) Ss. 87, 128—Pump, erection of—Proceedings under S. 87 not legal.

Where a site is a public way or street, no private individual can erect a pump upon it for his own or even for public purposes without permission of the Municipal authority.

6.—U.P. Acts—(Continued).Act I of 1900 (U.P. Municipalities)—(Old.).

But a person so erecting without authority cannot be charged or convicted or fined under S. 87 (5) of the Municipalities Act, I of 1900, read with S. 147 of that Act. That section clearly deals with new buildings of the nature of dwelling houses, sheds or other constructions intended for residence or occupation and intended to be erected by a person either upon his own land or upon some land in respect of which he has a right to set up such erection. It follows, therefore, that proceedings against a person who erects a pump in a public street brought under the above section are wholly misconceived.

There are various ways in which the mischief complained of in this case may be dealt with. The Municipality under S. 128 of the Municipalities Act can make rules for the control and management of the streets vested in it under S. 55, and anybody who erected a pump or refused to remove a pump which is maintained in breach of one or other of such rules would be liable to penalty under S. 147.

Any member of the public who either resides there or uses the street, could bring an action in a Civil Court for the removal of the pump by saying that his user of the public way as a member of the public was prejudiced by such pump. Jagannath v. Emperor, 17 Cr. L.J. 360 = 35 Ind. Cas. 526.

Held, that the order of the Magistrate was bad as it contravened the provisions of S. 153 of the Municipal Act and was passed without sufficient inquiry.

This section does not authorize a Magistrate to order the occupant to vacate the house but to direct him to discontinue the objectionable use of it.

Act I of 1914 (Punjab Excise).

- (1) Sentence—Excise cases.

In awarding sentences in excise cases, Court should have in view the consideration which is of very great importance that illicit distillation results in not only a loss of excise revenue, but also in drunkenness and crime. In view of the demoralising influence of a sojourn in jail on the character of a person who in other respects is law-abiding, a heavy sentence of fine will be preferable to a sentence of imprisonment, in most cases of a first conviction for infraction of an excise law. The imposition of petty fines will serve no good purpose, but will rather arouse the gambling instinct.

Under the peculiar circumstances of the case where the offender who was an old man about 70 years of age kept the vat of lahan not for his own use, but on behalf of another, the Chief Court on revision further reduced the sentence, passed on him on appeal under S. 91 (1) (c) of Act I of 1914, of three months' simple imprisonment and Rs. 100 fine, to the imprisonment

(1) Corroboration to be material and direct—Preparation to commit dacoity—Evidence of preaching sedition irrelevant—Ss. 399 and 402, Penal Code—S. 114, cl. (b), Evidence Act.

Held, that there should be direct and material corroboration of an approver's statement. So where the charge is that he and his companions made preparation to commit dacoity and actually assembled together at various places for that purpose, the evidence that they preached sedition and excited the populace to mutiny does in no way corroborate his statement, though their doing so was also illegal.

Held, also, that the evidence tending to show that the co-accused or some of them were seen in the company of the approver at or in the vicinity of the places at which he says dacoities were to be committed, is not sufficient corroboration in support of his statement. *Waryam Singh v. Companies Act (1882).

(1) Ss. 48, 50—Complaint by clerk authorised by Registrar of Joint Stock Companies—Validity—Accused acting as director or manager—Cannot set up plea that he was not properly qualified—Plea that accused did not become director or manager until after penalty first accrued—Validity—Duty of company under S. 48.

Companies Act (1882)—(Concluded).

Under the Punjab Government Notification No. 3, dated 23-2-1910, published in the Punjab Gazette, dated 26-2-1910, the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies is empowered to authorise any person to institute complaints of offences under the Companies Act, and the complaint filed in this case by a clerk duly authorized by the Registrar is valid (a).

A person who acts as a director or manager of a company cannot set up, in answer to a penalty under S. 50 of this Act (corresponding to S. 27 of the English Act) that he was not legally a director or manager. He becomes a director de son tort, and cannot protect himself from the liability cast upon a director by the Act by saying: "I am not a director de jure" (b).

It is the bounden duty of the company and of its directors and managers to forward to the Registrar the summary and list specified in S. 48 of the Act, and this obligation does not come to an end on the date on which, by default on the part of the company, directors and managers, the penalty begins to accrue.

It is immaterial that some or all of those persons were not legally qualified to act as directors or managers, or that they did not in fact become directors or managers until after the date when the penalty first accrued.

But a person who became, or acted as, a director or manager after such date could not be punished for the period of the default prior to his becoming a director or manager or acting as such. Tota Ram v. The Crown, 14 P.R. 1916 (Cr.) = 38 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.) = 17 Cr. L.J. 242 = 34 Ind. Cas. 962.

RATTIGAN, J.

(2) S. 50. See No. 1, supra.

(3) S. 74—Balance sheet—Failure to file the same in time before Registrar of Joint Stock Companies—Managing agents—Directors—Liability for penalty.

The mere fact that a Director of a Company depended for the preparation of the balance sheet upon the managing agents or another director of the Company cannot absolve him from liability for the penalty laid down in S. 74 of the Companies Act (1882) for not filing a balance sheet in time with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies.

The managing agents of a Company are 'managers' of the Company within the meaning and for the purposes of S. 74 of the Companies Act.

There is no reason why the expression 'manager' as used in S. 74 should not include every person or body of persons who conducts or conduct the affairs of the Company and to whom its management, subject to the control of the Company, is entrusted.

The fact that one of the directors had been convicted in his personal capacity of the offence is no reason why he should not be convicted of the same offence, also in his capacity as a partner of the firm which acted as the managing agents of the Company. Tota Ram v. The Crown, 18 P.R. 1916 (Cr.) = 143 P.L.R. 1916 = 17 Cr. L.J. 806 = 35 Ind. Cas. 482,

It is most unsafe to convict an accused person upon a retracted confession unless there is corroboration of the confession by other evidence. Construction of Acts.

(1) Fiscal enactment—Interpretation of statute—Bicycle propelled by auto-wheel—Whether liable to be taxed.

Enactments which render the public liable to pay taxes must be strictly construed, or, in other words, unless the language under which they are sought to be charged is perfectly clear, the charging authorities are not entitled to assess a charge, inasmuch as the public have a right to know what exactly are the charges imposed upon them.

Hence, an ordinary bicycle which is propelled by auto-wheel, a mechanical contrivance which may be attached to or detached from the bicycle, is not liable to be taxed as a motor car or motor bicycle. Emperor v. George Banerji, 14 A.L.J. 850=36 Ind. Cas. 877.

(2) Where the provisions of a statute are doubtful the Courts must lean against the construction which imposes a burden on the subject. A law which interferes with common law rights or imposes fresh obligations must not operate through implication. It should be expressed in clear and unambiguous language. Mitho v. The Crown, 10 S.L.R. 9=17 Cr. L.J. 364=35 Ind. Cas. 668.

An enquiry on an application under S. 100, Crim. Pro. Code, 1898, to issue a search warrant is a judicial inquiry and proceedings preliminary to the issue of a search warrant under S. 100 are judicial proceedings within the meaning of S. 4 (m), Crim. Pro. Code.

In the course of such judicial proceedings, the Magistrate would be empowered to examine persons on oath and such persons would be bound to take oath under S. 5 of the Oaths Act and under S. 14 of that Act would be bound to state the truth.

A Magistrate holding an enquiry under S. 100, Crim. Pro. Code, is a Court within the meaning of S. 4 of the Oaths Act and is competent to grant under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, sanction for the prosecution of a person who

(3) Ss. 4 (h), 195 (1) (b), 476—Penal Code, S. 211—False information to the Police—Sanction to prosecute, legality of.

No sanction to prosecute is necessary under S. 195 (1) (b) of the Code of Criminal Procedure when a false charge has been made to the Police and has not been followed by a judicial investigation thereof by a Court.

Where, therefore, the complainant to the Police never applied to the Magistrate for investigation, nor did he impugn the correctness of the Police Report as to the falsity of the complaint, nor did he pray that the person accused by him might be brought to trial, nor was he examined on oath by the Magistrate:

Held, that the order for sanction to prosecute him was bad, if it was deemed to have been granted under S. 195 of the Code, inasmuch as there was no 'complaint' within the meaning of S. 4 (h) of the Code, and the offence could not be said to have been committed in a proceeding in a Court.

Held further, that the order for prosecution could not also be sustained under S. 476 of the Code, as that section must be read with S. 195 and is consequently restricted by the limitations contained in cl. (b) of the section, the alleged offence under S. 211, Penal Code, was committed neither in Court nor brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding. *Tayab Ullah v. (7) Ss. 30, 28, 29, 436, 437—Case triable exclusively by Court of Sessions—Trial by Magistrate with special powers under S. 30 and discharge of accused—Revision by District Magistrate—District Magistrate holding that order of discharge is wrong—Duty to order commitment—Power to order further enquiry by another Magistrate not invested with powers under S. 30.

Where a subordinate Magistrate of the First Class, invested with powers under S. 30 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, makes an order of discharge, in a case, which, under Sch. II of that Code read with S. 28 or 29 thereof, is triable exclusively by the Court of Session, such order is open to revision by the District Magistrate under Ss. 436 and 437 of the same Code (a).

Where a District Magistrate considers that a case triable only by a Court of Session, which has been tried by a specially empowered Magistrate and has ended in a discharge, has been incompletely or imperfectly tried, he may order further inquiry by the same Magistrate or by another Magistrate equally empowered, but not by a Magistrate without special powers and, therefore, in a sense, a Court of inferior jurisdiction to the Court which ordered the discharge.

But where in such a case the whole of the prosecution evidence has been taken and there is no material defect of procedure, and the Magistrate discharges, because, in his opinion, the evidence is insufficient or incredible, then, if the District Magistrate comes to a different conclusion upon the evidence, his proper course is to make an order of commitment under S. 436 of the Crim. Pro. Code (b). Yado v. Emperor, 12 N.L.R. 94=17 Cr. L.J. 245=34 Ind. Cas. 965.

(8) Ss. 30 and 346—Power of District Magistrate to commit accused for trial on evidence recorded by subordinate Magistrate.

In this case two accused were charged for murder and abetment thereof respectively, but after examining them upon the evidence for the prosecution the subordinate Magistrate thought the principal offence, if any, committed, to be the lesser form of culpable homicide, and therefore acted under S. 346, Crim. Pro. Code, with a view to disposal of the case, by the District Magistrate, in the exercise of his power under S. 30. The District Magistrate, however, charged the accused with murder and abetment of murder respectively, explained, the charges to them and ordered their commitment.

Held, that the commitment ordered by the District Magistrate in this case was not illegal merely because after receiving the record and report submitted under S. 346, Crim. Pro. Code, by the first class subordinate Magistrate, the District Magistrate committed the accused for trial without hearing the evidence de novo. Emperor v. Ramprasad, 12 N.L.R. 146=36 Ind. An application under S. 491, Crim. Pro. Code, is to be made to the High Court in its Ordinary Original Criminal Jurisdiction.

The petitioner who was the managing agent of a certain Provident Company of Calcutta was arrested by the Calcutta Police under S. 54, Crim. Pro. Code, on receipt of a letter written by an Inspector of Police in a certain district in the Bombay Presidency to the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, in which it was stated that, on enquiries into complaints against the Company and their local agent in Bombay, it appeared, there being prima facie evidence to that effect, that the managing agent and the local agent committed offences under Ss. 409, 420, I.P.C. The letter contained a request to cause the arrest of the petitioner and was forwarded by the District Magistrate with a note that the petitioner might be arrested under S. 54, Crim. Pro. Code, and sent to the Magistrate, 1st class, of the District, to be tried by him. It was admitted that the officer effecting the arrest in Calcutta relied solely on the aforesaid letter and had no personal knowledge of the facts of the case:

Held—That the arrest of the petitioner under S. 51, Crim. Pro. Code, was not proper.

That S. 54, Crim. Pro. Code, gives wide powers to a police-officer to make an arrest without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant only in certain circumstances limited by the provisions contained in the section, and it is necessary in exercising such large powers to be cautious and circumspect.

The section gives a police-officer personal authority and involves personal responsibility, and the "reasonable suspicion" and "credible information" must be based upon definite facts which the police-officer must consider for himself before he acts under the section. He cannot delegate his discretion or take shelter under the belief or judgment of another police-officer.

In the circumstances of the case the High Court under S. 491, Crim. Pro. Code, directed the release of the petitioner. In the matter of Charu Ch. Majumdar, 20 C.W.N. 1233.

(17) Ss. 87, (2) (a), (b), (3), 88, 89, 469 and 537—Attachment and sale of property of an absconding offender—Application for return of property or its sale-proceeds made after two years barred—Remedy if attachment, &c., illegal.

Held, that:—

1. An application under S. 89 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, not made within two years from the date of the attachment is not entertainable. If the procedure laid down in Ss. 87 and 88 has not been complied with, the irregularities, &c., committed under these sections are covered by S. 537 of the Code.

But in case the provisions of S. 537 are inapplicable, the attachment is not a valid one and the person aggrieved has consequently no remedy under S. 89, inasmuch as this section can help him only when the attachment is a valid one (a).

2. If an application can be under S. 89, the applicant must prove that he had not absconded within the period laid down therein (b).

3. An endorsement or statement to be made in writing by the Court validating the proclamation as is contemplated under S. 87 (3), Crim. Pro. Code, is an important provision of law which should invariably be made use of by the Magistrate when acting under the said S. 87.

To legalize issue of the proclamation the Court is bound to find that the warrant cannot be executed and, where such is the case, and the Court decides to issue a proclamation under S. 87, the proclamation must be in writing and should require the absconding person to appear at a specified place and at a specified time not less than 30 days from the date of publishing the proclamation, and the manner in which such publication is to be made is imperatively laid down in S. 87 and if the provisions of this section are not strictly complied with the publication is irregular and illegal. The most important part of the publication is the publishing of the proclamation in the village and it is from the date of the publication that 30 days should be counted. *Mala Singh v. The power of issuing a search warrant is not intended to be used for the purpose of giving complainants an opportunity of fishing for evidence. The warrant is intended for use in respect of definite documents believed to exist which must be clearly specified in the warrant, and before issuing it the Magistrate must have before him some information or evidence that the documents are necessary or desirable for the purposes of the inquiry before him.

To issue a search warrant for the search of a man's house and for the production of all papers and books in it for the purpose of an inquiry as to whether he had used or sold articles with a counterfeit trade mark, is a gross perversion of the law. *V.S.M. (25) S. 96 (1)—Search warrant directing seizure of all goods of certain description, legality of—Duty of Magistrate to state reasons—Stay of criminal proceedings by Sessions Judge.

Held, that a Magistrate has no authority for issuing, on the application of the complainant, a search warrant ordering the summary seizure of all the goods of a certain description in the possession of the accused.

Where, therefore, in the course of a trial under Ss. 482, 483 and 486 of the Penal Code, the Magistrate issued, on the application of the complainant, a search warrant directing seizure of all articles bearing the complainant's trademark and remarked, without giving reasons, that the accused would not produce these things if he were required by summons to do so :

Held, that, inasmuch as the Magistrate gave no reasons whatever for believing that the accused would not produce the articles in question if a summons were issued to him for their production, the requirements of sub-S (1), S. 76, Crim. Pro. Code, were not complied with and consequently the order of the Magistrate issuing the search warrant was illegal and improper.

Held, also, that, under the circumstances of this case, the order of the Sessions Judge directing stay of criminal proceedings pending decision of the civil suit is a proper one. Piyare Lal v. Thakar Dat Sharma, 12 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.) = 32 Ind. Cas. 652 = 17 Cr. L.J. 60.

A Magistrate dealing with the proceedings under S. 107 of the Crim. Pro. Code, who possesses knowledge of certain facts which he obtains from sources outside the record, should not base his judgment upon those facts, but he should base it upon evidence relevant to the case. The law requires that, to justify an order under the said section, there must be a finding that the persons from whom the security is demanded are likely to commit a breach of the peace or to disturb the public tranquillity or to do any wrongful act that may occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity. *Mathura Sahu v. disturbance resulting in a criminal trial, and several minor disturbances.

In this case a master was putting forward a claim which was in itself likely to be fought over by armed forces. It was found that in spite of the fact the servant had on a previous occasion brought about a breach of the peace the master had continued to employ him and continued to send him to the railway station armed with a lathi; considering these facts, held that S. 107 of the Crim. Pro. Code was applicable to a man in his position. He is in fact asserting a claim and making preparations for the enforcement of that claim through a servant who is continuously armed.

The fact that the master does not himself go to the railway station, but always remains in his house is no bar to the application of S. 107 of the Code as against him. Balalal Mañton v. King-Emperor, 1 Pat. L.J. 361.

In doing so the Magistrate held a joint trial of the two parties, and received evidence for and against them.

Held, reversing the order of the Magistrate, that the joint trial of the two parties hostile to each other was not justified by S. 117 (4) of the Code.

Although to constitute an offence under S. 153-A, I.P.C., there must clearly be an intention to promote feelings of enmity or hatred, different considerations arise with regard to the provisions of S. 109 (b), Crim. A District Magistrate should not dispose of an appeal against an order requiring a person to furnish security otherwise than by a judgment showing on the face of it that he has applied his mind to a consideration of the evidence on the record, of the pleas raised by an appellant, both in the Court below and in his memorandum of appeal. Lal Behari v. to—Locus penitentis—Evidence of general repute.

Presidency Magistrates are not absolved from the ordinary rules of evidence in taking proof of previous convictions. Whenever it is required to prove a previous conviction against a man, whether it be for the purpose of enhancement of punishment under S. 75, I.P.O., or in proceedings under Chap. VIII of the Crim. Pro. Code, such previous conviction must be proved strictly and in accordance with law. Unless they are so proved, no Court, whether it be that of a Presidency Magistrate or not, can properly take such previous convictions into consideration against an accused person.

Before the Magistrate previous convictions of one of the accused were sought to be proved by two witnesses one of whom was a certified expert in finger prints and who produced a register from the Central Bureau containing the thumb impression of the accused and his descriptive roll and a list of his previous convictions. The other witness was a clerk in the prison at Bombay who produced an extract from the jail register showing previous convictions of a man who was certified therein to be the same man as the accused, and certified copies of previous convictions of the same man. This witness was asked by the Magistrate to examine the accused and see if he bore the marks attributed to the convict in Bombay and he expressed his opinion that he did.

Held—That previous convictions were not properly proved.

Accused persons should be given some chance of reforming their characters and they should not be proceeded against under S. 110, Crim. Pro. Code, soon after they have emerged from jail.

Nature of evidence sufficient to prove habitual commission of offence discussed. The King-Emperor v. Sheikh Abdul, 20 C.W.N. 725=17 Cr. L.J. 185=43 C. 1198=33 Ind. Cas. 825.

Per Walsh, J.—In questions arising under S. 110 and S. 107, the moment it is shown, prima facie that there is something which the Courts below have done either in excess of their powers, or by a too summary exercise of their powers, or by misapplying the rules of evidence or by not giving due effect to the evidence for the defence, an application for revision should be admitted.

The High Court will not generally interfere on the merits except in very exceptional cases, because it is idle to suggest that the High Court sitting with only the paper evidence before it, and provided the lower Court has addressed itself to the right question and tried the case according to law, should presume to differ on questions which are purely questions of fact and questions depending on the demeanour of witnesses.

The High Court would be justified in interfering in revision if it is shown that the lower Court, that is the second Court, in hearing the appeal has not taken the trouble to re-hear the case in appeal.

The judgment of the lower appellate Court should show that it has really and not nominally gone through the record. “It is not a question of the length of the judgment but of its matter.” It is not necessary for the lower appellate Court to set out over again in detail all the points in the evidence and the reasons, provided that it is clear and the Court has shown by its judgment that it has taken the trouble to re-hear the case. *Gayani v. A proceeding under S. 133, Crim. Pro. Code, is in the first instance entirely ex parte, and the report or the other information whereupon the Magistrate has taken action before making the conditional order is no evidence against the opposite party. It is consequently desirable that reasonable opportunity should be given to the opposite party to show cause as contemplated by S. 135, cl. (b), and to adduce evidence as prescribed by S. 137 (1).

An order under S. 133 cannot even by consent of parties be based upon information gathered at a local enquiry.

When in a proceeding under S. 133, instituted against a number of persons, it is alleged that various unlawful obstructions have been caused upon a public way, it is essential that the order should state accurately, with regard to each person, the specific obstruction made by him, which he is required to remove, unless it is alleged that all the persons are jointly responsible for all the obstructions mentioned. *Raimohan Karmakar v. A servant of the first party filed a petition before the Sub-divisional Magistrate complaining that the second party were about to construct a drain and if the first party opposed them there was a likelihood of a breach of the peace, whereupon the Magistrate without taking any evidence issued an injunction under S. 144, Crim. Pro. Code, against the second party. On the next day, on the complaint of the same man, the Magistrate summoned the second party under S. 188, I.P.C. Subsequently he transferred the case to a Magistrate with second class powers and again withdrew it from his file and sent it to the Additional District Magistrate.

Held—That the proceedings were wholly irregular.

That, the order under S. 144, Crim. Pro. Code, should never have been made.

That in summoning the second party under S. 188, I.P.C., the Sub-divisional Magistrate was taking cognizance of the offence under S. 188, I.P.C., which he had no power to do. Either action by the Magistrate under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, or an application for sanction under S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, was necessary. (85) S. 145—Order made without regard to provisions of the section and without recording evidence—Ultra vires and void.

In this case the Magistrate in acting under the provisions conferred on him by S. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, made no order in writing stating the grounds of his being satisfied that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace existed concerning the property in dispute and requiring the parties concerned in such dispute to attend his Court and to put in written statements of their respective claims as respects the facts of actual possession of such property. The Magistrate further omitted to make the order required by sub-S. (1) of S. 145, and no copy of the order was served upon any of the parties, nor was a written copy published as required by sub-S. (9) of the section. When the petitioners appeared in the Magistrate's Court they made an application to him to summon four witnesses for them and to take their evidence; the necessary summonses were issued, but the evidence of the witnesses was not taken by the Magistrate at all.

Held, that the Magistrate had wholly disregarded the positive provisions of S. 145, and that the order of the Magistrate under the section was ultra vires and must be set aside. Tara Chand v. Behari Lal, 22 P.R. 1916 (Cr.). =36 Ind. Cas. 868.

The words 'parties concerned in such dispute,' occurring in S. 145 of the Crim. Pro. Code include persons who are interested in or claim a right to the property in dispute (a).

A servant of a landlord cannot be treated as in actual possession either in his own right or on behalf of another and the possession in such a case is with the person who pays him his wages, and consequently S. 145 of the Code can have no application to such servants in the absence of their masters.

In the case of proceedings under S. 145 of the Crim. Pro. Code, if the Police report shows that there is a dispute relating to land likely to lead to a breach of the peace and the Magistrate believes it and issues the preliminary order basing his information on such report only, he acquires sufficient jurisdiction to act under the section and it is not necessary for him to set out any further reasons for his being satisfied as to the existence of such a dispute. His order under the section is final and the High Court will not scrutinise the said reasons (a).

Where the dispute between the parties was as to possession of the land in question on the date of the preliminary order and the Magistrate has recorded a finding in general terms that possession was with one of the contesting parties, it follows that the possession so found refers to the date of the said preliminary order and the Magistrate's proceedings cannot be challenged for an error of jurisdiction on that ground.

An order under the section passed by a competent Magistrate should not be lightly interfered with by the High Court as its object is to preserve peace and as such orders are exempted from the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court by S. 435 (3) of the Code and as the aggrieved party has his remedy by civil suit. *Krishnappa Naidu v. S. 145 (4) requires an examination of the witnesses of the parties and this requirement is not satisfied by the examination of a person who is not a witness of either of them. Fateh Sher Khan v. The Crown, 4 P.R. 1916 (Cr.)=23 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.)=17 Cr. L.J. 129=33 Ind. Cas. 305.

When the mind of the Magistrate is not applied to finding as to who was in possession on the date of the preliminary order, the proceedings must be taken to have been passed without jurisdiction (a).

Failure to receive the evidence tendered in proceedings under S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, would amount to the declining of jurisdiction by the Magistrate (b).

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—The two grounds which justify proceedings under S. 145 are apprehension of a breach of the peace and a threat to disturb peaceful possession. Any violation of the law which deprives the party from placing the materials to enable the Magistrate to arrive at a conclusion on these two vital points, must be regarded as affecting jurisdiction.

The High Court has jurisdiction to consider the proceedings of the Magistrate where it is satisfied he has acted illegally or has committed serious irregularities in the procedure. Marudanayakam Pillai v. Mohammad Rowthen, 17 Cr. L.J. 217=34 Ind. Cas. 329.

(101) S. 145 (4) (1)—Addition of parties—Wrongful and forcible dispossession—Digging tank with sanction of Municipality—Party if must have had notice of the proceeding to be concerned in the dispute.

Where, in a proceeding under S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, it appeared that one of the parties, within two months from the commencement of the proceeding, obtained sanction from the Municipality and proceeded to dig a tank on the land in dispute to the exclusion of another party who was then found to be in possession:

Held—That it was forcible and wrongful dispossession within the meaning of sub-S. 4, cl. (1) of S. 145.

Held further—That under the Full Bench Ruling in 30 C. 155=6 C.W.N. 737, a party may be added provided he was concerned originally in the dispute which was the foundation of the proceeding, and there is no necessity for a fresh proceeding. Further if a party is added before the inquiry begins, there is no irregularity.

That whether or not there was then an apprehension of a breach of the peace is a matter eminently for the exercise of the Magistrate's discretion.

For a person to be concerned in a dispute relating to land, it is not necessary to be actually present near the land or to have had notice of the proceeding when started. Manmotha Nath Chatterjee v. Ganga Gir Gossain, 30 C.W.N. 978=17 Cr. L.J. 449=36 Ind. Cas. 129.

With reference to disputes regarding the right of the management of the temple and the performance of pooja therein, S. 147, Crim. Pro. Code does not apply. That section deals simply with disputes regarding "the use of any land or water." The words "land or water" are used in their ordinary significance without the extended meaning assigned to them as used in S. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, by cl. 2 of that section.

The words "use of any land or water" will not cover a right to perform pooja in a temple; nor would they cover the right of management of the temple itself (a).

A dispute as to the management of the temple may be dealt with under S. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

If only the right to perform pooja to a particular idol in the temple were in dispute, the matter might be different.

Code, the Magistrate made the final order in favour of one party, finding that, as there could not be any act of peaceful possession within two months of the date of the proceeding owing to the land being under water, the possession of the current year was to be presumed in favour of the man who was in possession during the previous years;

Held—That the order was in direct contravention of S. 145, cl. (4), and the Magistrate should have passed an order under S. 146, Crim. Pro. Code.

The High Court substituted an order under S. 146, Crim. Pro. Code, for the order under S. 145, made by the Magistrate. Satyendra Nath Banerjee v. Krishnadhan Adhikary, 20 C.W.N. 1014.

Code—Sentimental caste objections whether to be countenanced by Magistrates—Powers of High Court under Charter Act—How to be construed.*

Per Phillips, J.—Proceedings under Ch. XII, Crim. Pro. Code, are of a special nature and are such that the Magistracy may well be allowed greater liberty in carrying out those provisions than they are allowed in trying ordinary crime. The provisions of the chapter are concerned with disputes relating to immovable property which are likely to cause a breach of the peace, and give Magistrates power to deal with matters of a quasi-civil nature, because upon the Magistracy and Police is thrown the burden of maintaining the public peace. In this view it is undesirable that such orders should be interfered with in revision, unless they are made without jurisdiction or are obviously unreasonable or unjust (a).

S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code, does not give the High Court power to call for a finding when exercising its powers of revision, although it does give power to call for additional evidence upon which the High Court can itself come to a conclusion. An order of the High Court, based solely upon the finding submitted by the lower Court, is not correct. The additional evidence must be weighed by the Court of Revision and its decision based upon a consideration thereof.

The powers of the High Court under the Charter Act should not be construed in a limited manner.

There is nothing in the language of S. 147, Crim. Pro. Code, which necessarily debars a Magistrate from passing an order with reference to a public street.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—Sentimental caste objections should not be countenanced by Magistrates acting under S. 147 of the Crim. Pro. Code, though of course they can, in emergent cases, pass temporary orders, under S. 144 (even if such orders encourage caste bigotry) when the preservation of the public peace is required. Even in such cases, the temporary nature of the order cannot be attempted to be changed by continued renewals (b).

Under S. 15 of the Charter Act, the High Court's power of revision can be exercised to the like extent (at least) to which the powers of revision can be exercised in a case coming under S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code. S. 439 gives the High Court power to exercise all the powers of a Court of Appeal under S. 428. S. 428 allows fresh evidence to be taken by the appellate Court or by a Magistrate under the orders of the appellate Court, but the appellate Court has to come to its own conclusion upon the evidence so taken, and there is no provision in S. 428 allowing the appellate Court to accept the finding of the Magistrate come to on such evidence.

The Magistrate has jurisdiction under S. 147, Crim. Pro. Code, to pass orders even against the right of passage through a public street. But he ought not to pass such a prohibitory order unless it is clearly proved that there is a right by custom or by grant or by a Statute in one section of the public to prevent another section of the public from using the public street on particular occasions or for particular purposes, when such use is ordinarily and prima facie lawful (c). *Sudalaimuthu Chettiar v. In this case the Deputy Magistrate took cognisance of a dispute as to a right of way falling under S. 147 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Under S. 148 he directed a Subordinate Magistrate to hold a local enquiry. That Magistrate made the enquiry and submitted his report and, as provided by the section, it was read as evidence in the case.

Held, that the Deputy Magistrate acted with jurisdiction because he acted on the Sub-Magistrate's report and decided the case.

(188) S. 195, scope of—Sanction to prosecute, grant of—Principles governing grant of sanction—Reasonable chance of conviction, how far necessary—Non desirability of prosecution on grounds of public justice—Whether a good ground for refusal of sanction—Application by a private party—Considerations in granting sanction—Statement prima facie untrue—If can be explained by other evidence—Discretion of sanctioning Court, whether absolute and unqualified—Failure of sanctioning Court to give reasons—Correctness of the order—Duty of the appellate Court to be satisfied as to.

Per Ayling, J.—S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, neither lays down nor suggests any principles for the guidance of the Court in granting or refusing sanctions, but the Court should have regard to the rule of prudence that an individual is not permitted to use the penal law merely to satisfy his own private ends or private spite.

In an application for the revocation of a sanction granted by a lower Court, the Superior Court is bound to see whether the order granting sanction is correct, and where the lower Court fails to give any reasons for its order, to consider whether the order is one which the Superior Court itself would have passed under the circumstances.

The following are some of the rules of prudence which a Court should follow in granting or refusing sanction.

1. A Court before granting sanction should consider whether the case is one in which a prosecution could be instituted with a fair chance of success (a).

2. A Court may properly refuse sanction where it considers that a prosecution is not desirable in the public interest even though the prosecution may possess every chance of success, e.g., where the moral turpitude is very slight, or the offender may have already suffered sufficiently or other considerations may intervene.

3. Where the sanction is applied for by a private party it is for the Court to test its desirability by the rules of prudence.

Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—Although when sitting in appeal, the High Court may be guided very largely in matters of discretion by what influenced the Court below, the hands of the High Court are not tied.

The following principles should guide the Court which is called upon to give sanction to prosecute under S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code.

1. The paramount principle is to see that the person to be charged before a Magistrate is not subjected to unnecessary expense and humiliation.

2. (a) It is not what on the face of a document or of a statement appears to be untrue that should guide a Court in granting sanction.

(b) If further materials are placed before it which would enable it to conclude that the prima facie impression is unfounded, it is the duty of the Court to examine the materials fully and satisfy itself whether in the interests of justice prosecution is desirable.

3. Every circumstance telling in favour of the person against whom sanction is asked for, should be weighed before the Court makes up its mind although in the order granting the sanction, care should be taken to see that conclusions are not stated which may prejudice the accused.

4. It is the duty of the authority giving sanction or upholding it to go into the merits of the application for sanction with reference to the evidence before it and unless there is sufficient prima facie evidence and a reasonable probability of conviction, the Court will not be exercising its discretion properly in granting or upholding the same (b).

5. It is also the duty of the Court to see if there are good grounds for thinking that a prosecution is necessary in the interests of justice (c).

The view of Napier, J., in 17 M.L.T. 15, dissented from.

6. The discretion vested in a Court in giving sanction is not an absolute and unqualified discretion but is a discretion given in the interests of justice and in the interests of persons to whom protection is intended to be given under S. 195 of the Crim. Pro. Code, and unless the discretion is exercised to advance justice and extend protection, the Court will not be exercising its discretion properly.

7. The object of S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, is to protect parties resorting to Courts and witnesses, against vexatious or frivolous prosecutions for their resorting to Courts and giving evidence therein and such protection is afforded by prescribing the necessity of a preliminary sanction by the Court before which the offence is alleged to have been committed before a prosecution is launched, and by giving a right of appeal to the Court to which the Court giving sanction is subordinate (d).

8. Before withdrawing the protection and sanctioning prosecution the presiding functionary should be satisfied that the privilege has been forfeited, that there has been such a conduct on the part of the person as renders him reasonably liable to conviction and that the interests of justice demand his prosecution.

Where a respondent in a first appeal in the High Court swore to a counter-affidavit in a petition for the stay of execution of his decree, and stated therein that he owned 1000 acres of land and a house in Palni and the appellant applied for sanction to prosecute him on the ground that these statements were false as the lands had been sold to another and the house was held by the respondent on behalf of a trust, and it was found that the sale of the lands referred to, had been consistently averred by him to be benami in the counter-affidavit in the sanction petition as well as in some proceedings in the Madura Sub-Court to which the appellant and the alleged vendee of the lands were parties, and was not disputed by the latter, and there was nothing in the title deed of the house to indicate that the same was held by the respondent as trustee, but, on the contrary it appeared to be a sale-deed absolutely in favour of the respondent personally, and a learned Judge of the High Court granted sanction to prosecute him for perjury.

Held, that on the facts there was no probability of a conviction and the sanction granted must be revoked. Palanappa Chettiar v. Ramasami Chettiar, 4 L.W. 615 = 20 M.L.J. 557 = 32 M.L.J. 54.

The petitioner in this case preferred a complaint against the respondent and his wife, charging them with criminal breach of trust in respect of some jewels entrusted to them at a marriage which took place in his house. The Magistrate suspected that the case was false and directed the Police Inspector to hold a preliminary investigation under S. 202 of the Crim. Pro. Code. The Inspector reported that the case was entirely false. Respondent thereupon applied for sanction to prosecute petitioner for preferring a false complaint, an offence punishable under S. 211 of the Indian Penal Code, and the Magistrate granted the sanction. The District Magistrate, on application made to revoke it, refused to do so. A further application was thereupon made to the Sessions Judge. He dismissed it, regarding it as an appeal presented out of time. Held that the Sessions Judge was wrong in supposing that an application to a superior Court to revoke a sanction granted by an inferior Court is an appeal coming within the purview of Art. 154 of Sch. II to the Limitation Act.

Held per White, C.J.—That on the materials before the High Court they were not prepared to say there was legal evidence before the second-class Magistrate on which the order granting sanction should be made; and that consequently the sanction should be set aside. Where a matter is brought before a Sessions Judge under cl. (6), S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, he has discretion to give or to refuse the sanction which the Magistrate had refused to grant. If he thinks that the matter is one which called for further investigation before a sanction was rather given or refused, he is competent to hold a very thorough and searching enquiry in the course of which he may examine witnesses and receive evidence.

S. 195 of the Crim. Pro. Code does not in itself lay down anything as to the materials upon which a Court is to proceed when considering an application for sanction. It does not say that the Court is bound to proceed on such materials as may be on the record at the time when sanction was applied for, neither on the other hand does it in terms empower the Court to hold an enquiry before granting or refusing sanction: at the same time it does invest the Court with a discretion to proceed either by way of sanction or by way of complaint, and S. 476 of the same Code expressly empowers a Court to make any preliminary enquiry that it may consider necessary before taking action under that section. If the Session Judge thinks fit to record a memorandum to the effect that under the circumstances, he was not prepared either to grant the sanction asked for or to confirm the Magistrate's order refusing sanction without first making some enquiry, with a view to satisfying himself whether the matter was not one in which it was more expedient for him to proceed by way of complaint under S. 476, Crim. It appeared that, by a notification in the Fort St. George Gazette, the office of the Deputy Tahsildar at B was abolished (i.e.), there was no Sub-Magistrate at B as a result of the notification. About two years after the said Court was restored with some slight modification, that is to say, its territorial jurisdiction was somewhat curtailed. The old Sub-Magistrate's Court ceased to exist, and it was revived two years afterwards. Held that it could not be said that there was any such continuity as would enable the High Court to hold that the Court that was re-constituted was the same as the one that ceased to exist. In re Appu Atla, 16 Cr. (152) Ss. 195 (c), sub cl. (3), 437—Abetment of forgery—Sanction of the Civil Court to prosecute—Document produced by party in the Civil Court—Whether prosecution without sanction legal.

The provisions of S. 195 (c) apply to the case of any person who, at the time when a Criminal Court is invited to take cognizance of the matter, can rightly be described “as a party to any proceeding in any Court” in which the document has been produced or given in evidence, that is to say, who is or has been a party to such a proceeding (a).

C purported to convey certain immovable property to H by a sale deed. On the same day H purported to mortgage the same property to B. C and B filed suits in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. B contended that the sale-deed was a forgery and that he had been defrauded. C's contention also was similar. The Court granted appropriate relief to B as well as to C holding the sale-deed to be forged and B as having been defrauded. It took proceedings under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, against H and another person who was alleged to have forged C's signature on the sale-deed. B was a witness for the prosecution. H and his co-accused were convicted. The Sessions Judge issued notice to B to show cause why he should not be prosecuted for abetment of an offence under Ss. 467 and 471 read with Ss. 109 and 114, Penal Code. In the meantime C filed a complaint against B charging him with abetment of forgery before a Magistrate who took cognizance of it. There was no sanction given by the Subordinate Judge. B applied in revision to the High Court. Held that the offence having been alleged to have been committed by B, a party to the proceeding pending before the Subordinate Judge, sanction by him was necessary before the (156) Ss. 195, 439 and 537—Sanction granted by the successor of the Munsif before whom the alleged offence was committed—Notice—Power of Chief Court—Revision.

There is no Court of a Munsif of the 1st Class as a permanent Court with a perpetual succession of Judges, and on the transfer of a Munsif from a District, the Court of the Munsif who takes over the pending work is not identical with the Court of the Munsif who has been transferred (a).

There is no Court of a Magistrate of the 1st Class as a permanent Court with a perpetual succession of Judges and therefore a Magistrate before whom an offence was committed cannot grant sanction to prosecute under S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, merely because he succeeded a Magistrate in that particular place or district (b).

S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code, gives the Chief Court full power to examine the record and to pass such orders as may be necessary, although the petitioner did not appeal in proper time as against the order granting sanction for his prosecution.

No doubt when there has been inordinate delay in moving the Chief Court in revision it would not be considered necessary or advisable to take any action under S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code, but where, as in this case, the circumstances were such that the Court considered it necessary to examine the record of the proceedings in order to ascertain how far the sanction accorded was "legal, the Chief Court may well interfere.

Held that, in cases like the present, before giving sanction to prosecute under S. 195, notice should invariably be issued to the party concerned (c).

The fact that the Judge in granting sanction acted without the jurisdiction to grant it is an illegality which would probably not be cured by S. 537 of the Crim. Pro. Code (d). Maula Bakhsh v. Lal Chand, 23 P.R. 1916 (Cr.).

Where the Chairman of a Union Panchayat was prosecuted for an offence under S. 409, Penal Code, of criminal breach of trust in respect of Union funds: Held (1) that the Chairman is a public servant not removable from his office without the sanction of the local Government, even though the power to remove has been delegated by the Government to the President of the District Board; (2) that the offence is not one which is committed by him in his capacity of public servant to necessitate the previous sanction under S. 197 of the Crim. Pro. Code; (3) that, even if that sanction were required, the document sent by the President of the Taluk Board to his subordinate clerk in the Taluk Board office directing him to take charge of the union accounts and records pertaining to the collections, to find out the actual amount collected but not remitted into the Treasury and prepare a complaint to the police, initiated by him, fulfilled the requirements of the section; and (4) that the sanction of the President of the Taluk Board was quite sufficient within the meaning of the section.

The delegation by the local Government of its power to a special officer only means that the local Government performs that act itself through the medium of a particular officer as the channel through which it is done. It is an ordinary case of qui facit per alium facit per se.

Where a Judge commits an offence from the Bench which could be committed by anybody and which entails consequences neither in the way of penalty nor anything else in the least different, because a Judge committed it, from what it would entail if committed by anybody else, sanction is not required for his prosecution under S. 197, Crim. Pro. Code.

S. 197 is intended to apply to those cases in which the offence is an offence which can be committed by a public servant only, that is, cases in which his being a public servant is a necessary element in the offence.

The sanctioning officer must in terms specify the exact charge to be brought and not leave it in general language to be inferred what the charge should be. It is a great pity that the officers who issue documents of this kind do not take the precaution to specify, in the language of the Code with which they must be a great deal more familiar, the offence for

Where the accused, a Union Chairman, while removing the obstruction to the public thoroughfare caused by the complainant leaving carts across the street, used insulting and abusive language under provocation caused by the complainant's obstructiveness to the lawful exercise of his authority.

Held that the act of the accused was covered by S. 95 of the Indian Penal Code, and did not constitute an offence under the Code.

Where the accused expresses his willingness to tender an apology to the complainant, it is unfair for the Magistrate to treat this circumstance as an indication of the accused's guilt.

It could not be said to be part of the functions of a Union Chairman to use abusive language in a public street though he would undoubtedly be acting as a public servant in removing the obstruction to the road and no sanction was therefore necessary under S. 197, Crim. A Village Munsif and Magistrate, not being a public servant not removable from his office except with the sanction of the Government, may be prosecuted of an offence of having received bribes in the exercise of his judicial functions.

Rule 23 of the rules framed by the High Court on the appellate side which provides that the judicial functionary, etc., shall certify by his signature that the vakalatnama has been duly executed means that there "shall" be such a signature in the vakalatnama or affidavit to constitute it a valid certificate of authentication.

The object of judicial functionaries such as Village Munsiffs and Village Magistrates being given powers of authentication is only for the purpose of enabling Court, before whom the vakalatnamas and affidavits are produced, to treat such authentication as prima facie evidence of the genuineness of the signatures of the alleged executors of the affidavits or vakalats; it does not, however, follow that such vakalats and affidavits become the judicial records of the Court of Village Munsiff or Magistrate acting as a judicial functionary in judicial proceedings instituted before him or that they are produced before the Village Munsiff in his capacity, as a Court of justice. *Vadakke Peediyakkal Unnan Kutty v. S. 199 of the Code of Criminal Procedure should be read thus:—"No Court shall take cognizance of an offence under S. 497 or S. 498 of the Indian Penal Code, except upon a complaint made by the husband of the woman (who had care on such woman) or, in his absence, by some person who had care of such woman on his behalf." If the wife was under the care of her husband at the time of the offence, and the husband does not want that proceedings should be instituted, it is not open to a person, whether he be the father or the brother, to institute a complaint. But where at the time of the offence, the wife was left under the care of another, the fact that the husband stands by will not prevent the temporary guardian from preferring the complaint. The words "in his absence" in the said S. 199, Crim. Pro. Code, refer to the original entrustment and not to the time of the complaint.

It is true S. 199, Crim. Pro. Code, is designed to protect the rights of the husband; but that is not its sole aim. The violation of the rights of guardianship is also entitled to its protection. The object of the law is not so much to afford protection to the husband or the guardian, as to inflict punishment on those who interfere with the sacred relation of marriage.

The restriction in S. 199 is not intended to afford immunity to the offender, but to prevent a person unconnected with the woman from giving publicity to a matter which neither the husband nor the guardian is willing to agitate. In re Rathna Padayachi, 17 Cr. L.J. 363=35 Ind. Cas. 667.

Under S. 202, if the Magistrate on examining the complainant, distrusts the statement of the complainant, he must record his reasons before directing a local investigation.

The trying Magistrate committed the accused for trial to the Sessions Court on six charges, three of criminal breach of trust and three of falsification of accounts, all the offences having been committed within a year. This petition was to revise the order of committal of the Magistrate as illegal.

Held, that the Magistrate had framed three distinct charges, each one containing a case of criminal breach of trust and one of falsification of accounts in respect of that breach of trust, and that the committal is in respect of those three charges. Although the trial of all these charges together by the Sessions Judge would be illegal under Ss. 222 and 234, the Sessions Judge can exercise his discretion of trying separately each of the three charges and that the High Court should not interfere with the discretion of the Sessions Judge in this matter (a). *T. (180) Ss. 222, 234, 403—Misappropriation—Joint trial—Separate trials for misappropriating different items of money during the same period, whether allowed.

If a person entrusts a sum of money to more than one person, and those persons in collusion commit criminal breach of trust or dishonestly misappropriate the amount, a joint trial of such persons is not bad.

In such a case the transaction is one and the same, and the evidence would probably be the same. Such a matter is also covered by S. 239, Crim. Pro. Code, which expressly authorises the joint trial of more than one person who are accused of the same offence committed in the course of one transaction (a).

Where the accused has already been tried and convicted for misappropriating a gross sum of money during a particular period, the charge in the previous case should be taken to include all the items misappropriated by him in the course of the same transaction during that period (b).

What the Legislature apparently intended was that where there is to be a trial for misappropriation of a gross sum, there should be only one trial for such an offence committed within the period covered by the defalcation. In re Appadurai Ayyar, 17 Cr. L.J. 30=32 Ind. Cas. 158.

The addition of S. 143, I.P.C., by the appellate Court to the charges under Ss. 426 and 451, I.P.C., is not permissible, as such addition would have the effect of imposing a constructive responsibility for individual acts of all persons who were members at the time of the assembly, whereas it would be necessary to prove the guilt of each of the persons charged for his individual acts if the charges were only under Ss. 451 and 426, Penal Code.

Ordinarily, there would be no presumption that the mere carrying of Savali Kalis would be unlawful, and in determining the object of an unlawful assembly, the Court must find that the accused had an intention to use criminal force or commit some other offence at all costs and were not acting in self-defence. In re Mukka Muthiriyen, 16 Cr. An alteration of a charge by a Court of Session under S. 227, Crim. Pro. Code, is only permissible up to the time of the taking of the opinion of the assessors.

Under S. 231 of the Crim. Pro. Code it is imperative that a Court when it alters or adds to a charge after the commencement of a trial, should allow the prosecutor and the accused to re-call or re-summon and examine, with reference to such alteration or addition, any witness who may have been examined, and also to call any further witness whom it may think to be material.

If the Chief Court thinks that in consequence of material errors in a charge the accused has been misled, it is bound to direct a new trial to be had upon a charge framed in the proper manner.

The accused was one of a party of burglars who invaded the house of one M. robbed his widow, ransacked his house, and on his seizing the accused as he was escaping, a scuffle ensued and the latter dealt him a mortal blow with a spear-head. The accused was tried by the Court of Session under S. 460, Indian Penal Code, but after the assessors had given their opinion to the effect that the accused was caught in the house of M. in the act of committing burglary and struck him a blow from which he died, the Sessions Judge recorded an order to the effect that the accused should have been charged under S. 302, Indian Penal Code, as well as under S. 460, and amending the charge under S. 227, Crim. Pro. Code, convicted the accused under S. 302, Indian Penal Code.

Held, that the alteration of the charge by the Sessions Judge after the assessors had given their opinion was illegal.

Held, further, that the accused was guilty of causing the death of M. under S. 460, Indian Penal Code, but that the offence committed by him did not amount to murder. Harbans v. The Crown, 50 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.)=33 P.R. 1916 (Cr.)=17 Cr. L.J. 454=36 Ind. Cas. 134.

(191) S. 234—Joinder of charges—Offences committed within one year, against different individuals—Whether can be tried together—“Offences of the same kind,” meaning of.

Three offences of the same kind committed within a year can be tried together whether it be against one or separate individuals.

The expression “offences being of the same kind” in S. 234, Crim. Pro. Code, means offences punishable under the same section of the Indian Penal Code.

Held, therefore, joinder of three charges in three cases of theft which took place in three different places and in the house of three different persons within one year, was not illegal. In re Raja Rao, 20 M.L.T. 234=4 L.W. 837=(1916) 2 M.W.N. 252=17 Cr. L.J. 479=36 Ind. Cas. 159.

The fourth accused in the case was convicted for illegal possession of opium under S. 9, cl. (c) of the Opium Act. In appeal the Sessions Judge altered the finding to the offence of abetting the illegal sale of opium under S. 9, cl. (f) of the Opium Act and S. 114, I.P.C., maintaining the sentence. It was contended that this alteration was illegal.

Held, that apart from Ss. 237 and 238, Crim. Pro. Code, S. 423 (b) (2) unqualifiedly gives the power to the appellate Court to alter the finding on appeal, and the High Court in revision will not interfere unless material prejudice is shown or an injustice has been done to the accused (a).

The view that under no circumstances can a conviction be made under S. 456 of the Penal Code, when the accused has been charged with the commission of an offence under S. 457, cannot be maintained.

The accused in the middle of the night entered the house of the complainant while she was asleep, was caught but ultimately ran away. The motive alleged by the prosecution was to commit theft of the complainant's ornaments. The accused was summarily tried for offences under Ss. 457 and 380, I.P.C., and the trying Magistrate finding that the intention of the accused was really to make immoral proposals to the complainant and thus to annoy her convicted him under S. 456, I.P.C.

Held—That, although the specific intent, namely, the intent to commit theft was not established, yet it was competent to the Court to convict the accused under S. 456, I.P.C., S. 238, Crim. Pro. Code, being clearly applicable to a case of this character, and the accused not having in any way been prejudiced by such conviction (a).

That it is well settled that to sustain a conviction under S. 456, it is not necessary to specify the criminal intention in the charge; it is sufficient if a guilty intention is proved such as is contemplated by S. 441, I.P.C.

That the intention may be determined as well from direct evidence as from the conduct of the party concerned and the attendant circumstances, and in the circumstances of the case the Court could presume that the accused effected the entry with an intent such as is provided for by S. 441, I.P.C. *Kavali Prasad Guru v. (204) S. 239—Joint trial—Receiving stolen property—Transactions different—Procedure—Objections to joint trial when to be taken.

Unless the receiving of stolen property is joint, persons cannot be tried jointly under S. 239, Crim. Pro. Code, for receiving, merely because the goods were stolen in one theft. The acts of receiving in such a case by different persons on different occasions at different places are not only different offences but different transactions in themselves, and it is really not right to try certain persons for receiving one set of stolen goods at the same time as other persons for receiving wholly independently another set of stolen goods.

Objections to joint trials, or any other kind of procedure which is alleged to prejudice the accused, should be taken when the charge is made, before the Judge goes into the merits. It is an objection relating to the charge and ought to be made when the accused are charged. If it is wrongly refused, if the objection is wrongly overruled, the accused have an appeal; but if the Judge agrees with the objection, he can separate the parties and try them separately; and no Judge can be expected to take these objections from the Bench itself and unless they are taken at the trial, the Judge's mind is

On a complaint, the accused was summoned for trial under S. 426 of the Indian Penal Code. On the date of hearing both parties appeared with their witnesses before the Deputy Magistrate who, however, transferred the case to another Bench of Magistrates. Later on in the day the case was taken up by that Bench but the complainant, though he was present in the Court with his witnesses, could not appear as he was not aware of the transfer of his case. (208) Ss. 248, 345—Wrongful confinement case—Petition filed by the complainant praying that the case may be struck off without hearing—Such petition, whether compromise or withdrawal—Procedure in warrant cases for withdrawal—Meaning of compromise and withdrawal.

"Compromise" is a word which in itself contemplates an arrangement to which there are two parties. "Withdrawal" has no such meaning. A case is compromised if with the consent of the accused it is withdrawn. A case is withdrawn under S. 248, Crim. Pro. Code, without the consent of the accused.

When a petition is filed by the complainant praying for striking off the case, it is clearly open to the Magistrate to satisfy himself under what section the petition is before him. Where the answers of the complainant clearly indicate that the case had not been compromised but was being withdrawn without the consent of the accused, and the subsequent action of the accused shows that he had never consented to the compromise of the case: .

Held, that the petition was not a petition made under S. 345, Crim. Pro. Code, and that the subsequent proceedings resulting in the trial and conviction of the accused were in order. Bayan Ali v. King-Emperor, 20 C.W.N. 1209.

In a case in which the prisoner was committed to the Sessions on Charge under Ss. 557 and 75, I.P.C., the Sessions Judge omitted the charge under S. 75, I.P.C., and after trying the prisoner on the other charges, convicted him under Ss. 457, 511, I.P.C. He then put to the prisoner the previous convictions and on his admitting them, took into consideration the existence of such previous convictions and passed a sentence which was legal even without proof of the said previous convictions.

Held that the sentence was legal, even though the same was influenced by a consideration of the gravity of the offence for which the prisoner had been previously convicted.

The desirability of Magistrates and Judges taking the ordinary precaution of charging prisoners under S. 75 also, pointed out. In re Subramanian, 3 L.W. 403=(1916) M.W.N. 327=17 Cr. L.J. 238=34 Ind. Cas. 1008.

S. 292, Crim. Pro. Code, must be read in connection with S. 289 and must be construed accordingly. Reading the two sections together the right to reply which is given by S. 292 arises only if the accused or any of the accused takes advantage of the right to adduce evidence at the time and in the manner specified by the Act, viz., after the case for the prosecution is concluded.

So, where, during the cross-examination of certain of the witnesses for the prosecution and before the close of the case for the Crown, the counsel for the accused put to the witnesses certain letters as having been written by them or their employers, and the witnesses identified the letters which were then tendered as evidence and admitted, held, the prosecution had not the right to reply.

Held also that the correct test for deciding this matter was not whether the prosecution was taken by surprise. Emperor v. Sreenath Mahapatra, 49 O. 426=20 C.W.N. 976=17 Cr.L.J. 423=35 Ind. Cas. 983.

If a Sessions Judge thinks it necessary to visit the place of occurrence of an offence under trial, he should give notice to the parties and the assessors. He should not go without such notice, nor after the trial has been completed by delivery of the assessor's opinion.

(232) S. 297—Charge to Jury—Rioting—Unlawful assembly—Penal Code, Ss. 141, 147—Evidence Act, S. 114—Presumption.

The omission to mention the common object in the charge-sheet for an offence of rioting does not necessarily vitiate the trial (a).

The Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury should draw the attention of the jury to the case set up by the defence and should also point out to them that the non-production by the prosecution of witnesses who were admittedly present at the time of the alleged occurrence, created a presumption under S. 114 of the Evidence Act which did not help the case for the prosecution.

In a charge of rioting the Jury must be told that a rioting can only take place when there is an unlawful assembly consisting of at least five men with one of the common objects mentioned in S. 141, Indian Penal Code. In cases of riot it is essentially necessary to mention what an unlawful assembly is. The jury are not experts in law. They might not be able to distinguish between a collection of five or more men without a common object and a collection of the same number of men with a common object. *Abdul Sheikh v. Ss. 297 to 299 of the Code of Criminal Procedure make it imperative on a Sessions Judge to place in his summing up to the jury the evidence both for prosecution and defence.

The fact that the pleaders for the accused thought it unnecessary to place much reliance upon the defences of the accused would not absolve the Sessions Judge from his duty. Ss. 297, 298 and 299 of the Crim. Pro. Code make this clear.

In a case where the case for prosecution entirely rested on the identification of the dacoits at night, the failure of the Sessions Judge to deal with the defences and the evidence in support of the defence must be deemed to have prejudiced the accused.

In a case where a number of accused persons were concerned and the question was purely one of identification, it would be of much help to the Jury if the Sessions Judge should sum up the evidence for the prosecution against each accused separately and draw the special attention of the Jury to the facts alleged against each accused person. In re Sangam, 17 Cr. Where a Magistrate who had proceeded on leave and had thus ceased to exercise jurisdiction in a case tried by him wrote and signed a document purporting to be his judgment in the case, it would not amount to a judgment.

The accused in a case under S. 47, I.P.C., produced a certain document as evidence on his behalf. The Magistrate who tried the case, having proceeded on leave without writing or pronouncing judgment as required by law, the District Magistrate, being of opinion that the so-called judgment written by him was no judgment under the law transferred the case to his own file, and proceeded to deal with it under the provisions of S. 350, Crim. Pro. Code. Having examined the record the District Magistrate thought it proper to permit the public prosecutor to withdraw the prosecution. The Magistrate, however, after satisfying himself that there were grounds for believing that the document produced by the accused was a forgery, and after giving the accused an opportunity of showing cause, gave sanction to prosecute the accused under Ss. 469, 471 and 474, I. P. C. Held that the Magistrate of the District having transferred the case to his own file and proceeded to deal with it, the case was before him in his judicial capacity and the proceedings before him were judicial proceedings. (269) S. 367—Charge to jury—Heads of charge—Object of—What it should contain—Duty of Judge.

Under S. 367, Crim. Pro. Code, a Judge is not required to write out in extenso the charge which he addresses to the jury.

The term "heads of charge" means that the judge must faithfully record the lines upon which he addressed the jury, both on the evidence and on the law, and the object of these heads of charge is to inform the High Court, should occasion arise, of what direction he gave in law to the jury and the nature of his summing up of the evidence not only for the prosecution but also for the defence.

The Judge need not in every particular and in every detail address himself to every suggestion put forward by the defence. His duty is fairly and candidly to point out the main and salient features of the case from the point of view of the prosecution and of the defence respectively.

The headings of charge should record in an intelligible form and with sufficient fulness, the points of law and directions given by the Judge to the jury and the record should represent with accuracy the substance of the charge by the Judge(s).

The method of expression and its form may be unsatisfactory, but if in substance one can see from the frame of the heads of charge what were the directions which the learned Judge gave to the jury and that they were right and proper, there can be no ground of complaint even though the phraseology and form adopted might be open to question (L).

More informality in expression or form would not be sufficient to invalidate the conviction.

(277) S. 397—'Concurrent sentences'—Sentence of imprisonment, what is implied—Detention in civil prison whether amounts to imprisonment—Prisons Act (IX of 1894), S. 42.

A sentence of imprisonment under the Prisons Act must commence from the date on which it was passed.

A prisoner cannot be further detained in the civil prison for the period for which he was kept out of it, for the object of his commitment to the civil prison was to keep him under detention for a specified period or until he paid up the debt, whichever event occurred sooner, and his detention in the criminal jail may, consequently, be taken to serve the purpose of his detention in the civil prison.

Even a person committed to prison under S. 123 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is not undergoing a "sentence" of imprisonment, and when such a person is convicted for an offence and sentenced to a term of imprisonment, such term cannot, under S. 397 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, be made to commence on the expiry of the period for which he has been committed to prison under S. 123, but must commence from the date of the order (a).

A sentence of imprisonment implies the punishment awarded on conviction of an offence (b). Shin Taung v. Emperor, 17 Cr. L.J. 480=36 Ind. Cas. 160.

(285) Ss. 408, 413—Penal Code, S. 379—Several accused convicted at the same trial—Appeal by some—Right of appeal by another on whom non-appealable sentence passed.

The wording of S. 413 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is open to the interpretation that the legislature intended that the right of appeal exercisable by a person who has received an appealable sentence should carry with it a right of appeal also by any other person convicted at the same trial, even though that particular person may have received a sentence which, if it stood alone, would not have been appealable.

Hence where four persons were convicted at the same trial of an offence under S. 379, Penal Code, three of them receiving a sentence of two months each and the fourth a sentence of one month, and the former appealed to the Sessions Judge who quashed the conviction, held that the fourth person also had a right of appeal, although he received a sentence which by itself was not appealable. *Lal Singh v. (288) S. 413—Appeal—Right of—Joint trial—Non appealable sentence against some accused and appealable sentence against one—Appeal at instance of former—Maintainability.

No appeal lies to the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate at the instance of a person against whom a non-appealable sentence has been passed, merely because an appealable sentence has been passed against others jointly tried with him.

S. 413 of the Code of Criminal Procedure speaks of an "appeal by a convicted person in cases in which a Court of Session or the District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class passed a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding one month only, or of fine not exceeding fifty rupees only, or of whipping only." Although for the sake of convenience the Code, under certain restrictions, provides that there can be a joint trial it must be taken that there is a separate case as against each of the accused dealt with in the joint trial. Therefore the reference in S. 413 to a case is not to what in ordinary language is regarded for statistical and other purposes as one case, but to the adjudication as against each of the accused. There can be no question that each of the convicted accused is entitled to prefer separate appeal. There can be a number of appeals in that way. The moment that sentences are passed against each of the accused, the one case is split into a number of cases within the meaning of S. 413 of the Code (a). In re Yenkatarkrishnayya, 31 M.L.J. 837.

(298) Ss. 423, 428—Appellate Court setting aside conviction and sentence, ordering re-trial and directing the Magistrate to take additional evidence and to record a fresh decision on the original and additional evidence—Legality—Prejudice to accused—Procedure.

In this case, the petitioners were convicted by the Sub divisional Magistrate of offences under Ss. 117, 148, Penal Code. On appeal to the Sessions Judge, it was contended that the Magistrate had omitted to record important evidence for the prosecution, and so the Sessions Judge set aside the convictions and sentences, remanded the case to the Magistrate and directed him to take additional evidence for the prosecution as well as for the accused, and record a fresh decision on the entire evidence. The Sessions Judge also ordered a "re trial from the point at which the additional evidence should have been taken." The Magistrate accordingly took additional evidence and again convicted the petitioners who again appealed to the Sessions Court. This appeal came before a different Sessions Judge and both parties asked him to disregard the additional evidence as of no value to them, and to try the case on the evidence originally recorded. This was done and the convictions were upheld. On revision to the High Court, held :

Per Chamer, C.J.—That, even if the order of the original Sessions Judge was not merely irregular but illegal, it was not necessary for the High Court to order a re-trial by the Magistrate. Ordinarily the proper course to take would have been to set aside all the proceedings subsequent to the alleged illegal order and to require the Sessions Judge to record a fresh judgment on the evidence originally recorded or send the case to another Sessions Judge for that purpose, but as both sides had asked the Sessions Judge to disregard entirely all the additional evidence, and the Sessions Judge had already recorded his findings on the original evidence only, it was unnecessary to return the case to the Sessions Judge in order that he might record a fresh judgment.

Held also, that the accused were in no way prejudiced by the failure of the first Sessions Judge to make an order in strict compliance either under S. 423 or under S. 428, Crim. Pro. Code.

(329) Ss. 439, 345—High Court in revision if can grant leave to compound offence—Penal Code, S. 417—Criminal trespass, elements necessary to constitute offence.

The accused were charged under Ss. 447 and 504, I.P.C. The trying Magistrate held that the evidence was not sufficient to justify a conviction under S. 504, I.P.C., and convicted the accused under S. 447, I.P.C., only and passed a non-appealable sentence. The Sessions Judge on being moved in the matter called for the record and on the date fixed for hearing the complainant filed a petition, to the effect that the case had been compromised and asked for leave to withdraw the case. On a reference by the Sessions Judge under S. 438, Crim. Pro. Code, recommending that permission might be given to the parties to compound the case.

Held—That, when an accused has been convicted of a compoundable offence, the High Court, in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction under S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code, is not competent to grant leave to compound the offence under S. 345, Crim. Pro. Code, when such composition has been entered into after the conviction of the accused.

That to sustain a conviction under S. 447, I.P.O., it is necessary to prove as required by S. 441 not only that the accused entered upon the property in the possession of the complainant but that they did so with intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession of such property; and no such intent having been proved in the case, which was one of civil dispute, the conviction under S. 447, I.P.O., should be set aside. *Akshoy Singh v. (330) Ss. 439, 443, 253—Presidency Magistrate, order of discharge by—Revision by High Court.

The High Court has power under S. 439 read with S. 423 of the Crim. Pro. Code to revise an order of discharge passed by a Presidency Magistrate and to direct a further enquiry, if there are good reasons for doing so, although no question of jurisdiction arises in the case.

Where N, one of several accused persons, was discharged by the Magistrate under S. 253, Crim. Pro. Code, and the High Court, at the hearing of the appeal of the other accused persons who were convicted by the Magistrate, directed that the evidence of N should be recorded, and in disposing of the appeal took into consideration the evidence so recorded, and being of opinion that that evidence could not in some respects be accepted, issued a rule to show cause why the order of discharge should not be set aside:

Held—That the mere fact that N was called upon to give his evidence in the case did not convert the order of discharge into one of acquittal and did not deprive the High Court of its revisional jurisdiction.

That, in the circumstances of the case, the High Court should not set aside the order of discharge inasmuch as the evidence of N which was recorded under orders of the High Court and which was used by that Court for the purpose of coming to the conclusion as to the guilt of the other accused, might afford material to the prosecution to support or frame the charge against N, and to allow this would be contrary to the traditions of justice in criminal cases. *The King-Emperor v. (335) S. 476—Civ. Pro. Code, S. 115—Proceedings taken while a suit is pending—If material irregularity.

Where in the course of a civil suit before the District Munsif, the petitioner made a statement which the Court had reason to believe to be untrue and contradicted a statement made by him in its presence before the case was taken up and the Court proceeded against him under S. 476 immediately after the statement was made without waiting for the completion of civil suit:

Held, per Sadasiva Iyer and Oldfield, JJ., (Seshagiri Iyer, J., contra): That the Court was not bound to wait till substantive proceedings were over before it could initiate action under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, and that its failure to do so did not constitute material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction under S. 115 (c) of the Civ. Pro. Code.

Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—Under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, proceedings must be taken at or immediately after the termination of the trial of the suit or case and the action taken before the suit is closed, although not without jurisdiction, is a material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction.

Per Oldfield, J.—An accused is not entitled as of right to insist on all his evidence being taken in the substantive proceeding, before sanction is granted against him. And there is nothing in the wording of S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, inconsistent with this conclusion.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.—The words of S. 476 are very wide and an order under it may be based on materials which have not been strictly made legal evidence.

Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—Before a person is asked to stand his trial, it must be fairly clear to the sanctioning authority that there is a probability of a conviction being had.

(336) S. 476—Sanction granted in respect of false statements made before a Revenue Court—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), S. 70—Revisional power of High Court.

Sale of ancestral immoveable property was transferred to the Collector who, in his turn, directed his subordinate, Mr. Anthony, to carry out the sale. Before Mr. Anthony the judgment-debtor asked for an adjournment of the sale on the ground that the decree had been adjusted. The application was rejected on the ground that notice could not be taken of this without an intimation to that effect from the Civil Court. On a subsequent date the Civil Court called back the papers of the execution case. The judgment-debtor then presented an application to Mr. Anthony for sanction to prosecute the decree-holder for certain false statements made by him at the time the case was before that officer exercising the functions of a Revenue Court. This was granted, and an order was passed which purported to be under S. 476 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Upon an application for revision to the High Court, held that the High Court could not revise the order as the order was and could be passed by the officer in question as a Revenue Court under S. 70 of the Civ. Pro. Code. Asharfi Lal v. Emperor, 14 A.L.J. 1077.

(337) S. 476—Sanction to prosecute—Passing of order before close of trial—Impropriety—No ground for quashing proceedings.

A Magistrate ought not to take proceedings under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, against a witness in the case until the close of the trial. The reason is that such action is eminently calculated to intimidate subsequent witnesses and defeat the object of the trial. But that is a consideration which affects the accused under trial, and is no ground for quashing the proceedings under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code. Nadirshah v. The Crown, 9 S.L.R. 176=32 Ind. to the nine petitioners to show cause why they should not be prosecuted for having committed offences under S. 194, I. P. C., and granted sanction under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code. In the case of eight of the petitioners, the alleged false evidence was given before the Sessions Judge himself and in the case of the ninth petitioner, M, the evidence was given before the committing Magistrate which evidence, on account of M's inability to attend the Sessions Court owing to illness, was read out as evidence at the trial. The petitioners appealed.

Held that there is nothing in S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, which requires the Court to take action, if at all, immediately after the conclusion of the case in which the offences are said to have been committed or within any time fixed thereafter and that in the present case, the Sessions Judge was fully justified in waiting until the appeal had been decided before he took action under S. 476, Crim. In such proceedings the person against whom they are directed can only be examined in accordance with the provisions of S. 342, Crim. Pro. Code. It is doubtful whether a Magistrate has jurisdiction to send a person, who has not been a party to any proceeding before him and who has not been examined as a witness in the case, to the nearest Magistrate under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code.

In order to support a conviction under S. 196, Penal Code, there must be some evidence in existence which the party is either using or attempting to use.

Where the evidence shows that the accused has been attempting to get from the Medical Officer a certificate which may be used on a subsequent occasion, and that the certificate was never given; in such a case, there is no evidence in existence which could be utilised by the accused for improper purposes.

R instituted a suit in the Small Cause Court at Bilaspur in the Central Provinces against K, a resident of Arrah in Behar and obtained an ex parte decree.

The decree was at R's instance transferred for execution to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Arrah and an application was made for K's arrest. K then brought a suit in the Court of the 1st Munsif of Arrah to have the Bilaspur decree set aside on the ground of fraud and obtained a decree which was confirmed on appeal by the District Judge of Arrah. The District Judge directed the prosecution of R and two others for offences under Ss. 209 and 210 of the Indian Penal Code as he found on the evidence that they had combined together to bring a false suit against K and had obtained a decree against him by concealing from him the institution of the proceedings and tampering with the service of summons. An appeal was presented to the High Court against the decision of the District Judge in the Civil Case and has been admitted. R and two others applied under S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code, to revise the order of the Sessions Judge directing their prosecution.

Held that the order of the District Judge was right. The hearing of the appeal by the District Judge was a judicial proceeding and the offences alleged to have been committed by the three applicants were brought to his notice in the course of that proceeding.

Held further that the District Judge had jurisdiction to take action under S. 477, Crim. Pro. Code.

S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, does not appear to restrict the action of the Court to offences committed within its own jurisdiction or even within the province in which the Court is situated (a).

• A High Court could not interfere, under S. 439, Crim. Pro. On 11th October 1915, the petitioner preferred a complaint before a Sub-Divisional Magistrate against certain Police officers. The Magistrate, after examining the petitioner on the same date recorded an order to the effect that the complaint was false and called on the petitioner to show cause why he should not be prosecuted under S. 182, Penal Code. This officer was transferred and his successor, when the petitioner appeared before him with his witnesses, referred the matter to a subordinate Magistrate 'for hearing complainant and witnesses and report.' On receipt of the report, the Sub-Divisional Magistrate recorded on 6th December 1915 an order dismissing the complaint under S. 203, Crim. Pro. Code. On the 4th February 1916, upon an application made by one of the Police Officers, the Sub-Divisional Magistrate passed an order under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, in consequence of which the petitioner was put on his trial under S. 211, I.P.C., and sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment.

Held the conviction was proper. 'The delay of about two months which occurred between the order of 11th October and that of 6th December did not deprive the Magistrate of jurisdiction (a).

It may be that the procedure of the Magistrate in referring the matter to a Subordinate Magistrate was irregular and the Magistrate should have held the inquiry himself. (354) S. 488—Application for maintenance—Allegations of cruelty—Dismissal of application on failure to prove cruelty—Subsequent application on the same allegations—Not maintainable.

A woman applied under S. 488, Crim. Pro. Code, for maintenance alleging cruelty as an excuse for not living with her husband. Her application was dismissed by the Magistrate on the ground that she had failed to prove the alleged cruelty. She then brought a fresh application alleging the same cruelty before another Magistrate who held the said allegations proved and ordered the husband to pay maintenance at a certain rate.

Held that it is not competent to hold a second enquiry into the same allegations which have once been already enquired into and adjudicated upon by a competent Court (a). Sadr-uddin v. Mussammat Musahib Khanam, 24 P. R. 1916 (Cr.)=38 Ind. Cas. 439.

(361) Ss. 494, 342 (4), 343—Public Prosecutor specially appointed—Power to withdraw from the prosecution of an accused impleaded into the case subsequently—'Accused,' meaning of—Accused against whom prosecution is withdrawn can be examined as a witness for the prosecution—Inducement offered by the prosecution to the witness—Evidence is admissible though its credit is affected—Accomplice evidence—Corroboration, how far material.

Two persons G and N were charged jointly for offences punishable under S. 161, Penal Code, in two cases, known as 'horse case' and 'hundi case.' The prosecution was conducted by two lawyers specially appointed by Government as Public Prosecutors. At the commencement of the trial, the two cases were ordered to be tried separately at the instance of the prosecution. The trial of the 'horse case' was taken up first. The Public Prosecutor withdrew from the prosecution of N in the 'horse case,' and examined N as a witness for the prosecution on the 6th and 15th July 1915. On the 17th idem, he withdrew from the prosecution of N in the 'hundi case' also, and N was further cross-examined in the 'horse case' on the 30th July and the 2nd August 1915. The trial ended in the conviction of G. On G's appeal, it was contended that the withdrawal from the prosecution of N was not valid; that N was accordingly an incompetent witness, as no oath could be administered to him under S. 342, (cl.) 4 of the Crim. Pro. Code; and that N's testimony was tainted, for he was given an inducement by responsible authorities that unless he told what the Crown believed to be the truth, he was liable to be prosecuted in the 'hundi case':—

Held, (1) that the appointment of the Public Prosecutor having been for the whole case, it was competent to him to withdraw from the prosecution of N who was implicated into the case subsequent to the appointment.

(2) That N could not be regarded as "accused" within the meaning of cl. 4 of S. 342 of the Crim. Pro. Code, for the term referred to the accused then under trial and examination by the Court.

Held, by Batchelor, J., that N's testimony was admissible, S. 343 of the Crim. Pro. Code having no application, the inducement offered to N being offered to him not as an accused in the 'hundā case,' but as a witness in the 'horse case;' though the credit to be attached to the testimony was diminished.

Held, by Shah, J., without expressing any opinion as to the applicability of S. 343 and assuming that the section was applicable, that the admissibility of N's evidence as a witness in the 'horse case' was not in any way affected.

Per Batchelor, J.—"An accomplice is a suspect witness, whose evidence must be received with great caution and should be materially corroborated before it is accepted. But the scales must be held even; for, while it is essential that accused persons should be protected from conviction on the mere evidence of an untrustworthy accomplice, it is also important that the requirements of the Legislature in this respect should not be so exaggerated by the Court as to offer a practical guarantee of immunity to persons guilty of grave offences which are in their very nature difficult of detection. When all legal precautions have been taken and all relevant considerations duly weighed, there remains the plain question whether the Judge or Magistrate does or does not believe the particular accomplice. That is a question which it is the Judge's or Magistrate's duty to answer. If after all cautions have been observed, the Judge or Magistrate is convinced that the accomplice's evidence is true, it is his duty to say so and to give effect to his mental conviction. This process is in direct conformity with the definition of the word 'proved' given in the Evidence Act."

Per Shah, J.—"It would be proper and necessary to insist upon corroboration in respect of all material particulars connected with the story of the prosecution (as evolved by the accomplice witness N). I should certainly hesitate to rely on such a witness on points on which he may not be independently corroborated and which might affect the accused." Emperor v. Govind Balvant Laghate, 18 Bom. (367) S. 514.—Appearance of accused—Surety for appearance—Failure to appear—Suicide by accused—Forfeiture of surety-bond.

Pending the trial of the accused, the applicants stood sureties for his appearance in the Magistrate's Court. The accused having failed to appear at an adjourned hearing, the surety-bonds were called in. It appeared that the accused had committed suicide before the date of hearing; but the sureties in ignorance of the fact admitted before the Court that the accused was living on the date in question. The surety-bonds were consequently forfeited. On application to the High Court.

Held, that, under the circumstances, there were no sufficient grounds for penalizing the sureties.

Per Beaman, J.—"Surely the object of these surety-bonds is as far as possible to ensure that the accused person shall not evade justice in the ordinary sense, that is to say, by flying from the country or the jurisdiction of the Court. But if he elects to die sooner than face his trial, that can hardly be a sufficient reason for forfeiting the surety-bonds, since that was an event which his sureties could not have had in contemplation and which is not of the kind which would impose upon them any moral obligation or responsibility to the Courts." In re Rama Bapu Pujari, 18 Bom. A, B and C were charged under S. 61 of the Excise Act of 1914 with manufacturing liquor contrary to law and being in possession of it and were convicted and sentenced to undergo four months' rigorous imprisonment each and a fine of Rs. 50 each. On appeal, the Sessions Judge held that the principle of S. 562, Crim. Pro. Code, applied and reduced the sentences.

Held that the principle of S. 562, was not applicable to the present case.

S. 562, Crim. Pro. Code, was intended to apply to offenders (especially youthful offenders) who, without being persons of depraved character, may on occasions succumb to sudden temptation, and the legislature very humanely and very properly allows the Magistrate in such cases to give the young man a chance and to deal with him under S. 562.

The offence of manufacturing illicit liquor implies a good deal of preparation, and cannot be said that it is done in consequence of succumbing to sudden temptation. Further it is an offence which probably escapes detection 9 times out of ten and it deprives Government of revenue, besides demoralising people. Deterrent sentences in such circumstances are absolutely necessary, and the legislature by passing the Excise Act, 1914, intended that substantial terms of imprisonment should be awarded in these cases. *The Crown v. (1) Relevancy—Civil judgment between the parties with reference to certain items—Charge of criminal breach of trust as to the same items—Admissibility of the Civil judgment into the criminal case—Practice and Procedure.

The complainant filed a Civil suit against the accused to recover moneys due on certain items. He next filed a complaint charging the accused with criminal breach of trust with reference to some of the items covered by the Civil suit. The suit terminated into a dismissal of the plaintiff's case, it having been disbelieved by the trial Judge on all items. The accused then applied to admit the judgment in the Civil case in evidence and to obtain a discharge on the strength of it. The Magistrate having declined to receive it in evidence, the accused applied to the High Court:

A conviction for murder based purely on circumstantial evidence is not illegal.

The word 'possibility' must be taken to mean a high degree of probability that is, so high a degree of probability that a prudent man, considering all the facts and realising that the life or liberty of the accused person depends upon the decision, feels justified in holding that the accused committed the crime. *Thakar Das v. (2) Ss. 8, 24 and 27—Admissibility in evidence—Conduct—Recovery of stolen property.

Where it appears that the accused person accompanied the Police Officers to the place where the stolen property was recovered, and it was apparently due to his pointing out the place that the property was recovered. Held, that this was conduct on the part of an accused person proof of which is admissible under the provisions of S. 8 of the Evidence Act.

S. 27 of the Evidence Act does not make a confession which would otherwise be inadmissible, admissible to prove the fact discovered in consequence of information contained in it, unless the person who confesses is a person accused of any offence and also in the custody of the Police. *King-Emperor v. (4) S. 24—Statement made under promise of pardon retracted—Want of corroborative evidence—Conviction, whether legal—Crim. Pro. Code, S. 339 (2).

Held, that, in the absence of corroboration in material particulars, it is not safe to convict on a retracted confession, unless, from the peculiar circumstances in which it was made and judging from the reasons alleged or apparent, of the retraction, there remain a high degree of certainty that the confession, notwithstanding its having been resiled from, is genuine.

Held, also, that a conviction is bad in law where an accused has been convicted on a retracted statement made by him under promise of pardon, which so far from being corroborated by any other evidence whatsoever, was contradicted in important particulars by other prosecution evidence. *Khushi v. (7) Ss. 24, 25—Confession to saidar in consequence of inducement, whether admissible

—Retracted confession, value of—Corroboration necessary.

Where a person suspected of having committed a murder made a confession to the saidar, in consequence of the latter dropping a remark to the effect that his own brother had committed a murder but had got off on making a clean breast of the matter:

Held, that (a) the saidar, although not in charge of the investigation, was a leading man holding a responsible post, and that this remark of his case was a distinct inducement to the accused to make a confession which rendered the confession inadmissible in evidence;

(b) That inasmuch as the Police were in the immediate vicinity at the time of the confession, and the accused, though not handcuffed, was in Police detention as a suspect, he was to all intents and purposes in Police custody and the confession could not be proved unless made to a Magistrate.

Held, also that (1) where a retracted confession is the sole evidence against an accused, it can be of but little value, especially remembering the race for a pardon which sometimes occurs when a number of persons are suspected of an offence and others have already confessed or are believed to have already confessed.

(2) As against a co-accused, a confession which has been retracted at the first opportunity should not be relied upon, unless corroborated by independent testimony.

Held, further, that the mere fact that a blood-stained garment is found in a house is not sufficient proof that any particular member of the family residing in that house is guilty of a murder which has recently been committed in the village. Karm Singh v. The Crown, 32 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.)=153 P.L.R. 1916=26 P.R. 1916=17 Cr. L.J. 226=34 Ind. Cas. 642.

- (13) S. 27—Information given by two accused persons leading to discovery—Admissible against both—Police Mashirnamas—Crim. Pro. Code, S. 103—Police Mashirnamas to be exhibited.

The history of the police investigation is always important and particularly so in a case where the main arguments for the defence arise out of the course of that investigation. Police Mashirnamas sometimes include irrelevant matter, but these portions can always be excluded, and, subject to the exclusion, these documents are always very important as a contemporaneous record of events occurring in the investigation (a).

If two persons give information which leads to discovery of a fact so much of the statement of each person which relates distinctly to the fact discovered may be proved. The exclusion of confessional statements under S. 26 is based on the presumption arising from the custody of the police that they are untrustworthy. As soon as a circumstance is proved which rebuts that presumption, e.g., the presence of a Magistrate or confirmation by subsequent discovery the confession becomes admissible either in toto if there is the guarantee of a Magistrate's presence, or to the extent to which it is confirmed. If therefore two persons give information which leads to discovery, the statements of both have been confirmed and are admissible. Statements of co-accused subsequent to the discovery are irrelevant (b).

It is not proper that the police after having made discovery from one accused should enact the force of inviting the other accused to point out the same place (c). Crown v. Bulleman, 10 S.L.R. 7 = 17 Cr. L.J. 506 = 36 Ind. Cas. 474.

The evidence of an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless it is corroborated in material particulars. Where there are more than one accused persons, there must be corroboration against each of the accused showing his connection with the offence alleged against him.

The identification of the particular accused by witnesses to whom they were strangers is not valueless. Nika v. The Crown, 19 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.) = 17 Cr. L. J. 156 = 33 Ind. Cas. 636.

- (17) Ss. 30, 114, Ill. (b), 133—Approver, evidence of—Corroboration in material particulars.

Held, that Courts should not ordinarily depart from the well-recognized practice of accepting the evidence of an approver as against an accused person, only when it is corroborated in material particulars by other independent evidence. It is the more necessary to follow this rule where the accused belong to a low class and it is a matter of no difficulty for the approver to include the name of any person of that class among the offenders, even though he has no connection with the offences and it might be difficult for him to establish his innocence.

Held, also, that, in exceptional cases the Courts might, for reasons stated, act upon the evidence of an approver as a whole, though uncorroborated in particular details by independent evidence, but this is not such a case. Ghulam Rasool v. Accused caused hurt to R with a view to extort a confession and R committed suicide in consequence of the ill-treatment. Accused were not charged with causing R's death, but were charged only under S. 380, I.P.C., for causing the hurt.

Held that the suicide was the result of the ill-treatment received at the hands of the convicts, and so that treatment was the cause though not the direct cause of the death, and though the convicts are not legally responsible for the suicide, the cause of death comes into question in this case, the whole affair, the ill-treatment and subsequently suicide, being all one transaction, and therefore the statement made by R as to the cause of wounding himself with a razor which caused his death was admissible under S. 32 (1), Evidence Act (Vide

(19) Ss. 32, 80, 159—Dying declaration, admissibility, proof and evidentiary value of—Ss. 164, 512, Crim. Pro. Code.

To prove a dying declaration, the Magistrate who recorded it need not be examined as a witness in the case (a).

An oral statement of a deceased person as to the cause of his death, if made in the absence of the accused, may be proved by any one who heard it made, as well as by the person who recorded it (b).

Whether the dying declarations are treated as written statements of deceased persons or as written records of verbal statements, S. 32 (1), Evidence Act, allows dying declarations which have been reduced to writing to be admitted as relevant facts. They thus become substantive evidence of the circumstances leading to the deceased person's death, when the cause of the death is in question.

When the dying declaration has appended to it a certificate that it has been read over to the deponent and declared to be correct, and this is signed by the Magistrate who recorded the statement, S. 80 of the Evidence Act creates a presumption that the circumstances under which it is stated to have been taken are true, the investigation by the Magistrate being a judicial proceeding. In re Karruppan Samban, 16 Cr. In an appeal from a conviction of theft, the Sessions Judge set aside the conviction and entered upon an enquiry for the purpose of ascertaining whether proceedings should not be instituted against the complainant for making a false charge of theft. In the course of those proceedings, the accused in the theft case was examined as a witness and the complainant cross-examined him. Ultimately the Sessions Judge ordered the complainant to be committed for trial on the charge of making a false charge of theft. At the trial, at the presence of the accused in the theft case could not be procured, his statement before the Sessions Judge was allowed to go upon the record. The admission of this statement was objected to as being against the provisions of S. 33, Evidence Act.

Held, that the statement could not go upon the record, inasmuch as the proceedings before the Sessions Judge having been held under S. 476 of the Crim. Pro. Code, the then complainant had no right to cross-examine the (23) S. 114—Circumstantial evidence—Proof—Prosecution, duty of.

It is a general principle of Criminal law that it is for the prosecution to prove their case and that an accused person should not be convicted merely because he has told lies in his defence. At the same time in cases of circumstantial evidence, where facts are put forward on behalf of the prosecution which, unless explained, justify an inference of guilt being drawn against the accused, then, it is both lawful and proper for the Court to consider the explanation of those facts which the accused puts forward in his defence. This principle is clearly recognised in the explanations to S. 114 of the Indian Evidence Act. Abdul Aziz v. Emperor, 17 Cr. L.J. 23 = 32 Ind. Cas. 151.

S. 133 of the Evidence Act contains the rule of law, S. 114, ill. (b) being merely a sort of guidance to assist the Courts (a).

It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to when and to what extent an 'accomplice' must be corroborated. The reasons why an accomplice's evidence is to be viewed with suspicion, may be summarised as follows :—

(i) because he has a motive to shift guilt from himself ;

(ii) because he is an immoral person likely to commit perjury on occasion ;

(iii) because he hopes for pardon, or has secured it and so favours the prosecution.

Under S. 157, Evidence Act, previous statements of an accomplice may be corroboration (b)

In exercise of the powers under S. 107, Government of India Act, 1915, the High Court can and will interfere with an order passed under S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, 1898, where the Magistrate has acted without jurisdiction or has exceeded his jurisdiction. It will not interfere merely because there has been an irregularity in the proceedings or an erroneous decision on a question of fact or law but it can and will interfere, when there has been a material irregularity which amounts to a refusal to exercise, or an usurpation of jurisdiction or which has prejudiced a party to the proceedings (a).

Per Chamier, C.J.—In order to establish prejudice, it is not sufficient to show that there has been an erroneous decision on a question of law or fact; but it must be shown that the irregularity has prevented a party from having a fair trial.

No hard and fast rule can be laid down to the effect that a Magistrate in proceedings under S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, must give effect to a recent decision or proceeding of a Civil or Criminal Court (b).

Per Sharfuddin, J.—A Civil Court decree in favour of a party will become infructuous if the Magistrate interferes with it but the Magistrate is not bound to maintain it blindly. If after the passing of the decree the Magistrate finds on evidence that the party's possession has been disturbed or that the possession has changed hands he has jurisdiction but this will be a matter of fact which the Magistrate has to decide. If he comes to a finding, which would be a finding of fact, that such possession has been disturbed since the decree was passed he has jurisdiction in a proceeding under S. 145 to pass orders irrespective of the Civil Court decree. In the case of a Civil Court decree of a very recent date where there is no evidence to shew disturbance or change of possession since the decree the Magistrate is bound to respect the Civil Court decree and if he does not do so he acts without jurisdiction (b).

Per Roe, J.—The power by which English Courts interfere by prohibition and Mandamus, is confined to cases in which the Court has acted without jurisdiction, or in excess of jurisdiction or has refused to exercise a jurisdiction, vested in it by law. The High Court will not interfere merely because there has been an irregularity in the proceedings. It will interfere if the irregularity has been so serious that one of the parties has suffered prejudice. By prejudice is meant disability to lay before the Court that party's version of the facts of the case and the law to be applied. It will not interfere with any decision arrived at after a fair trial however erroneous in law or fact that decision may appear to be. Parmeshwar Singh v. Kailaspatil, 1 Pat. L.J. 336=17 Cr. House Trespass.

(1) House-breaking—Lurking house-trespass.

House trespass becomes lurking house-trespass if the offender takes precautions to conceal such house-trespass from some person who has a right to exclude him.

The mere fact that a house-trespass was committed by night does not make the offence one of lurking house-trespass. In order to constitute lurking house-trespass the offender must take some active means to conceal his presence (a).

Where a person enters the court-yard of the haveli through the deorhi, but the deorhi itself has no door attached to it that would constitute house-trespass, not house-breaking. Budha v. The Crown, 21 P.R. 1916 (Cr.)=123 P.L.R. 1916=44 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.)=17 Cr. L.J. 304=35 Ind. Cas. 176.

Munsif after having recalled and examined the plaintiff. The District Judge ordered the prosecution of the plaintiff under S. 209, Penal Code. The prosecution was suspended by reason of appeals against his decree having been preferred in the High Court. Upon the pleader applying for renewal of certificate, the District Judge reported to the High Court that he had refused to renew his certificate.

Held, that the action of the District Judge was inconsistent, for either he ought to have waited till the determination of the criminal prosecution which he had ordered or he might have proceeded under S. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act. of the Letters Patent—Crim. Pro. Code (Act V of 1898), S. 537, if applicable—Whole case, if can be considered on review—Prosecution, duty of.

In a case under S. 243 of the Indian Penal Code it is necessary to direct the Jury to the effect that they should come to a decision (1) whether the counterfeit coins were in the possession of the accused, or in the possession of his clerk or servant on behalf of the accused; and (2) if they came to the conclusion that the coins were in the possession of the accused, they would then have to decide whether he knew at the time when he became so possessed of them, that the coins were counterfeit; and (3) if they came to the conclusion that the coins were in the possession of the clerk or servant on behalf of the accused, they would then have to decide whether at the time the clerk or servant on behalf of the accused became possessed of the counterfeit coins, the accused himself knew that they were counterfeit.

Per Mukerjee, J.—The statement of the Judge who presides at the trial as to what actually took place before him, is conclusive (a).

Mere non-direction is not necessarily misdirection (b).

S. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure has no application to a case reviewed under cl. 26 of the Letters Patent.

When a point or points of law have been reserved or have been certified by the Advocate General as erroneously decided or as worthy of further consideration, and the Court on review holds on the point of law in favour of the accused, it has been the practice of the Courts to consider the whole case on the evidence and to pass such sentence as shall seem right (c).

Quare. Whether these cases have not in effect been overruled by the decision of the judicial Committee in Subramanya v. King-Emperor, 25 M. 61.

The duty of the prosecution is, not to secure a conviction, but to assist the Court in arriving at the truth, and for that purpose to place before the Court all the material evidence at its disposal (d). Emperor v. Fateh Chand, 24 C.L.J. 400=21 C.W.N. 33 (F.B.).

(1) S. 3—Trading with enemy—Declaration of war, force of—Proclamation of 14th October 1914 whether retrospective—"Obtaining of goods" from enemy, what is—Goods "obtained in London"—Madras Courts, jurisdiction of—Acts done partly before and partly after the date of a penal statute, if constitute offence—Penal Code, S. 511—Attempt to commit offence—Possibility or success, if necessary—English and Indian Law difference between.

Even according to the common law of England, it is illegal to trade with an enemy (a).

The force of a declaration of war is equal to that of an Act of Parliament and contravening the provisions of a declaration prohibiting commercial intercourse with an enemy is a criminal offence (b).

A statute and especially a penal statute has no retrospective operation unless the intention of the Legislature that it should have such an effect is clearly indicated (c).

Per Wallis, C.J.—Acts which prior to the coming into force of a penal statute do not constitute an offence cannot become criminal unless all the ingredients of the offence are committed after the statute comes into force (d).

"Obtaining" includes procuring or ordering goods as well as taking delivery of them on arrival. Where goods are "obtained" from an enemy by the London Agent of a Madras firm, the offence is committed in London, and the Madras Courts have no jurisdiction.

For an attempt to be a criminal offence, it need not be shown that the attempted act was capable of performance or taking effect (e).

The Indian law on this point is the same as the law in England. Sending for goods from an enemy or enemy country would be an offence even if the goods sent for are the accused's own property (f).

Per Coutts-Trotter, J.—Whenever the Legislature declares a series of acts to constitute a crime, any person who has entered upon that series of acts must from that moment stay his hand and if he proceeds to the completion of the series, he is guilty of a crime (g).

Per Coutts-Trotter, J.—The same goods can be obtained twice within the meaning of S. 5 (7) of the Commercial Intercourse with Enemies Ordinance 1914 and the two "obtainings" would constitute two separate offences.

Semble.—In a country like India where the accused person is not afforded an opportunity of denying and explaining an accusation brought against him, it would be particularly wrong to act upon slender evidence. *Frederick Edmed Hooper v. S. 71 of the Penal Code indicates that when one act constitutes two offences, those offences must, if it is desired to inflict separate punishment for each offence, be offences against the same law. S. 26 of the General Clauses Act makes the point still more clear. In this case the accused by one act resisted the Police and endangered the lives of by-standers. One offence is under the Penal Code, and the other under the Railway Act. Held that the conviction and sentence under the Railway Act must be set aside, and that the conviction under S. 353 of the Penal Code may stand. Rahmatulla v. (19) Ss. 109, 120-B, 420—Abetment by conspiracy—Evidence Act, S. 10.

The accused M was a loader of the E. I. Railway Company. The case for the prosecution was that, when making out the weights in the consignment notes, he entered a weight less than the actual with the result that the Railway Company received a sum less than they were entitled to, and the other accused who were a firm of merchants paid, as consignees of goods, illegal gratification to M for this fraudulent work. It appeared that the name of M signed by himself appeared in one of the note books of the firm of D and J and the jama-kharach of the firm showed the payment of certain sums to accused M. The accused were tried and convicted by the Deputy Magistrate under Ss. 120-B, 420, 420/109, 161, 161/109, I.P.C., but the Sessions Judge in appeal, being of opinion that the conviction under S. 120-B could not stand on the ground that the offences were committed before that section came into force, took into consideration, only the direct evidence against M of making the endorsement of false weight and finding this to be insufficient acquitted all the accused.

Held—That the Session Judges rightly held that the conviction under S. 120-B, I.P.C.,

could not stand by reason of the fact that the offences were committed before that section came into force but he entirely omitted to notice that this was immaterial as the law of abetment includes abetment by conspiracy which was distinctly charged before the Magistrate under Ss. 420/109, I.P.C. That being so the circumstantial evidence of conspiracy to defraud the Railway Company was to be considered.

§ That, under S. 10 of the Evidence Act, the note books and jama-kharach of the firm of D and J could be used as evidence of abetment by conspiracy against M. King-Emperor v. Mommohan Roy, 20 C.W.N. 292 = 17 Cr. L.J. 439 = 35 Ind. Cas. 999.

(21) Ss. 120-A, 511—Criminal conspiracy, what is—Attempt to fabricate false evidence.

A conspiracy consists not merely in the intention of two or more, but in the agreement of two or more to do an unlawful act or to do a lawful act by unlawful means. So long as such a design rests in intention only, it is not indictable. When to agree to carry it into effect the very plot is an act in itself, and the act of each of the parties, promise against promise, actus contra actum, capable of being enforced if lawful, is punishable, if for a criminal object or for the use of criminal means.

Hence, where the accused were charged with conspiracy to bring about the conviction of certain persons, and the evidence showed that the conspiracy consisted in one of them taking photographs of the prisoners, another in arranging his camera and the third in arranging the prisoners themselves, held that the evidence was insufficient to prove a charge of conspiracy, as it was not proved that they took several steps tending to one obvious purpose and that, through a continued portion of time, they took steps leading to an end.

Held also that "in cases of an indictment for conspiracy when two people are indicted and are tried together, either both must be convicted or both must be acquitted."

Where, therefore, three persons were charged with having entered into a conspiracy and two of them were acquitted, the third person could not be convicted of conspiracy, whether the conviction be upon the verdict of a jury or upon his own confession.

Held, assuming a criminal intention to exist that photographing persons charged with the offence of dacoity, by itself, did not amount to attempting the offence of fabricating false evidence, within the meaning of S. 511, I.P.C. Gulab Singh v. Emperor, 14 A.L.J. 688 = 17 Cr. L.J. 431 = 35 Ind. Cas. 991.

(23) Ss. 120-B and 107—Proof of abetment of specified offence—Optional for prosecution to proceed under either section.

The words "where no express provision has been made in this Code for the punishment of such a conspiracy" in S. 120-B of the Code do not mean that when there is proof of an abetment of an offence the charge should be for such abetment. It only includes cases where there is express provision for the punishment of the particular conspiracy alleged, and the only such case in the Code is that under S. 121-A, Indian Penal Code. It is optional for the prosecution to proceed for abetment of the offence by conspiracy under S. 107 or for the conspiracy as a substantive offence, under S. 120-B. This is in accord with the law in England. Udhasing v. The Crown, 10 S.L.R. 69 = 17 Cr. L.J. 366 = 35 Ind. Cas. 670.

An assembly lawful in itself does not become unlawful merely by reason of its lawful acts exciting others to do unlawful acts (a).

An assembly of persons lawfully exercising their lawful rights would not become an unlawful assembly by repelling an attack made on them by persons who had no right to obstruct them, nor by exceeding the lawful use of their right of private defence (b).

Where an assembly, lawful in its origin, becomes an unlawful one, and both parties are accused of rioting, the trying Magistrate is bound to decide which party was the aggressor and how the riot actually arose.

Ordinarily there would be no presumption that the mere carrying of 'Sevali Kalis' would be unlawful (c). In re Mukka Muthrian, 16 Cr. L.J. 743 = 31 Ind. Cas. 343.

Where the use of violence and causing of hurt was the thing which turned the assembly of the accused persons into an unlawful assembly and turned the unlawful assembly into a riot.

Held, that separate convictions under S. 147 and under S. 325, I.P.C., with separate sentences attached is illegal (a).

Where, on appeal, the Sessions Judge set aside the conviction under S. 325, I.P.C., but, while maintaining the conviction under S. 147 increased the sentence under S. 147 to the aggregate of the sentences inflicted by the Magistrate under the two sections.

Held that S. 423, Crim. Pro. Code, 1898, does not authorise the Sessions Judge to enhance the sentence and that he cannot be said to have been simply "maintaining" the sentence (b). Mangal Singh v. The Crown, 31 P.R. 2916 (Cr.).

Where the accused has sown the crops on certain land and harvested them but subsequently after the harvest, the complainant's party took possession of the land and began to plough it during the absence of the accused party, and later the accused party went to the fields armed with sticks to recover possession from the opposite party.

Held that the persons who have been found to have reaped the crops and to have been in possession of the property must be deemed to be lawfully in possession and that the persons who disturbed their possession must be taken to be trespassers and that the conduct of the accused in going to the field armed with sticks in order to maintain their right to possession did not constitute the offence of being members of an unlawful assembly or of rioting since they must be presumed to have taken the sticks to protect themselves and not to use them on the opposite party without provocation. In re Samba Pillai, 4 L.W. 125 = (1915) 2 M.W.N. 213 = 17 Cr. fixed for hearing, the complainant's son appeared in Court, his father having died in the meantime, and asked to be allowed to go on with the case, but the trying Magistrate acquitted the accused under S. 247, Crim. Pro. Code, being of opinion that he had no option in the matter.

Held—That it is open to doubt whether S. 247, Crim. Pro. Code, was intended to apply to a case like the present. The section seems to apply to the case of a complainant who is alive but does not appear.

That in any view the trying Magistrate should have proceeded with the case.

That the practice of the High Courts has always been to refuse to interfere in revision with acquittals except for special reasons; but in the present case which was one of considerable importance involving the peace of the district and in which the Magistrate had not exercised his discretion and given reasons for refusing to go on with the case, the order of acquittal should be set aside. Damoo Sahu v. Held, that the accused were guilty of offences under Ss. 186 and 434 of the I.P.C., even though the land on which the Surveyor put the boundary marks was not included in the notification which authorised the Surveyor to carry on his operations (a).

The two petitioners were convicted under Ss. 197 and 198 and Ss. 197/109 and 198/109 respectively, the charge being that one of the petitioners purporting to represent the decree-holder in a certain suit signed and filed a petition in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, stating, contrary to fact, that the other petitioner who was the judgment-debtor had paid off the decretal amount to the decree-holder through him, her Ammuktear.

Held—that the petition in question filed before the Subordinate Judge was not a certificate within the purview of Ss. 197 and 198, I.P.C., neither of the requirements of a "certificate" within the meaning of the sections being satisfied in the case.

That there is no provision of law which requires a decree-holder or his agent to give or sign a certificate of payment or adjustment, nor is there any provision of law which makes the statement of the decree-holder or his agent as to payment or satisfaction admissible in evidence as such certificate, that is, without further proof.

Where the accused was convicted of an offence under S. 211, I.P.C., of having brought a maliciously false charge of riot, and the Magistrate, taking into consideration the age of the accused who was said to be about 65 years, imposed a fine of Rs. 1,000, held, in revision, that, although a somewhat severer punishment should be imposed, the discretion of the Magistrate ought not to be interfered with to enhance the sentence.

Ayling, J.—The offence is one which should ordinarily be punished with a substantive sentence of imprisonment. The age of the accused is a factor to be taken into consideration in deciding the nature of the sentence. But if for that reason the Magistrate deems fit only to impose a fine instead of imprisonment, the amount of the fine should be so determined as to inflict on the accused a punishment comparable with what he would suffer had he been a younger man. Emperor v. of opium and while in such custody he was rescued by the other petitioners. The first petitioner was convicted under S. 224, I.P.C., and the others under S. 225, I.P.C. The first petitioner was also separately prosecuted and convicted under S. 9 of the Opium Act, but the High Court in revision set aside that conviction on the ground that the substance seized from him was not opium within the meaning of the Act.

The right of private defence may arise when a person sees a man approaching him with a stick trailing in his hand, for he might expect the man to hit him with the stick. But when such a person claiming the right has another companion by his side who is himself properly armed, he should at least call on the person approaching him with the stick to drop down his stick before resorting to such a dangerous mode of exercising the right as firing a shot at such person.

Firing without giving such warning would be exceeding the right of private defence (a).

In a case of this kind a long term of imprisonment is not called for and the sentence of a year's imprisonment would be excessive.

Leniency may well be shown where the accused has acted in good faith for the protection of his person or property and has erred only in the degree of force or violence used or in acting too hastily, as in this case.

The accused was charged under Ss. 302/115 and 328/116, I.P.C., the case for the prosecution being that the accused suspecting an intrigue between her husband and a certain woman gave a powder to a girl with instructions to give it to the woman. Owing to the intervention of a relative of the girl, the powder was not given to the woman. The accused asked the girl to give her back the powder and the girl returned a portion of it. On the matter getting about in the village a Salish was summoned before whom the accused made a confession and produced the powder. The chemical analyser's report was that traces of white arsenic were found in the powder but it was not disclosed how much arsenic was there. It was found that the president and members of the Salish told the accused that if she confessed they would compromise the matter. The Sessions Judge in charging the jury said that the confession was not inadmissible because the members of the Salish were not persons in authority and the accused was not then charged with any offence.

Held—that the Sessions Judge misdirected the jury in the matter of the confession.

The president of a panchayat may be a person in authority within the meaning of S. 24 of the Evidence Act, and to tell the jury that he was not, was clearly erroneous, the matter depending on a question of fact, viz., whether the confession was caused by any inducement, threat or promise, having reference to the charge against the accused (a).

That the Salish being summoned to consider the case which was being made against the accused, she was before the Salish on that charge and the Sessions Judge was wrong in directing otherwise.

That, having regard to the inducement offered by the president and members of the Salish to the accused, it is extremely doubtful whether the confessions should have been allowed to be placed before the jury at all. It certainly ought not to have been placed before them without an explanation as to how they should value it, having regard to the circumstances in which it was made.

That the chemical analysis not disclosing how much arsenic was found in the powder, there was no evidence on the record against the accused as to the amount of poison which was proposed to be administered and it was doubtful whether the case would come under S. 302 or S. 328, I.P.C. The King-Emperor v. The child was carefully wrapped up and a bottle of milk was left by its side. The question whether the taking of a minor girl out of the custody of her lawful guardian was or was not complete at a given moment is a question for determination with reference to the circumstances proved in each particular case. It may no doubt be difficult in some cases of kidnapping from lawful guardianship to determine the precise moment at which the taking is complete. Speaking generally, the keeping of the guardian would be at an end when the person of the minor had been transferred from the custody of the guardian or some person on his behalf into the custody of some person not entitled to custody of the minor. Gurdit Singh and Jawala v. On the way she was induced by K to accompany him and he deceitfully took her to a village in Aligarh where she was kept in the house of K's brother. Here negotiations were set on foot by K to re-marry the girl as a Jat, but on the girl disclosing her identity to enquirers, K left the village. Thereupon K's brother took her to the thana, and pending enquiry by the police she lived for a month at his place.

Held that K was guilty of kidnapping, inasmuch as, although the girl left home of her own accord, she did not cease to be under the guardianship of the husband, her lawful guardian, but that K's brother was not guilty of any offence as he had done nothing in furtherance of a common intention. Karan Singh v. Failure to state in any substantial form the nature and particulars of the offence alleged against the accused would in some cases be a fatal defect which would vitiate the whole proceedings. Where an offence charged involves consequences which may be stated in a general form, such as may arise in a case of arson where a man may by one act of arson set fire and destroy several stacks of several persons, no particular is required, the nature of the offence being sufficiently stated by the date, time and place of the setting of fire; but extortion or obtaining money from persons by unlawful means involves stating with some approach to accuracy the approximate amounts alleged to have been (159) S. 399—'Preparation,' what amounts to—Duty of prosecution.

In order to commit the offence of preparation, it is not necessary that the prisoners should have done an overt act towards the commission of dacoity. What the law contemplates is that they should have done some act to get ready for a dacoity, and the collection of men from different villages, coupled with the collection of arms, sufficiently proves the required preparation. The mere assemblage to commit dacoity does not amount to preparation, but when it is found, as in this case, that the members of the gang had taken, into their possession instruments for house-breaking and arms for the purposes of offence and defence, and they had actually proceeded to a place near the scene of contemplated dacoity. Courts will be justified in holding that there was not only a mere assemblage, but that the members of the assembly had got ready for the actual commission of dacoity. It is not necessary that the prosecution should point out the exact part taken by each member of the gang as regards preparation, provided that it is shown that the accused were members of a gang which had made in fact preparation for dacoity. *Karmun v. to sustain a conviction on a charge under S. 401, Indian Penal Code :—

- i. That there existed a gang of dacoits ;
- ii. That those persons were associated for purpose of committing theft or robbery ;
- iii. That theft or robbery was to be committed habitually and
- iv. That the accused was a member of the gang.

Once it was established that a gang was formed for the purpose of habitually committing theft, all persons who thereafter joined that gang in one or more cases of theft came within the purview of S. 401. This does not mean that any person who joins the members of such a gang in committing theft becomes ipso facto a member of that gang. It should be taken to mean that any person, who knowing of the existence of such a gang joins that gang for the purpose of committing even one theft, is guilty under S. 401. An accused person may have taken part in a theft with one or more members of a gang without himself becoming member of that gang.

An association with the members of a gang at fairs, weddings and liquor shops cannot be presumed against the accused as for the purpose of committing theft or robbery. Wasawa Singh v. The Crown, 110 P.L.R. 2916=47 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.)=17 Cr. L.J. 443=35 Ind. Cas. 1003.

In order to sustain a charge of the offence of receiving stolen property under S. 411 of the Penal Code, it is necessary to prove by satisfactory evidence that the property in question is stolen property and further that the accused received the same believing it to be stolen property. (171) S. 411—Receiving stolen property—Proof—"Believe", meaning of.

In a charge under S. 411 of the Penal Code for receiving stolen property it is not sufficient for the prosecution to show that the accused person was careless or that he had reason to suspect that the property was stolen or that he did not make sufficient enquiry to ascertain whether the same had been honestly acquired. The word "believe" is a very much stronger word than "suspect," and it involves the necessity of showing that the circumstances were such that a reasonable man must have felt convinced in his mind that the property with which he was dealing must be stolen property (a). *Muhammad Ibrahim v. (174) Ss. 411, 457, 380—Evidence of house-breaking—Surrender of stolen articles by accused—Possession unexplained—Offence.

In this case there was no direct evidence connecting any of the accused persons with the breaking into the house or the actual removal of the articles alleged to have been stolen. But the properties were recovered soon afterwards (i.e., four days after the theft) in consequence of information which the Police received.

The accused persons did not claim the properties as their own and there was no satisfactory explanation given by them for their possession of them.

Held that this was a case in which the accused committed an offence under S. 411 of the Indian Penal Code and that there should be a conviction under that section and not under Ss. 457 or 380 of the Code. In re Turimella Kurmanna, 17 Cr. L.J. 179.

(177-a) Ss. 415 and 420—Dissolution of partnership—Collection of old debt thereafter—Omission to pay to other partner—Cheating.

A concealment can be said to be dishonest only if the person was under a duty to disclose the facts.

The accused was a partner in commission business. The accused and his co-partner dissolved the business by a deed of dissolution, the accused undertaking not to interfere with the Company's business without the knowledge of his co-partner. After the date of the deed of dissolution, the accused collected certain outstanding due to the Company and executed a receipt therefor. He, however, did not pay the amount collected to his co-partner. Held that the act of the accused did not amount to an offence of cheating. There was no evidence of any active deception practised by the accused on the person who paid the money. There was nothing to show in the deed of dissolution that the accused should not collect the old debts of the company. It was not shown that the accused acted fraudulently or dishonestly in thinking that he had still the right to collect the debts. In re Paruchery Venkatappaya Choudari, 36 Ind. Cas. 872.

The accused in this case owed the complainants Rs. 650 and, in order to create evidence that he had paid that Rs. 650, filled a registered envelope with blank sheets of paper and posted it to the complainants after insuring it for Rs. 650. The complainant gave an acknowledgment of receipt to the Post Office.

Held, that (1) the above facts did not amount to a complete offence of cheating but that they amounted to an attempt to cheat.

(2) That an acknowledgment of receipt of an insured parcel is not a valuable security. It is merely evidence that a parcel of some sort was delivered to the complainants and cannot operate as a discharge of any liability and is not therefore a valuable security.

The accused, an agricultural labourer, was cutting arhar in a field which contained wheat also. A cow belonging to a passing herd in charge of a grazier entered the field and the accused drove her out. When the animal had reached the boundary of the field and joined the rest of the herd, the accused threw two stones each weighing about $\frac{1}{2}$ seer at it with the result that one of its hind legs was fractured. The fracture was shown by the medical evidence to have been the result of a blow from a stone. Held, (1) that the accused committed the offence of mischief, (2) to constitute the offence of mischief, it would suffice if the person who caused the injury knew that he was likely by his act to cause damage to any person.

In such circumstances an intention to cause the injury might be presumed. (a)

In the course of an action done in right of private defence, no more harm should be inflicted than is necessary for the purpose of defence. Once the cow had left the field, the accused being still at hand, no need for violence remained.

It may be that impounding cattle which trespass upon crops affords no adequate satisfaction to the injured agriculturists; but that is no sound reason for refusing to treat as mischief, injury deliberately and unnecessarily inflicted on the offending animal (b) Emperor v. Criminal trespass is an offence committed by entering into or remaining on property in the possession of another with intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult, or annoy any person in possession. The possession contemplated is actual possession and is not merely a power of control such as a trust scheme may vest in the trustees.

Where property is held in actual physical possession by one person I think that is the only person whose feelings have to be considered under S. 441, Indian Penal Code. Otherwise we might have the juridical possessor prosecuting for criminal trespass and the actual possessor compounding the offence under S. 345, Code of Criminal Procedure, a result which could never have been contemplated by the Legislature. The accused purchased revolvers and cartridges from three firms in Calcutta and on each occasion signed the certificate (which according to the usual procedure in respect of the sale of arms and ammunition a purchaser is required to sign at the time of purchase) in a false name and giving a false address. These certificates are required for the identification of the purchaser and the weapons purchased. The accused purported to purchase the revolvers and cartridges for his own use. It was admitted that if he had given his real name and address he would have had no difficulty in purchasing the arms and ammunition:

Held—That it may be that the action of the accused was not dishonest within the meaning of Ss. 23 and 24, I.P.C., but he acted fraudulently and the signing of the certificates in a false name and giving a false address amounted to forgery on the part of the accused within the meaning of Ss. 463 and 464, I.P.C. P.L. The accused was convicted under S. 471 read with S. 466, I.P.O., for filing a proceeding under S. 107, Crim. Pro. Evidence was adduced of a number of other registration books containing forgeries relating to documents in respect of the same property. There was no evidence connecting the present accused with the makers of these forgeries.

Held, that the evidence was wholly inadmissible.

That a series of transactions which are not the offence charged can only be used as evidence of the intention of the person who forged the document and not as evidence of forgeries.

That it is extremely doubtful whether the mere filing of a copy, of which the original is alleged to be a forgery, is user of a forged document. Krishna Govinda Pal v King-Emperor, 20 C.W.N. 262=43 C.783=17 Cr. L.J. 130=33 Ind. Cas. 306.

The petitioner was convicted of an offence under S. 498, I.P.C. The case for the prosecution was that the complainant's wife was shut up in a house of one of the accused. The woman was not discovered there by the police. Next day it was found that there was a hole in the wall between the accused's house and the adjoining house which belonged to an uncle of the petitioner. There was no direct evidence as to original abduction. The only other evidence was of two witnesses who said they had seen the woman and the petitioner with his two co-accused going away from the village 3 days after the abduction. The petitioner's co-accused were discharged and acquitted.

Held, that benefit of doubt must be given to the petitioner. As to the evidence of witnesses who deposed that they had seen the woman in company with the accused, the Chief Court observed that such evidence is of the sort usually brought to bolster up cases under S. 498. *Nawab v. CHEVIS, J.

(221) Ss. 498, 869—Complaint—Jurisdiction—Code of Criminal Procedure, Ss. 169, 238 (3).

Where, on a charge under S. 366, Penal Code, the police took up the proceedings in which the husband of the woman appeared as a witness, and he asked the Magistrate to drop the proceedings thereunder but said that he intended to prosecute the accused under S. 498, Penal Code, and to get him punished, held that there was a "complaint" inasmuch as he made an allegation before the Magistrate that the offence should be enquired into. *Bhawani Dat v. (223) S. 499, Excep. (8)—Accusation against any person to one who has lawful authority over that person—Good faith.

A defamatory statement made without express malice, and with a bona fide belief in its truth against one whose conduct in the respect defamed has caused the accused any injury, to one whose duty it is to enquire into and redress such injury falls within Excep. (9) to S. 499 of the Penal Code. It is not necessary for the accused in such a case to show that the imputations are true in fact. He has only to show that he acted with due care and attention. Nga Poona v. King-Emperor, 9 Bur. L.T. 136 = 8 L.B.R. 440 = 17 Cr. L.J. 213 = 34 Ind. Cas. 325.

TWOMEY, J.

(224) S. 499, Excepts. (8), (9)—Defamation—Complaint to Police Constable not privileged—Privilege.

Parties before the Court, counsel and witnesses are all absolutely privileged. But that principle cannot be extended to the case of the complaint to a constable. (a)

The two ingredients to be established under S. 499 (8) of the Penal Code are the preferring of a complaint in good faith and preferring it to a person who has authority over the person complained against. These ingredients should be affirmatively established by the person who wants to bring himself within Excep. 8, and that is what S. 105 of the Evidence Act lays down (b). In re Kakumara Anjaneyalu, 17 Cr. L.J. 381 = 35 Ind. Cas. 813.

(226) S. 504—Insult, ingredients essential for a conviction—Breach of peace, if actual, necessary—Crim. Pro. Code, S. 438.

The ingredients essential for a conviction under S. 504, Penal Code, are threefold: first, intentional insult, secondly, provocation therefrom, and, thirdly, intention that such provocation should cause, or knowledge that such provocation was likely to cause the person so insulted to break the public peace or to commit any other offence.

Insult may be inferred not merely from the words used, but also from the tone and manner in which the words are spoken.

The law makes punishable an insulting provocation which under ordinary circumstances would cause a breach of the peace to be committed, even though in the particular case the person insulted does not commit a breach of the peace. *Jaykrishna Samanta v. Railways Act (1890).

(1) Ss. 68, 112, offence under, essence of—Intention—Presumption of knowledge.

S. 112 of the Railways Act makes it an offence in any person to enter a railway carriage in contravention of S. 68 of the Act with intent to defraud a Railway administration and S. 68 provides that no person shall, without the permission of a Railway servant, enter any carriage on a Railway for the purpose of travelling therein as a passenger unless he has with him a proper pass or ticket.

The rules of the Railway Company are that a ticket is only available for the particular railway journey for which it is issued and if a person is unable to travel, by the train by which he intended to travel then he ought to go back to the Station Master for a refund of the money he paid for the ticket.

The essence of an offence under that S. 112 of the Railways Act consists of an intent to defraud the Railway Company.

Where a person is charged under the section for having travelled with a ticket issued the previous day, until there is evidence from which it could be clearly inferred that he knew that the ticket had been used before, it is very difficult to say that there is anything from which an intention to cheat the Railway Company could be inferred.

Even supposing that a breach of the rules was committed and the man knew that he ought not to have travelled on the second day, it is very difficult to say that he intended to cheat the Railway Company as long as he held a ticket which represented the fare paid. Manindro Nath Mitter v. Shanars are not a "servile caste" but one on the members of which it is improper to inflict so degrading a punishment as confinement in stocks. (a)

Shanars do not belong to "any of the lower castes of the people on whom it may not be improper to inflict so degrading a punishment" as putting in stocks under S. 10, Reg. IX of 1816.

A Mala, a Hindu pariah, was a person on whom it may not ordinarily be improper to inflict so degrading a sentence, but it would be otherwise if it could be shown that on adopting Christianity he adopted also the Christian moral and social standards instead of those of his caste.

In the case of Shanars they would, at least at the present day, regard themselves degraded by the infliction of such punishment. That is one important test for determining the question whether the second condition of the section applies. In re Madasamy Nadan, 17 Cr. L.J. 4=32 Ind. Cas. 131.

S. 439 of the Crim. Pro. Code, does not confer upon any High Court any power to take any proceedings: it only sets out the powers of revision that the High Court possesses in cases which have come before it.

If an applicant can show to the Court by copies of the proceedings or perhaps by affidavit, that the Magistrate in question was not a first class Magistrate or a Sub-Divisional Magistrate exercising jurisdiction, or that there was no information that a dispute existed likely to cause breach of the peace concerning any land or water or boundaries thereof then he will have shown prima facie to the Court that the proceedings in question were not proceedings under Chap. XII at all, whether or no the Magistrate might have called them so, and in that case the Court of the Judicial Commissioner would have power under S. 435, cl. (1) of the Crim. Pro. Code to call for the record and satisfy itself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of the order passed and as to the regularity of the proceedings.

There is nothing in S. 435 (3), Crim. Pro. Code, to prevent the Court of the Judicial Commissioner interfering in proceedings which purported to be proceedings under Chap. XII in a case where the Magistrate has initiated the proceedings without jurisdiction to do so.

A mere omission by the Magistrate to set out in the preliminary order that he was satisfied that a dispute existed does not affect his jurisdiction. Udal Bhan Pratap Singh v. Ram Samujh, 19 O.C. 136.

See CRIM. PRO. CODE, Ss. 195, 197, 476.

(1) Sanction after complaint was brought, not good.

Held, that a sanction to prosecute obtained after bringing a complaint for any of the offences specified in S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, 1898, is bad in law, consequently a conviction based upon such a complaint is illegal and is liable to be set aside even on revision. Raja Ram v. The Crown, 33 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.)=17 Cr. Sanction to Prosecute—(Continued).

(3) Crim. Pro. Code, S. 195—Order by Collector suo motu for prosecution of person complaining against his subordinate.

It is not essential to the vitality of a sanction that it should be addressed to a particular complainant, for the sanction only removes the bar put up by S. 195 on the jurisdiction of the Court. But sanction implies the existence of a person who desires to prosecute, and it is not desirable that the sanction should be an abstract thing which may float about the world like bit of thistle down until it comes into contact with some possible prosecutor.

A sanction is not a direction to prosecute. It leaves the private prosecutor to exercise his unfettered discretion as to whether he will proceed or not.

When the Collector orders a prosecution he puts himself in the position of a prosecutor, and, by that very fact, disqualified from performing the judicial or quasi-judicial function of deciding whether to grant a sanction or not.

Where, on a complaint being made to the Collector of a District against one of his subordinates, the Collector, suo motu, passed an order for the prosecution of the applicant under S. 182, Indian Penal Code: Held that the order was merely an executive order and not a sanction.

Where the Collector acted suo motu and without notice to the complainant, it would be merely an executive order. As such, it is a mere brutum fulmen and has not the effect of a sanction. Dodumal v. The Crown, 10 S.L.R. 65=17 Cr. L.J. 305=35 Ind. Cas. 481.

(4) Crim. Pro. Code, Ss. 109, 195, 439—Sanction—False statement before a Judicial Officer of one District making inquiry into the sufficiency of security under S. 109, Crim. Pro. Code, taken by a Magistrate of another District—S. 193 of Penal Code.

Held, that a Magistrate of one District has no jurisdiction to make an inquiry into the sufficiency of security taken under S. 109, Crim. Pro. Code, 1898, from a vagrant by a Magistrate of another District even if the latter authorizes the former to do so, as a Magistrate of District has no power to delegate his powers to a Magistrate of another District, consequently no person making a false statement in that inquiry can be prosecuted for perjury under S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code. In such a case the sanction granted by the inquiring Judicial Officer to prosecute the person under S. 193, Indian Penal Code, for intentionally making a false statement before him is illegal and is liable to be set aside even on revision (a). Khuda Bakhsh v. The Crown, 52 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.).

(1) S. 62 (b), and Sch. I, Art. 35—Amaldustak, whether it requires stamp—Conviction under S. 62 (b), if maintainable—Schedule of Stamp Act, if exhaustive.

The schedule attached to the Stamp Act must be treated as exhaustive.

An agreement for a lease, whereby no rent is reserved and no premium paid or money advanced, is not included in the schedule and does not require a stamp.

Held, on a construction of amaldustak which was for a term of seven years but wherein no rent was fixed, that the document did not require stamp, and so the conviction of the executant of the document under S. 62 (b) of the Stamp Act was set aside. *Mussammat Sunder Kuer v. (a) and (b); and thus the mere fact that a person puts a stamp on a document, which he knows not of proper value, would not bring the case within cl. (c) of the section (a). Chhak

Stay of Criminal Proceedings.

(1) Stay of criminal proceeding—Institution of civil suit after criminal prosecution—Incompetency of Sessions Judge to stay criminal proceedings—Opinion of Civil Court not binding on Criminal Court—Revision—S. 439 of Act V of 1899.

Held, that a Sessions Judge has no power at all to stay criminal proceedings pending before a Magistrate subordinate to him.

Held, also, that the decision of a Civil Court, especially of a Small Cause Court, can have no influence on the proceedings in a Criminal Court.

Held, further that criminal proceedings are not to be stayed where a civil suit in connection therewith has been instituted long after the prosecution was started. Tirath Ram v. Arura Mal, 9 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.)

(2) Staying criminal proceedings—Charge under Ss. 406 and 420, Penal Code—Several persons claiming the property—Civil suit brought by the accused after the charge was framed against him that the property belonged to him—Ss. 344 and 439—Crim. Pro. Code—Where proceedings are to be stayed.

Stay of Criminal Proceedings—(Concluded).

Held, that, to avoid a regrettable conflict of decisions between the Civil and Criminal Courts the criminal proceedings in a case under Ss. 406 and 430, Penal Code, should be stayed where several persons have turned up to claim the property, the subject of the charge, and the accused has brought a civil suit to declare that the property belongs to him without unnecessary delay.

In this case the civil suit was brought on 4th October after the charge was framed against the accused on 3rd October, and the accused's excuse was that the Civil Courts were closed during September.

Held, also, that it is not advisable to stay criminal proceedings as a matter of course, but each case should be duly dealt with according to its own particular circumstances. Nur Din v. The Crown, 8 P.W.R. 1916 (Cr.) = 17 Cr. L. J. 205 = 34 Ind. Cas. 317.

- (3) Stay of proceedings in a criminal case—Practice—Point of issue to be appropriately decided by Civil Court—Decision of a Civil Court affecting a criminal case—Power of Court under S. 344 of Crim. Pro. Code—Revision—S. 439 of the same Code.

Held, that the parties should not be encouraged to resort to the Criminal Courts in cases in which the point at issue between them is one which can more appropriately be decided by a Civil Court (a).

Held, also, that a Court of Justice has inherent jurisdiction to stay proceedings in a case pending before it, and S. 344, Crim. Pro. Code, empowers a Criminal Court to adjourn an inquiry or trial for any reasonable cause.

Held, further, that, although a decision of a Civil Court is not technically binding upon a Criminal Court, but it is in favour of an accused, it creates such a doubt in his guilt that it would almost become impossible for the latter Court not to give him its benefit. *Pars Ram v. Surety.

See CRIM. PRO. CODE, Ss. 106 to 110, 112, 114, 121, 514.

- (1) Surety, fitness of—Immoveable properties, if to be considered.

The sufficiency of a surety should be considered from a general view of his stability and the property which he holds.

The sufficiency of surety is not to be regarded simply from the point of view of the moveable property which he possesses. It is obvious that a man may possess Rs. 1,000 to-day when he passes a bond and get rid of it to-morrow when the bond is passed and have no property against which the Court can proceed. On the other hand, if he has immoveable property, though that cannot be attached under S. 514, Crim. Pro. Code, it is nevertheless a much better safeguard. A man can always raise money on his immoveable property if it is not encumbered; and he would probably prefer to do that than go to jail in the event of his bond being forfeited. Per *Chitty, J. See MAGISTRATE, JURISDICTION OF.

(1) Transfer, grounds for—Expression of opinion by Judge in counter case—Judge's competence to try subsequent case—Principles that influence the Court in granting or refusing application for transfer.

The basis of all applications for transfer of criminal cases must be that the accused must have a reasonable apprehension that he will not receive a fair trial (a).

The accused has no reasonable ground for apprehension that he will not have a fair trial, merely because the Judge in a former proceeding, arising out of a counter case to the one now coming before him, as expressed certain views upon the evidence in the former case as to which of the two versions is correct.

Judges are presumed to be upright men who will approach each case from the point of view of that case alone, and not permit their minds to be affected in any way by anything that has gone before that case.

Judges are not believed to be so easily prejudiced, because one incidental part of the case before them has been decided in a previous case; they will shut their eyes entirely to anything that may be alleged in favour of the accused in a subsequent trial.

Held that a Judge is not incompetent to try a case of rioting merely because he has tried and decided a counter-case and expressed an opinion. Amrit Mondal v. King-Emperor, 1 Pat. L.J. 899.

It is illegal for a Magistrate to commit for trial to a Court of Session a case which he is competent to try, unless he is of opinion that the offence under enquiry cannot be adequately punished by him.

When it is expedient for the ends of justice that a case triable by a Magistrate should be tried by a Court of Session, the Chief Court can make an order under S. 526 (1)(e) and (iv), Crim. Pro. Code.

A Magistrate committed to the Court of Sessions two cases, one of dacoity exclusively triable by a Court of Session, the other of offences under Ss. 355 and 448 of the Penal Code which he himself was competent to try; his reason for committing the latter case was that it was counter to the former, the prosecution witnesses in one case figuring as defence witnesses in the other and the accused persons in one as witnesses in the other.

The charge of dacoity being withdrawn in the Court of Sessions, the Sessions Judge referred the case to the Chief Court to quash the commitment.

Held, that the commitment was illegal and the case should be tried by the Magistrate himself, the circumstances not requiring an order by the Chief Court under S. 526. In re Dawood Khan, 20 Mys. 319.

Regulation VII of 1906 (Mysore Municipal).

The procedure laid down in S. 96 explained. An intimation or application by an intending builder must conform to the requirements prescribed if it is to be regarded as sufficient notice under sub-S. (1). Where, therefore, it is unaccompanied by the plan prescribed by bye-law, it cannot be regarded as a valid notice for the purpose of enabling the applicant under sub-S. (4) to proceed with the work as being in accordance with the specification contained in a notice given by him.

The powers of a Municipal Council in dealing with a notice given under sub-S. (1) must be exercised as defined in sub-Ss. (2) and (3), with strict reference to the work proposed in the notice. It is not competent to a Municipal Council to refuse to deal with such a notice until some formality not required by the Municipal Regulation is satisfied; and such a refusal may be ignored by the applicant as if the Municipal Council had taken no action on his application. *M. (N B) — (1) This publication embodies Cases from the Reports marked above with asterisks.

(2) In the Punjab Record and the Punjab Law Reporter, the cases are known by their numbers and not by the pages where they are printed; (e.g.) 4 P.R. 1911 would mean Case No. 4, in the Punjab Record of 1911. The same explanation applies to the Punjab Law Reporter also. It has also to be remarked that the Punjab Record and the Punjab Law Reporter have been divided into two sections, Civil and Criminal.

(3) For Cases from Reports other than those published in India, the volumes and pages are printed exactly in the manner they are to be found in the original cases wherein they are referred to.

THE CURRENT INDEX OF INDIAN CASES, 1916.

FINAL PART.

SECTION II—(CIVIL CASES).

Abadi.

(1) Abadi — Malguzari village in Central Provinces — Landlord proprietor of the whole site — Tenant — Bare licenses — Transfer by tenant — Whether binding on the landlord — Express or implied permission of latter allowing transferee to occupy — Rights of such transferee — Prescription by latter — Nature of acts necessary to show adverse title. Narain v. Behari, 11 N.L.R. 126 = 31 Ind. Cas. 307. See Final Part, 1915, Col. 2.

(2) Non-proprietor living outside abadi — Whether can be said to have abandoned site inside the abadi. See ABANDONMENT, No. 2, 108 P.W.R. 1916.

(3) See BURDEN OF PROOF, No. 6 (5), 32 Ind. Cas. 370.

Abandonment.

(1) Second appeal — Finding of fact — Adverse possession — Abandonment of land — Grounds — Misunderstanding of facts.

The Courts dismissed the plaintiff's suit for possession of a certain land having found that the plaintiff's father had abandoned the same, for there was a mortgage by plaintiff's father in favour of the defendant which he had failed to redeem.

Held, that the alleged mortgage was not by plaintiff's father, nor of his share, and, even if the mortgage were by him, it would not establish abandonment within the period of limitation prescribed for redemption. The case having been decided on a misunderstanding of facts was remanded for re-decision. Muhammad Chiragh Shah v. Choghatta, 99 P.L.R. 1916 = 86 Ind. Cas. 221.

SCOTT-SMITH, J.

(2) Limitation — Abandonment — Adverse possession — Neighbour tethering cattle — Non-proprietor residing outside the village — Its effect on his residential house in the village which has fallen down — Possession goes with title — Art. 142 of Act IX of 1908.

A non-proprietor by merely living outside the actual village abadi cannot be said to have abandoned the site inside the abadi on which he once had his residential house which had fallen down and had not been rebuilt for many years.

The rule laid down in Art. 237 of Mr. Rattigan's Digest of the Punjab Customary Law, even if applicable in such a case, is of no avail where the proprietary body have made no attempt to enforce the penalty mentioned therein.

The fact that one of the proprietors, whose house is near, began to use the vacant site by tethering his cattle there does not make any difference.

Possession in the case of vacant site is presumed to go with the title, and its mere use by a neighbour for the purpose of tethering his cattle thereon cannot be regarded as adverse possession and consequently Art. 142 of Act IX of 1908 does not apply. Lachman Das v. Narsingh Das, 108 P.W.R. 1916 = 101 P.L.R. 1916 = 36 Ind. Cas. 207.

CHEVIS, J.

(3) Ground of relief.

It is open to a party who claims a relief on more grounds than one, to give up any of the grounds at any time he likes before the case is decided. Horde v. Muhammad Abdul Hasan Khan, 30 Ind. Cas. 207.

STUART and KANHAIYA LAL, A.J. CS.

(4) Abandonment — Rights of lessee's transferee — Whether extinguished by abandonment. See BEN. ACT VIII OF 1885 (BENGAL TENANCY), No. 43, 33 Ind. Cas. 98.

(5) Of tenancy. See BEN. ACT VIII OF 1885 (BENGAL TENANCY), No. 44, 30 Ind. Cas. 583.

Abandonment—(Concluded).

(5-a) Of holding—Cultivation by sub-tenant—Ejectment. See U.P. ACT II OF 1901 (AGRA TENANCY), No. 12 (a), 32 Ind. Cas. 586.

(6) Requisites of. See U.P. ACT II OF 1901 (AGRA TENANCY), No. 37, 33 Ind. Cas. 488.

(7) See ADVERSE POSSESSION, No. 5, 19 O.C. 374.

Abatement.

(1) Appeal—Death of one of several respondents pending appeal—Rights of respondents joint—Failure to bring on record legal representative within time—Effect—Abatement of whole suit—Ignorance of law—No excuse—Failure to prove impossibility to become aware of respondent's death—Dismissal of suit.

Where, pending an appeal against a decree dismissing a suit for possession of lands, one of the defendants died and his legal representative was not brought on record within a period of six months from the date of his death.

Held, that the appeal abated in toto and against all the respondents (a).

Where the interests of defendants-respondents are joint and the decree could not be reversed without the representative of the deceased respondent being brought on record, the whole appeal must abate (b).

Held that, in the present case, as the plaintiff's suit could not have proceeded at all unless the deceased respondent in his capacity as co-mortgagee had been impleaded in the first instance, the lower Court was right in holding that the whole suit abated.

Ignorance of law is not a sufficient excuse for failing to bring the legal representative of a deceased respondent within time (c).

Held that, in the present case, the plaintiff failed to prove that he was not aware of the death of the respondent until such time as it was practically impossible for him to file an application within the expiry of six months from the date of his death. Inayat v. Ganga, 3 P.R. 1916=32 Ind. Cas. 829.

(2) Abatement same as dismissal of a suit—Decree—Appeal.

Sadasiva Iyer, J.—Where there is an appeal to the District Court and a second appeal to the High Court, S. 115, Civ. Pro. Code, cannot apply.

An order declaring a suit to have abated is a decree from which an appeal lies. The practice in the Madras Courts is that, when a suit has abated, the Court also ipso facto dismisses the suit, that is, it takes it off from the file of pending suits. An abatement of a suit has the same effect as the dismissal of it. The abatement of the suit and the passing of an order which has the force of a decree dismissing the suit, are treated as closely connected, if not identical, proceedings.

Abatement—(Concluded).

The Rules Committee might make this clear by the enactment of a rule that, in cases where suits have abated without the necessary or formal order, a decree dismissing the suit should be drawn up as on the date of the abatement, unless the abatement is set aside by appropriate proceedings.

The power under S. 15 of the Charter Act can only be exercised in extraordinary proceedings and subject to the enactments of the Indian Legislature.

Moore, J.—The District Munsif's order dismissing the suit on the ground that it has abated under O. XXII, r. 4 (3) of the Civ. Pro. Code by reason of the application which had been made under sub-r. (1) of O. XXII, r. 4 of the Civ. Pro. Code to make the legal representative of the deceased defendant a party not having been represented within the time fixed by law is a decree and appealable as such. The legislature intended that an abatement of a suit has the same effect as the dismissal of it. Suppu Nayakan v. Perumal Chetty, (1916) M. W.N. 301=30 M.L.J. 456=19 M.L.T. 364=34 Ind. Cas. 372.

SADASIVA AIYAR and MOORE, JJ.

(3) Decree for damages for slander reversed in appeal—Death of defendant during pendency of second appeal—Appeal whether abates.

Plaintiff obtained a decree for damages for slander. On appeal this decree was set aside and the suit was dismissed. Plaintiff then appealed to the Chief Court and, after the second appeal was filed, defendant died.

Held, that the appeal did not abate. Nga Kyet Sein v. Mi Kyn Mya, U.B.R. 1916, 1st Qr., 105=9 Bur. L.T. 38=34 Ind. Cas. 249.

See ABATEMENT OF SUIT.

See CIV. PRO. CODE (1908), O. XXII.

- (1) Abatement—Action for malicious prosecution—Plaintiff dying pending his appeal—Action abates—Probate and Administration Act, S. 89—"Other personal injuries not causing death"—Scope of—Construction of statutes—Rule regarding.

Where a suit for damages for malicious prosecution was dismissed without costs and the plaintiff died pending his appeal, held that the appeal abated and that the plaintiff's legal representatives were not entitled to prosecute the appeal.

The rule that personal actions abate with the death of the person injuring or injured is a well-established rule applying equally to India as to England.

S. 89 of the Probate and Administration Act has no direct application to cases where the legal representatives being the undivided sons of the deceased had not and were not in a position to take out probate or letters of administration.

The words "other personal injuries not causing death" in S. 89 of the Probate and Administration Act do not exclusively refer to injuries similar to assault only, but also include injuries similar to defamation, such as injuries caused by malicious prosecution, and wrongful search (a).

The first rule of construction of a statute is to give the words their ordinary and natural meaning. But it is also a recognized canon of construction that where the language is not clear and unequivocal the Legislature should not be taken to have intended any substantial alteration of the existing law by words of doubtful import.

Ordinarily where several specific instances are mentioned followed by a general term with the word 'other' prefixed to it, where the rule of ejusdem generis is applied, the meaning of the general term should be settled with reference to all the instances preceding it. Motiram v. Samraji, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 280=31 M.L.J. 772.

Abwab.

- (1) Moharrari lease—Provision for enhanced rent for collection charges—Construction of contract.

The question whether any particular item is or is not an abwab must depend upon the construction of the contract of lease in each case, and the question in each case is whether the sum claimed is really part of the rent agreed upon to be paid as consideration for the lease.

A kabuliat after describing the land let out stated the sudder jama as Rs. 21 7-3, and the enhanced rent for a badish (collection charges) as Rs. 3-1-0, the total jama being described as Rs. 24-8-3. The kabuliat provided for the collection of the aforesaid rent according to the kists mentioned above on failure of payment of the rent within the time limited. Held that the sum of Rs. 3 1-0 was on a proper construction of the kabuliat a part of the consideration for the lease and was as much part of the rent as the sudder jama and was not an abwab. The stipulation for the payment of the collection charges is not a stipulation, or reservation for the payment of arbitrary or indefinite cesses, but was a definite clause in the engagement contracted between the parties which had to be given effect to. The landlord was therefore entitled to the amount so claimed by him as collection charges. Upendra Lal Gupta v. Ataula, 36 Ind. Cas. 404.

(2) Mutual, open and current accounts—Limitation—Test to be applied—Balance—Its evidential value in case of literate and illiterate person—Interest and compound interest on payments and advance made and balance—Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 57 and 85.

Art. 85, Limitation Act (1908) does not apply to a case where (a) the plaintiff alone has been the striker making advances and receiving part payments from time to time and the balance has always been in plaintiff's favour, (b) no mutual and reciprocal demands have taken place, and (c) the defendant has never been in a position to make any demand.

A suit for recovering money on account of advances made by the plaintiff to the defendant in kind (grain) and cash is not governed by Art. 57 of the said Limitation Act.

A suit based on accounts leading up to a balance struck is maintainable, but not on the balance itself.

There is no general rule to the effect that a debtor cannot go behind the balance struck by him; the striking of a balance is merely a piece of evidence, the value of which mostly depends on the circumstances of each case.

Where such a balance has been struck by an educated man of business, the presumption ordinarily is that he has understood the accounts and its evidential value is great, but such is not the case where the striker is an illiterate person. In the latter class of cases the accounts should be thoroughly scrutinized by the Court through a commissioner or otherwise and the plaintiff should be allowed only what is actually due thereon.

But this does not mean that, in the case of an express or implied contract to pay interest, compound interest is not allowable.

When balances are struck from time to time, the ordinary practice is to add interest to principal each time a balance is struck, and so compound interest is bound to come in. But where repayments are made between any two balances, the debtor is entitled to interest on each repayment from the date of the repayment to the next balance just in the same way as the creditor is entitled to interest on any future advance from the date of that advance till the next balance and to interest on the former balance. *Budh Ram v. (4) Account, suit for—Principal and Agent—Proprietor appointed by a co proprietor as common manager for payment of debts on the estate, whether an agent of latter and, on his death, of his sons—Limitation—Indian Limitation Act, 1877 (Act XV of 1877), S. 8 and Sch II, Art. 89—Demand—Discharge and minority of some of the claimants to an account.

In 1894 one N.M. a part proprietor of an estate, entered into an agreement with his co-proprietor the respondent under which the latter was appointed agent for the purpose of collecting rents and profits from the estate, in order gradually to pay off a heavy debt, rendering accounts of his management to N.M., who died in July 1899 leaving three sons, two of whom were minors. For about two years after the death of N.M. the respondent continued to manage the estate as before. The agency was terminated by a notice dated the 16th January, 1902. In September 1904, the three sons sued the respondent claiming an account for the whole period of the agency. The Subordinate Judge ordered an account from Srabau 1303 B.S. to Magh 1308 B.S. (July-August 1896 to 16th January 1902), but the High Court on respondent's appeal limited the account to five months Bhadra to Magh 1308 B.S.

Held, that in the absence of any cross appeal to the High Court or of any memorandum such as is required to be filed under S. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, it was not competent for the plaintiff to get in this appeal any further remedy than the restoration of the order of the Subordinate Judge, and, that, having regard to the fact that it was not contended that after the death of N.M. the position of the respondent was altered or that he became trustee in place of an agent, Art. 89 of Sch. II of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, applied, and the order of the Subordinate Judge should be restored:

Held, also, that inasmuch as the two plaintiffs, who were minors did not come of age until after suit and the appellant who was of age was not capable of giving a discharge which would bind the two minors, S. 8 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, did not apply.

The High Court acting on paragraph 3 of plaint held that from its language the Court must suppose the demands were going on as long as the business was in existence, although the dates of the demands were not given or proved, held, that there was nothing in the pleading which would justify the inference which the High Court had drawn, and in the absence of evidence no such inference could probably be drawn adversely to the claim of the plaintiffs (a). *Nobin Chandra Barua v. Acquiescence.

(1) Acquiescence, what amounts to—Doctrine not to be invoked in favour of party taking possession of land by wrongful means.

The plaintiff sued for recovery of possession of land on declaration that it was included within his tenancy under the defendant's landlords who had induced him to give up possession of the land upon a promise to pay consideration for it or in exchange to give lands situated elsewhere, neither of which, however, was given to the plaintiff.

Held—That mere quiescence is not acquiescence.

That the plaintiff did not stand by in such a manner as to induce the defendants to believe that he assented to the acts of the defendants and the doctrine of acquiescence had no application in the circumstances of the case.

That the defendants acquired no title to the lands and the Court should not assist them, in disregard of the principles of justice, equity and good conscience, to retain possession of land which they had seized by questionable methods.

That a Court of equity will not have recourse to the doctrine of estoppel or acquiescence for the benefit of a party who does not come into Court with clean hands. Jaharaddi Mandal v. Debnath Nath Choudhury, 20 C.W.N. 657 = 33 Ind. Cas. 762

The defendants contended that they were built on their own site and that in any event the plaintiffs were not entitled to get a decree for possession as they did not object to the construction of the building and acquiesced in their construction. There was evidence to show that the defendants expended about Rs. 1,000 on the strength of their belief that the land on which they put up the building belonged to them and the plaintiffs were aware of their own rights at that time and stood by and thereby encouraged the defendants in the expenditure they incurred. Further the circumstances proved in the case showed that the plaintiffs were aware that the defendants were acting in the belief that they had a right to build. Held that it was unlikely that the defendants would have embarked recklessly on a scheme of building at considerable cost without believing that they had a right to build and the plaintiffs having stood by they were barred by the law of acquiescence from claiming the removal of the house. Held also that so far as chabutra was concerned the circumstances having shown that the defendants could not have built in the mistaken belief that the site belonged to them the direction of the District Judge for its demolition was correct. Mohammad Hafizullah Khan v. An order appointing a manager under the provisions of the Lunacy Act, XXXV of 1858, has not the effect of incapacitating the lunatic from making an adoption till the order is set aside. The only effect of a finding under Act XXXV of 1858 that a person is a lunatic is to raise a presumption that he continues to be of unsound mind until the contrary is shown (a).

An adoption is not an act which amounts to an alienation of property like a lease or mortgage.

In addition to affecting the status, an adoption has, in the opinion of Hindus, religious efficacy, and it will not be right for the Court to hold that a Hindu was deprived by any Statute of the power of making an adoption unless there were clear and unambiguous words to that effect.

The mere fact that a person can write an intelligent letter is not a conclusive test that he is not a lunatic.

Waste Lands Act, 1863 (XXIII of 1863) applies to all lands whether held by the Government or other people.

The Waste Lands Act, 1863, is drastic in its character, and makes a great invasion on private rights, and consequently those pleading it must bring the matter strictly within its provisions.

Where a plot was sold by the Government acting under the Waste Lands Act, 1863, as waste land, and the notice issued under the Act advertised the sale of the plot in a certain pergunnah whereas it was not in that pergunnah; and the plaintiff after more than three years after the lands had been delivered by the Government to the purchaser, brought the suit in the ordinary Civil Court against the Government to recover possession of the plot.

Held, that inasmuch as the said notice was misleading the whole of the proceedings as against the plaintiff failed for want of proper basis; that S. 18 of the Act was clearly applicable to the proceedings before the Special Court, and that Court alone, as constituted under the Act, and that the plaintiff's suit was not barred by that section. The Secretary of State for India in Council v. The deceased was born at Goa, in Portuguese territory. When fourteen years of age he came to Bombay and lived there uninterruptedly, with the exception of brief visits to Goa, till June 1915, when he died at the ripe old age of seventy years. He married the plaintiff in 1903. He carried on a fairly flourishing coach-building business and provided himself with a house adjoining his factory. It appeared that the deceased had intended to retire to Goa and spend the closing years of his life there. Previous to his death, he made a will whereby he gave a legacy to plaintiff of Rs. 7 a month for her life. The plaintiff having claimed that the deceased had a Portuguese domicile, and that under the law of Portugal she was entitled to a moiety of his estate:

Held, that the deceased had acquired a domicile of choice in Bombay; that in spite of his intention to return to Goa that domicile superseded his domicile of origin; and that the devolution of his estate was governed not by the Portuguese law, but by the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, 1865.

The domicile of origin is that which a person acquires at his birth from his parents and follows the domicile of the parents. It is not necessarily in itself local, that is to say, merely the place of birth. The domicile of origin once ascertained in law clings and adheres to the person until he chooses to divest himself of it by substituting a domicile of choice for the domicile of origin. The domicile of choice is acquired by a combination of fact with intention. The fact is residence, and the intention is that the residence should be permanent. This domicile can also be discarded by a fact and intention, namely, the fact of abandoning the residence accompanied by the intention that that abandonment shall be final. Upon the mere abandonment of one domicile of choice without the acquisition of another the domicile of origin revives proprio vigore and without the need of any further act or intention on the part of the person.

The law leans very strongly in favour of the retention of the domicile of origin. Where a person alleges that a man has acquired a domicile of choice, he must prove that that man had that intention. Carolina Dos Santos v. Damiao Joseph Pinto, 18 Bom. L.R. 715=86 Ind. Cas. 227.

The placing of a mark by some person on a will in the presence of the testator and by his direction is not an 'affixture by him of his mark to the will' within the meaning of S. 50 of the Indian Succession Act; but a signature put under similar circumstances is a valid affixture (a).

The mere touching of a pen and handing it over to another who affixes the mark in testator's presence is not an affixture of his mark by the testator as required by the section (b).

Notification, dated 2nd May 1913, issued by the Government of India under S. 392 of the Succession Act at the appellate stage of a case did not apply where there had already been a decision of a competent Court regarding the rights of parties.

In the case of codified law the ordinary practice of the legislature is to make special provision when it thinks fit to do so for the saving of custom, usage and ordinary rights. There is no authority that, after customary law has been stereotyped in the form of a statute which contains no provision saving custom, it is open to a Court to give effect to custom, much less to a custom inconsistent with the statute. As the Succession Act contains no clause saving custom, the Courts are not competent to accept custom as a reason for deviating from the provisions of the Act.

References to works of history (not given in evidence or referred to in the Court of first instance) at the appellate stage are irregular and to be avoided (a). Tunl Oraon v. Leda Oraon, 20 C.W.N. 1032=1 Pat. L.J. 225=36 Ind. Cas. 206.

An administrator appointed under the Probate and Administration Act has no power to mortgage or transfer without the previous permission of the Court under S. 90 (3) of the Act, and he is strictly bound by the terms in which the permission is given.

Permission to sell does not include permission to mortgage, and a mortgage executed in professed exercise of a power to sell is voidable under S. 90 (4) of the Act at the instance of any person interested in the property.

The powers of an executor under a will are much wider and are limited only by any restrictions contained in the will appointing him.

After grant of probate or letters of administration no person other than such grantee shall have power to represent the estate of the deceased.

Under the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, an administrator must comply strictly with the provisions of S. 90 of the Act. Unlike an executor whose powers depend largely on the terms of the Will appointing him and who has power to sell or mortgage unless the Will forbids it, an administrator has no power to alienate at all without first obtaining permission of the Court and he is strictly bound by the terms in which the permission is given(a).

The statutory provisions of the Probate and Administration Act apply to Muhammadan estates overriding any rules of Muhammadan Law that are inconsistent with them. It follows from S. 82 of the Act that a person appointed as administrator to the estate left by a deceased Muhammadan is the only person clothed with authority to act as representative of the estate who could bind the shares of the other heirs, and the administrator could not do so effectually unless he complied with the provisions of S. 90. Ram Dhon Dhor v. S. 98 of the Probate and Administration Act requires the executors to file an inventory of the property within six months and such further time as the Court may allow and then to file an account after he completed his administration. The section makes it quite clear that there should be one initial inventory and one final account after the completion of the administration. The section does not warrant an order requiring a series of yearly accounts(a).

Generally speaking, an executor dismisses the character of executor and becomes a trustee when the funeral and testamentary expenses and the debts are discharged, the legacies paid and sums set apart for investment in the trust created by the will (b).

When such accounts are submitted, the sole duty of the Court is to satisfy itself that the accounts filed prima facie satisfy the requirements of the section; and the Court cannot embark on a judicial inquiry into the correctness of the account and to require the production of the vouchers (c).

A legatee or a person interested in administration has the right to inspect the accounts of the executor (d). If he is denied inspection or is not satisfied with the result of his inspection, he may file an administration suit and ask for administration by the Court. Hemandas Ramrakhiomal v. Where in a suit a declaration of title to monies in third person's hands is prayed for and the recovery of the monies themselves could not be sued for in the same suit the declaratory relief is not a merely incidental or subsidiary relief and the suit is not cognisable by a Small Cause Court.

The assignment of monies due under a policy or under promissory notes which must supersede the policy is an assignment of an incorporeal right and is therefore not governed by the technical rules of Mahomedan Law as to gifts in all its rigidity even where both the parties are Mahomedans (a).

Under the Hanafi Law the gift of an incorporeal right is valid and complete provided the donor has done all he could be reasonably expected to do to put the donee in a position to get the benefit of the right gifted and also has divested himself of all the indicia of title to the subject-matter of the gift.

In a consideration of the question whether the donor had done all acts necessary to divest himself of and clothe the donee with all the indicia of title, the fact that the gift deed contains an invalid condition is irrelevant.

A condition in a deed of gift that the right gifted shall be divested on the donee predeceasing the donor's title according to Hanafi Law and the deed should be construed as a deed of absolute gift.

A transfer even by way of gift of an actionable claim is not governed by Chap. VII of the Transfer of Property Act, and S. 129 has therefore no application to a transfer by way of gift governed by S. 130 in Chap. VIII. Captain

The Full Bench of the Presidency Court of Small Causes exercising jurisdiction under S. 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act is not a Court of appeal (a).

The legal effect of permission to withdraw a suit is to put the plaintiff in the same position as if he had not filed the suit (b).

Where the plaintiff obtained a decree in a suit before a single Judge of the Court of Small Causes and before the Full Bench of the same Court applied for permission to withdraw the suit in order to add that claim to a previously instituted suit in respect of the same cause of action to avoid the bar of O II, r. 2, Civ. The order passed by a competent Court having jurisdiction cannot be interfered with except in the manner provided by legislature unless such order is vitiated by fraud.

Where an order of ejectment under S. 43 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act had been passed at the instance of the defendant and the plaintiff thereupon brought a suit in the City Civil Court, Madras, for a declaration of his alleged right of occupancy and for an injunction restraining the defendant from executing the order of the Small Cause Court.

Held, that the suit was in effect one to have the order of the Small Cause Court superseded by the decree prayed for, that the case fell within S. 46, cl. 2 of the Act, and that under Ss. 47 and 49 of the Act, the High Court was the only forum prescribed for the purpose and that the City Civil Court had therefore no jurisdiction to entertain or try such a suit.

The words "suit for trying the title to the property" occurring in S. 49 of the Act include a suit in which any title, whether of a full owner or of a holder of a limited right, which is alleged by the party aggrieved by the said ejectment order, has to be adjudicated upon.

Scope and applicability of Ss. 46 to 49 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act considered.

Held also that a suit for bare declaration of occupancy rights was not maintainable under S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act as the plaintiff was a party to the ejectment order.

Practice cannot confer jurisdiction, however long continued it may be. Abdul Rahiman Sahib v. Gangathara Iyer, 4 L.W. 402.

(1) S. 17—Suit instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge invested with Small Cause Court powers—Transfer to Munsif's Court—Code of Civil Procedure (1908), S. 24 (4).

Held, that S. 24, sub-cl. 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure, contemplates a Court vested with the powers of a Court of Small Causes, and that, when a suit is transferred from that Court to another Court, the Court trying it is to be deemed a Court of Small Causes and its procedure is to be governed by the provisions of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. Therefore when such a suit is transferred to a Munsif from the Court of a Subordinate Judge vested with Small Cause Court's powers and the former passes an ex parte decree in the suit, an application to have the ex parte decree set aside must be accompanied by a deposit of the amount of the decree or a security in respect of the amount as required by the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, S. 17, the provisions of which are mandatory. Chhotey Lal v. Where a Provincial Small Cause Court returned a plaint for presentation to a proper Court on the ground that the "suit involved a question of title which should be tried in a regular suit" and the plaintiff thereupon moved the High Court and obtained a rule, on a preliminary objection taken that the order under S. 23 (1) is not covered by S. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act:

Held—That there is a good deal of distinction between disposing of a case and deciding a case. A case is something less definite than a suit. The meaning of the word "decided" as held in 13 C.W.N. 403, Appr. (a).

Under S. 115 of the Civ. Pro. Code, the High Court would only interfere if the question were one of jurisdiction.

The Calcutta High Court's powers under the Charter Act have been exercised, with few exceptions, only in cases where jurisdiction has been exceeded or the Judge has ignorantly or perversely refused to exercise or made only a colourable pretence at exercising jurisdiction vested in him by law. This limited power should be exercised only when irreparable injury would be done to one of the litigants if matters were not set right (b).

S. 23 (1) of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act is designed to meet cases in which a Small Cause Court Judge is satisfied that the question of title raised is so intricate that it should not be decided summarily, but in a Court in which the evidence is recorded in full and the decision is open to appeal. The matter is one of discretion, and where discretion is vested in a Court, it is not open to interference unless it has been exercised ignorantly or perversely. Babu Gunga Prasad v. Maxim 'qui facit per alium facit per se'—Applicability.

The defendant, not intending to cause pollution to the plaintiff's well, dug a well on the plaintiff's house, and gave the water to the plaintiff's house. The defendant discovered the bona fide intention of the plaintiff. The plaintiff was then exonerated and according to the custom of the caste, had to spend Rs. 50 for necessary purification. Plaintiff filed a suit for the recovery of the said sum of Rs. 50 in the Small Cause Court.

Held, that the suit was not cognizable by the Small Cause Court (a).

Where the object is to cause loss of reputation, the liability of the defendant should not be affected by the mere fact that he achieves his end by applying the necessary force through an animal. To such an act the maxim 'qui facit per alium facit per se' should be manifestly applied.

To cause loss of reputation is to inflict a personal wrong of a serious description, a suit for compensation for which falls under cl. (d) or cl. (e) of Art. 35, Seb. II, Provincial Small Causes Courts Act. Nama v. Gopalaya, 12 N. L.R. 7=32 Ind. Cas. 236.

Act IX of 1899 (Arbitration).

Ss. 19 and 5—Civ. Pro. Code, Ss. 10 and 151—Reference to arbitration—Suit filed after reference—Court's power to stay suit.

S. 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act is intended to afford means of indirectly compelling a reference where there has been no reference to named arbitrators but only an agreement to refer and where the Court is satisfied that there is no sufficient cause why the matter should not be referred. But though S. 19 of the Arbitration Act is not intended to confer power on the Court to stay proceedings after a reference, the Court has inherent power to stay proceedings if it be necessary for the ends of justice. (S. 151, Civ. Pro. Code).

Where the Court has intimation that the parties had prior to the institution of the suit referred matters in dispute to an arbitration, that is to say, that the matters in dispute were already referred before another tribunal, a tribunal to which the law gives full recognition, on such intimation the Court should either adjourn the trial of the suit until an award has been published, or insist on the plaintiff obtaining leave of the Court to revoke the reference.

So long as the authority delegated to the arbitrator is not revoked, and it cannot be revoked except by leave of the Court, he has power to make an award, and there would be no impropriety of conduct on the part of the arbitrator in proceeding with the reference after suit filed unless he has notice that there has been an application for leave to revoke the authority conferred on him to some Court competent to grant such leave (a).

There can be no indecent competition between the two tribunals so long as the Court exercises towards the private tribunal that courtesy which S. 10, Civ. Pro. Code, compels it to exercise towards another Court.

Where it appears desirable that the matters in dispute should be tried in Court, the proper course is not to ignore the arbitrator and proceed forthwith with the suit but to direct the defendant to take the necessary steps to revoke his submission.

Where an application under S. 5 has been filed before a competent Court, the arbitrator might be guilty of improper conduct, in proceeding with the reference so long as the propriety of his doing so was still sub judice. Dhanpatmal v. Kishinlal, 10 S.L.R. 1=35 Ind. Cas. 536.

The general scheme of the Madras Universities Act (VIII of 1904) is that the Senate should have the legislative power, the Syndicate, the Executive Government of the University, the powers of the Senate being subject, in certain matters, to the control of the Government, that the Senate should be a general rule in the form of Regulations under S. 25 of the Act and that the Syndicate should deal with the administration of specific matters and the application of the Regulations to them. A proceeding of the Syndicate which is contrary to the Regulations would be void, and the Syndicate cannot adopt a measure or pass resolutions or whatever else they may be termed, which would be in conflict with, or effect a modification of, the existing Regulations, or bring about a result such as, by the Act, is reserved to the Senate to effect by the passing of a Regulation.

Where a Statute expressly or by implication leaves the determination of certain matters to the Body Corporate created by it, the latter has no power to delegate its authority on matters within its competence to a third person. Consequently Reg. 61, if and in so far as it purports to extend the right of protest and the Government's power of veto to a resolution other than a Regulation under S. 25 of Act VIII of 1904 or a resolution on any other matter requiring Government sanction, is ultra vires of the Senate. *In re G. Act III of 1907 (Provl. Insolvency).

(1) Ss. 4, 6—Appar in insolvency proceedings—What parties entitled to notice—Annual Practice, O. LVIII, r. 2—Limitation Act (1908), S. 14, applicability of. Trasi Deva Rao v. Parameshwara, 27 Ind. Cas. 141=29 M.L.J. 451=39 M. 74. See Final Part, 1915, Col. 83.

(2) Ss. 4, 16, 47, 51—Act of Insolvency by agent—Effect upon principal—Creditor applying to declare principal an insolvent—Service of notice upon agent whether sufficient—Scope of S. 16—Relation back—Agency when terminated. Kalianji Singji Bhal v. The Bank of Madras, 29 M.L.J. 788=3 L.W. 13=(1916) M.W.N. 12=39 M. 693=31 Ind. Cas. 583. See Final Part, 1915, Col. 84.

(3) Ss. 4 (a), 16, 18, 19, 36—Trust created by debtor in favour of three of the creditors for discharge of debts—Validity—Void in S. 36, meaning of—What amounts to "valuable consideration"—"Third person" meaning of, in S. 4—Property when vests in Official Receiver.

Two traders being unable to pay their debts convened a meeting of their creditors and entered into an agreement which provided inter alia that all the properties of the debtors should be handed over to three trustees who were themselves creditors of the debtors, that the trustees were to realise the outstandings due to the debtors, sell their properties and pay the creditors pro rata.

Nearly 2 years after the execution of the trust deed, the two debtors put in a petition in insolvency and were adjudged insolvents.

Held that the trustees were transferees "in good faith and for valuable consideration" within the meaning of Ss. 36 and 38 (c) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, and that the transfer made bona fide to the trustees by the two debtors cannot therefore be avoided (a).

A responsibility taken by a person to whom properties are transferred in consideration of his taking such onerous work would fall within the expression 'valuable consideration' (b).

The words 'third person' in S. 4 (a) of the Act were not intended to exclude the conveyance to some of the creditors themselves as trustees for the general body of creditors.

The word 'void' in S. 36 of the Act means only 'voidable' (c).

The word 'purchaser' in S. 36 is used not in the ordinary legal sense of one who has bought a property under a contract of sale and purchase, but means a person who has given valuable consideration (d).

Reading Ss. 16, 18 and 19 of the Provincial Insolvency Act together, it would seem to be the duty of the Court, if it intends the Official Receiver to become vested with the title to the insolvent's property, to make an order under S. 18 appointing a receiver. The practice which obtains in the mofussil of treating the Official Receiver as vested with the properties of the insolvents as soon as an adjudication order is made, without preliminary order under S. 18 appointing a receiver, seems to be illegal. Official Receiver of Trichinopoly v. Soma Sundaram Chettiar, 30 M.L.J. 415 = 34 Ind. Cas. 602.

(4) Ss. 4 (b) and 46 (1)—Revision by Chief Court confined to questions of law—Whether question of "intention" with which a transfer of property has been made is one of law or fact.

Under S. 46 (1) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, III of 1907, it is not open to the Chief Court to interfere with an order of the District Judge made in appeal, unless it finds that some question of law has been wrongly decided (a).

(6) Ss. 6, 15 and 47—Dismissal of petition for benefit of the Act on the ground of disbelief in the facts stated or on intention to perpetrate a fraud—When such dismissal improper.

Where a petition in insolvency was rejected by the District Judge on the ground that he did not believe (1) that the applicant's crops were destroyed or (2) that the cost of cultivation was as high as the applicant stated, and also on the ground (3) that the petition was made to swindle one Po Kyin who had purchased and paid for certain cattle which the applicant subsequently fraudulently disposed of to his own son ;

Held that the Court should not have dismissed the petition on the first two grounds under S. 15, as under that section the Court would only dismiss it if it was satisfied that the petitioner had not the right to present the petition under S. 6 and it was not as found.

Held further that the Courts should not have dismissed it on the third ground as the fraud, if any, had already been committed and the insolvency proceedings could not in any way prevent Po Kyin from recovering any compensation that he might be entitled to. Maung Po Mya v. Maung Po Kyin, 8 Bur. L.T. 282 = 30 Ind. Cas. 943.

(7) S. 7—Leave to withdraw after adjudication, incompetent.

The Court would not allow an insolvency petition under S. 7 of the Provincial Insolvency Act to be withdrawn after an adjudication order has been made.

No suit can be withdrawn after judgment has been pronounced, and a decree made, and it seems that it would be equally absurd to allow an insolvency petition to be withdrawn after an adjudication order has been made.

Per Pratt, J.C.—It may be that under the English Bankruptcy Act leave to withdraw may be given after a receiving order has been made. But even if that were so, that is not an analogous case, for a receiving order does not make the debtor a bankrupt or deprive him of legal title to his property. Here the withdrawal of a petition would be of no avail unless it implies an annulment of the adjudication. The Act has specified in S. 42 the conditions on which the Court may annul an adjudication and it is impossible that it was intended that this same result could be produced by the simple device

- (8) Ss. 12 (2) and 13 and r. 21, Provincial Insolvency Rules—Creditor's petition—Notice to other creditors if essential—Adjudication without such notice, if valid—Private notice, if validates adjudication—General notice, whether can be dispensed with by creditors having private notice.

Under S. 12 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, notice of the date fixed for the hearing of a creditor's petition must be given to the other creditors of the bankrupt by publication in the local official gazette, and an adjudication without such notice is wholly irregular and must be set aside.

Private notice to a creditor does not, in the absence of the general notice, validate an adjudication.

- (10) Ss. 12 and 47—Creditor's petition—No adjudication—District Court, power of, to stay sale in the Sub-Court—Ad interim Receiver, appointment of, when to be made—Order, setting aside of, without notice, irregular, in the absence of deception.

Certain creditors of one S. obtained decrees against him and in execution thereof had his properties attached and brought to sale. During the pendency of those proceedings in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Cuddalore, another creditor of S. presented a petition to the District Judge of South Arcot for adjudicating S. an insolvent and obtained an order for the appointment of an ad interim Receiver and for the stay of sale. The very next day the creditors at whose instance the sale proceedings were being conducted applied to the District Judge for vacating his order of the previous day and this he did without notice to the petitioning creditor. On an appeal by the latter, held by the High Court that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to stay the sale which was proceeding in the Sub-Court either under S. 47 of the Provincial Insolvency Act or S. 151, Civ. Pro. Code, and that the order obtaining an ad interim Receiver and vesting the properties of the insolvent in him was illegal inasmuch as the discretion given to the Insolvency Court under S. 13, cl. (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, should ordinarily be exercised only in cases where the property of an insolvent alleged to be absconding has to be preserved from destruction or disappearance, and not in order to vest in the ad interim Receiver the properties attached by other Courts in execution.

Held further that the District Judge acted irregularly in vacating his first order without notice to the petitioning creditor as there was no deception practised upon him. Bashyam Reddi v. Somasundaram Chetti, 3 L.W. 250=32 Ind. Cas. 897.

Where a petition for insolvency is presented by the debtor not with the bona fide view of obtaining an adjudication but for an inequitable and collateral purpose, the Court has power to dismiss such petitions (a).

Maintenance ordered to a wife by a decree of the Court is not a debt proveable under the Insolvency Act; the reasons being that the amount is variable and may be altered by the Court in accordance with the means of the husband and that it might be determined at any time by the husband and wife resuming cohabitation (b). Application by Pamanmal Hemanmal, 10 S.L.R. 28=35 Ind. of one member—Letters Patent appeal, if lies against the exercise of discretion by a single Judge—Practice.

An appeal lies under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent against the decision of a single Judge of the High Court exercising jurisdiction under S. 16 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, though the section gives only a discretion to the High Court to interfere in revision.

Where three members of a joint Hindu family executed a mortgage-deed and one of them was subsequently adjudicated an insolvent and steps were taken to have the sales conducted in accordance with the fit transactions.

Held that the shares of the other two members could not vest in the Official Receiver as they never appeared to be declared insolvent, and that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to deal with their shares under Ss. 16, 18 and 36 of the Act.

The Court has power to deal with the estate and interest of the insolvent only and the sale in respect of the share of the insolvent alone can be annulled and not that of the other members. *Palaniappa Mudali v. (19) Ss. 16, 22, 23, 46 (3)—Proceedings in Insolvency—Release of property seized as that of the insolvent—Appeal from order of release—Need for leave of Court—Practice.

In an insolvency proceeding, under Act III of 1907, after an order of adjudication, the District Judge, on the petition of a creditor seized certain property as that of the insolvent. Subsequently an application was filed by a person claiming the property as his own. The Court held an enquiry and released it.

Held that the order of release could not be referred to S. 16 of the Act but was passed by the Judge in the exercise of the jurisdiction vested in him by S. 22 read with S. 23 of the Act, and an appeal from it would lie only by leave of the District Court or of the High Court under S. 16 (3).

Where an order is appealable only by leave of the District Court or of the High Court, the memorandum of appeal should always be accompanied by a petition for leave to appeal, and it should be clear to the Judge sitting to receive petitions that the appeal is not presented as one which lies of right. *Balli v. (20) Ss. 16 and 27—Composition before adjudication—Sanction of Court—Conditions necessary for the grant of sanction—Adjudication—Proof of claims—Assent of majority of creditors—Discretion of Court.

there is no provision for proof of debts until after adjudication. Even after adjudication, composition is impossible if the debts are not proved; for S. 27 (2) makes the assent of the majority in number and three-fourths in value of all the creditors whose debts are proved a sine qua non. The assent is not a mere formality.

Where a composition does not secure for the creditors anything more under it than what they would get if the bankruptcy proceedings had continued, and the composition seems to have the effect of compounding a fraud and is likely to involve the creditors in litigation, the Court will not sanction the composition.

The Court has a discretion which is recognised in S. 27 (6) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, and this discretion is exercised in the interests of commercial morality. Re application by Messrs Fleming, Shaw and Co to declare the Firm of Sadiram Jannadas, Insolvents, 9 S. A person who was an agriculturist by occupation was adjudicated an insolvent. Shortly before his insolvency he had granted a lease of his occupancy holding. The zemindar was the principal creditor. The District Judge ordered the land to be surrendered to the zemindar and the insolvent's house to be sold. Held that the order passed by the District Judge could not be supported because the occupancy holding and the house were property, the transfer or attachment of which being forbidden by law could not vest either in the Court or in the receiver. *Sagar Mal v. (26) S. 22—Receiver—Court's functions—Remedy of purchaser in auction.

S. 22 of the Provincial Insolvency Act does not contemplate that a lengthy inquiry should be held in a complaint against the irregularities of a sale held by a Receiver in an insolvency case as if the matter was a regular claim for specific performance. Under that section the Court simply ratifies, reverses or modifies the executive acts of its officer and any order under that section does not preclude a party from pursuing his ordinary remedy by a suit for specific performance against the Receiver. A.K.R.M.S. (27) S. 22—Application to the Court for directing the Receiver to execute a conveyance—No previous application to the Receiver—Order directing the Receiver to execute, without jurisdiction—"Person aggrieved," meaning of.

One V having been adjudicated insolvent his property vested in the Official Receiver. V had on 14-5-1908 executed in favour of his father, the respondent, a pro-note and an agreement, the latter providing that, in case the former were not discharged within a year it should be discharged by a conveyance of certain property. On 6-10-1913 the respondent asked the Court to order the Receiver to execute the necessary conveyance alleging that he had already put in an application for such execution either by the Court or Receiver and that no orders had been passed thereon. One of the creditors who held a mortgage over the property opposed the petition. The Receiver was not made a party originally to the proceedings in the lower Court. But the High Court remanded the case for the Receiver to be made a party. The Receiver had no objection to execute the conveyance and accordingly the Court directed the execution of the conveyance.

Held, on appeal by the mortgagee-creditor, that the application of the 6th October 1913, having been founded on the failure of the respondent's previous petition to the Court and not to the Receiver, in whom the insolvent's estate vested and who alone was competent to give the conveyance, the order of the Court was without jurisdiction, being unauthorized by S. 22 or any other provision of the Provincial Insolvency Act.

Even supposing that the application of the 6th October had been founded on the omission of the Receiver to pass any order on a petition to the Receiver himself, the order could not be supported as having been made under S. 22 of the Act inasmuch as the respondent was neither a "creditor" as his debt had been discharged when his right to the insolvent's property matured under the agreement, nor a "person aggrieved" as the receiver's failure or refusal to give the conveyance was in no way a binding adjudication on that right and affected neither it nor respondent's remedy by suit.

Nor could the order of the Court be supported as having been made in the exercise of the general powers of superintendence of the Receiver, its officer, as such was not the nature of the enquiry held by the lower Court in this case as appears from the fact that neither it nor the respondent originally made the Receiver a party and though in the inquiry after remand the Receiver did not apparently attempt to justify his conduct, the proceedings were continued on evidence adduced by the creditor.

A "person aggrieved" within the meaning of S. 22 of the Act is a man against whom a decision has been pronounced which wrongfully deprived him of something or wrongfully affected his title to something. The decision must have been such as to affect the right claimed, not merely to impede the person concerned in his assertion of it. Munjuluri Sivaramiah v. A person who is a stranger to a bankruptcy proceeding, and whose property has been seized by the Receiver in the bankruptcy may either apply under S. 22 of the Provincial Insolvency Act to the Insolvency Court, or bring a suit in a Civil Court for a return of the property. A suit for mere declaration of title to the property is not maintainable as no declaration can be granted against a creditor who never claimed any title or interest or against the debtor who by becoming insolvent had lost all he ever had, or against the Receiver.

Court would bar a subsequent suit in the Civil Court for the same relief because—(1) the adjudication amounts to conclusive proof as to the title in respect of the specific things claimed by the applicant, not merely against him, but absolutely within the meaning of S. 41 of the Evidence Act; (2) the application heard and disposed of by the Insolvency Court is a suit within the meaning of S. 11 of the Civ. (35) Ss. 27, 42 (1)—Adjudication order, annulling of—Applicant, what to prove.

S. 42 of the Provincial Insolvency Act is moulded on S. 35 of Statute 45 and 46 Vict., Chap. 52.

An order for annulment of adjudication can be made only upon proof of the existence of one or more of the circumstances specified in sub-S. (1) of the S. 42 of the Provincial Insolvency Act.

It is obligatory upon an applicant under S. 42 of the said Act to establish the existence of one or more of the circumstances mentioned therein.

Under S. 27 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, consent of all the creditors is not by itself necessarily sufficient to justify an order of annulment.

Quare:—Whether, if one or more of the circumstances mentioned in sub-S. Under S. 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the onus of proving that a mortgage executed by an insolvent within two years of his being adjudged as such was made in good faith and for valuable consideration and was therefore binding on the Receiver is on the mortgagee (a).

Where all the evidence is before the Court, the question of burden of proof is not of great importance.

An instrument which is invalid under S. 59, Transfer of Property Act, as a mortgage, cannot operate to create a charge under S. 100, Transfer of Property Act (b).

Where a mortgage document is attested by only one witness, the question whether it is invalid as a mortgage is not one which it is necessary for the Court to consider in deciding whether the transfer is void under S. 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. Anantarama Aiyar v. (43) S. 36—Transfer of property by insolvent—Validity of—Burden of proof—Of good faith.

S. 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act is wider in its scope than S. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act. Under the former Act intent to defeat or delay a creditor is not necessary. All that is required is that the transfer must be made within two years of the adjudication of the insolvency of the debtor.

In order to determine the validity of the transfer by a debtor of all his property in lieu of a debt it is a matter for consideration whether a real transfer was intended by the transferor or it was merely fictitious, and whether it was made in good faith, the onus of proving good faith being upon the transferee. Muhammad Habib-ullah v. (47) Ss. 36, 44—Mortgage by insolvent within 2 years of insolvency—Petition to set aside—Report by Official Receiver—Inquiry not by Court—No power to delegate functions to Official Receiver.

The Provincial Insolvency Act, S. 44 (4) provides for a presumption in favour of the correctness of any statement in the Official Receiver's report. But that does not empower the Court to leave the duty of judicial inquiry, as a preliminary to ascertain under S. 46, to the Official Receiver, or to act in the proceedings under that section on evidence which it has not itself taken. The Official Receiver should be made a party to such proceedings. Simil Rowther v. Kumarappa Chetti, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 182 = 35 Ind. Cas. 675.

(47-a) Ss. 36 and 44—Proceedings to set aside alienation by insolvent—Record of statements made before Official Receiver—Admissibility of such statements in proceedings before Court—Consent of parties—Onus of proof.

In proceedings under S. 36 of the Act the Court is bound to take evidence and cannot rely on statements made before the Official Receiver (a).

In such cases the Court cannot treat the said statements either as affidavits of the persons making them or as evidence on commission taken by the Receiver. Where the statements were not treated as affidavits in the lower Court and were not shown to have been properly sworn to or to have been admissible as affidavits in the enquiry before the lower Court they cannot be refused as affidavits in the Appellate Court. And they cannot be treated as evidence taken on commission, because to enable a Commissioner to take evidence there must be the prior issue of a writ of commission to him by the Judge.

Mere omission to object to the inadmissibility of irrelevant evidence cannot cure the defect, if there was no deliberate consent to waive the objection.

In proceedings under S. 36 the burden of proving that a document executed by an insolvent was executed in fraud of creditors lay on the party asserting it (b). Chinna Meera Rowther v. C. Kumarachakravathy Ayyangar, 36 Ind. Cas. 906.

(48) S. 37—Mortgage to creditor, challenged as preference—Preference to be shown intentionally fraudulent—Pressure—Previous understanding.

In order to determine whether an insolvent, at the date of a transaction sought to be annulled under S. 37 of the Insolvency Act, was unable to pay from his own money his debts as they fell due, money locked up which may be available at a later period for the payment of debts cannot be considered. But from this it does not follow that all unliquidated assets of the debtor must for that purpose be excluded from consideration (a).

A preference to a creditor, to come within the prohibition of S. 37, must be shown to have been fraudulent at, with reference to the state of mind of the debtor (b).

A preference given under pressure is no ground for annulment under S. 37. Such pressure need not be threat of criminal proceedings. Threat of Civil suits would equally take away from its spontaneous character.

A previous oral agreement to mortgage sufficient property would take a mortgage given later on out of the operation of S. 37. Nripendra Nath Sahu v. Ashutosh Ghosh, 20 C.W.N. 420 = 43 C. 640 = 33 Ind. Cas. 519.

S. 36, cl. (5) of the Act which provides a summary procedure in cases where there is no dispute does not exlude the wide jurisdiction conferred on the Court by S. 7 to deal with cases of disputed title under the ordinary procedure, though that jurisdiction is of a discretionary character, and it is seldom that the Insolvency Court would deem it expedient to try difficult questions of title itself instead of referring the Official Assignee to an ordinary civil suit.

Where, under S. 69 of the Presidency Small Cause Court Act, the Judges of that Court make a reference to the High Court, such reference should clearly state the points on which there is a difference of opinion among the Judges. A reference which practically is of whole case to the High Court, saying that the Judges of the Presidency Small Cause Court are not agreed on the question whether "under the circumstances of the case, the bond should be enforced against the surety, the defendant" is not proper.

(15-a) Ss. 46, 56—Fraudulent preference—Insolvent's intention—Natural and probable consequences of payment—“Creditor and Debtor”—“Mourning—Payment” in ordinary course of business—Accommodation—Acceptor.

A Court should find out whether the intention to give preference to any one of the creditors was the substantial or dominant intention acting on the insolvent's mind when he made the payment.

When the natural and probable consequences of a payment is the preference of a particular creditor among numerous creditors, and when the policy of the Act is that the debtor's assets should be equally distributed among all the creditors as much as possible, the payment by an insolvent debtor which has the natural effect of preferring a creditor must be deemed to have been made with the view and intention to prefer that creditor, whatever other views the insolvent may also have had in making that payment and whether those other views were more dominant or less dominant, more substantial or less substantial than the view to give a preference. If there was legal duress resulting in the payment made, the view to prefer may be negated. But a payment made in the ordinary course of business, though made to prefer a creditor, is a preferential payment (a).

In order to avoid a transaction as a fraudulent preference it is essential that the relation of debtor and creditor should exist between the parties to the transaction.

The word creditor is not defined by the Act. The word “creditor” means one that can compel the performance of an obligation by another person who is called the “debtor”, the person lying under the obligation. In Wharton's Law Lexicon “Creditor” is said to be correlative to “debtor” and “debtor” is defined as “he that owes something to another.” The person, who on the happening of certain contingencies, which may or may not happen, will become entitled to enforce an obligation then created against another person cannot be called a creditor.

A surety or an accommodation acceptor is no doubt a contingent creditor who is entitled to prove under S. 46 (1) of the Act; but he is not a creditor who can be fraudulently preferred under S. 56 (b). Nalam Viswanathan v. Official Assignee of Madras, 32 Ind. Cas. 795.

(17) S. 57—What amounts to “acts of insolvency”—Transfer of goods to creditor after giving him notice that debtor is about to suspend payment—Whether bona fide transfer—Applicability of English decisions in interpreting Indian Act.

A debtor's agent gave notice to a creditor that the debtor was about to suspend payment, and the creditor, after receiving the notice and on the day previous to the debtor filing his insolvency application, took possession of certain goods of the debtor by virtue of letters of lien given by the debtor. Held, per White, C.J. (affirming Wallis, J.):—that, though a mere intimation to a creditor that the debtor is insolvent is not an act of insolvency, the giving of notice to a creditor of an intention to suspend payment is an act of bankruptcy; and a creditor, who enters into a transaction with his debtor, with the knowledge that the debtor had committed an act of bankruptcy at the time the transaction was entered into, is not acting bona fide and cannot claim the benefit of S. 57 of the Indian Act, III of 1909.

Although the words “bona fide” do not appear either in S. 49 of the English Bankruptcy Act or in S. 57 of the Indian Act, yet it is only bona fide transactions that are protected. And a transaction which is not only designed to defeat the operation of the Bankruptcy Law, but also in itself amounts to an act of bankruptcy cannot be considered to be bona fide.

Act II of 1910 (Paper Currency).

Ss. 26 and 27—Promissory note payable on demand to person or bearer or order—If illegal and void—Right of creditor to get a decree apart from the note—Negotiable Instruments Act, Ss. 1 and 19.

Under S. 26 of Paper Currency Act, II of 1910 a promissory note payable to bearer on demand is illegal and void, and no suit could be maintained upon the same.

The fact that the note is made payable to a person or bearer or order in the alternative does not affect its invalidity.

Whether the payee can get a decree for the money lent apart from the note would depend upon the existence of a separate obligation, and the fact that the loan and the note were contemporaneous is not decisive on the point (a).

Krishnan, J.—The provision of penalty in S. 27 for the transgression of the rule in S. 26 does not cure the invalidity as an instrument the creation of which is prohibited by law cannot be held to be valid because there are also specific penalties attached to its creation. Chidambaram Chettiar v. Where the natural guardian of a lunatic, in whose name a sum of money representing his share of compensation money paid by the Land Acquisition Collector was in deposit in the Court of the Land Acquisition Judge, obtained an order from the District Judge under S. 56 of Act IV of 1912 for payment to him of a portion thereof for the maintenance of the lunatic, the Land Acquisition Judge has no jurisdiction to

(2) S. 71—'Estate' of lunatic—Properties in which he has beneficial interest—Joint property—Whether included in the term 'estate.'

In deciding what the estate of a lunatic is, under S. 71 of the Lunacy Act, 1912, even the properties in which the lunatic has only some beneficial interest (e. g., property which belong to him in common with his brothers and sisters), must be taken into account. Sultan Ahmad Ali Rajah Avergal of Cannanore v. (3) Ss. 71, 72—Appointment of guardian of lunatic—Whether wife may be appointed.

S. 72 of the Lunacy Act is a kind of warning and prescribes that particular care should be exercised by the Court in the matter of appointing a guardian of the person of a lunatic in a case where the person to be appointed is entitled to inherit a part of the property of the lunatic, (and is, therefore, benefited by his death), and that the Court should see that the appointment is beneficial for the lunatic.

Held, in a controversy between the wife and the father-in-law of a lunatic on the one side and one N H on the other as to who should be appointed guardian of the person of the lunatic, that under the circumstances of the case the appointment of the wife and the father-in-law jointly so long as the wife resided with the latter was for the benefit of the lunatic and that they should be appointed under S. 71 of the Lunacy Act. Amir Kazim v. Held, that the position of a District Judge under the provisions of Indian Lunacy Act (IV of 1912) is partly judicial and partly administrative.

Held further, that the functions of the District Judge in making an inquiry under S. 82 of the Act are clearly to satisfy himself as to the state of mind of the person concerned. He issues notices to relatives likely to be interested in the result of his action, but those relatives are not treated in any way as parties to legal proceedings. They are treated rather as amici curiae. They are allowed to be heard and to make representation and suggestions both as to the calling of evidence and otherwise but they have no right to call evidence and Act III of 1914 (Copyright).

S. 24 (A)—Copyright register book—Effect of entry on proprietorship—Evidence Act, S. 114.

Under S. 3 of the Copyright Act of 1847 a certified copy of an entry in the copyright register book is prima facie evidence of the proprietorship of the person mentioned therein, to the copyright of the book in question. Such prima facie proof cannot be said to be rebutted by any statement made before a Magistrate. The above said provision was not repealed by the new Act of 1914, though the new Act granted, by S. 24, cl. (A) of the first schedule, to the owners of existing copyrights, rights at least as valuable as the rights given under the repealed Act. Even if a complainant was bound to prove his case, under the Copyright Act, S. 114 of the Evidence Act could be invoked in his favour. Chellappaswamy v. Singaravelu Mudaliar, 30 Ind. Cas. 721.

Where a holding of an occupancy raiyat is sold, the interest of an under-raiyat is not void but voidable.

But when the occupancy holding has been destroyed by eviction of the raiyat for non-payment of rent, S. 82 of Act X of 1859 provides that the decree-holder shall be put in physical possession of the land.

Act X of 1859 (Bengal Rent)—(Concluded).

There is a clear distinction between proceedings in regard to a tenure-holder and proceedings in regard to a raiyat. Where the proceeding has been with regard to a tenure-holder or under-tenant, the decree is to take the form of an order to all raiyats to pay rent to the decree-holder, and the decree-holder cannot be put into actual physical possession of the land.

maps as evidence—Land acquisition proceedings—Claim to compensation by semindar as against person holding under a lakhiraj title—Onus of proof—Purchaser at revenue sale, if may eject lakhirajdar from land which has been planted or built on—Encumbrance, how annulled—Assignee from auction-purchaser, position of—Land Acquisition Court if may determine conflict of title.

Thak maps have always been considered by Courts as good evidence, and although the value of a Thak map depends upon its accuracy, there is no presumption that Thak maps must be inaccurate.

Opinion of Captain Hirst in his "Notes on the old Revenue Surveys" referred to (a).

A purchaser of an entire estate sold for arrears of revenue suing to recover land claimed by the defendant as lakhiraj must prove a prima facie case that his mal land has, since 1790, been converted into lakhiraj. The fact that the lands are within the ambit of the estate is not sufficient to meet this burden.

Whether, in a particular case, the plaintiff has been able to prove such a prima facie case would depend upon its own circumstances.

Where the question of title to a plot of land arose between claimants to compensation money paid by Government on acquisition thereof under the Land Acquisition Act, one being the purchaser of the estate at a sale for arrears of land revenue, whilst the other was holding it as lakhiraj.

Held—That the former was in the position of the plaintiff and the burden of proof as stated above was on him (b).

S. 37 of the Revenue Sale Law does not protect land held without payment of rent upon which dwelling-houses, manufactories or other permanent buildings have been erected or whereon gardens, plantations, etc., have been made.

The assignee or transferee of the auction-purchaser at a revenue sale is entitled to exercise the rights of a purchaser.

It is not essential on the part of the auction-purchaser or his assignee, who seeks to annul an incumbrance, to give a formal written notice to avoid it.

All that is necessary is to notify to the incumbrancer by some unequivocal act the intention to annul.

A Land Acquisition Court has jurisdiction to determine a conflict of title between rival claimants. Sm. Krishna Kalyani Das v. Mr. R. Braumfield, 20 C.W.N. 1028 = 86 Ind. Cas. 184.

Some properties of the judgment-debtors, whose estate was in charge of the Court of Wards, was sold in execution of a decree on 15th April 1912. As the Court of Wards would not apply to set aside the sale, the judgment-debtors themselves applied under S. 47 and O. XXI, r. 90 of the Civ. Pro. Code. The application was rejected on 11th January 1913 and the judgment-debtors appealed on 11th April 1913. The estate was released by the Court of Wards on the 18th June 1914, before the appeal was heard. One of the judgment-debtors, B, had ceased to be disqualified before the sale, but as there were unpaid debts of the estate, the Court of Wards, under S. 13-A of the Court of Wards Act, was authorised to retain possession of the estate.

Held—That, under S. 55 of the Court of Wards Act, the application to set aside the sale was incompetent.

That the release of the estate did not give a fresh start to limitation, as the judgment-debtor B, not being a minor at the time the right to apply accrued, was not entitled to claim the benefit of S. 7 of the Limitation Act. Umakanta Sen Chowdhury v. Under S. 30, Bengal Act III of 1884, as recently amended, a private pathway does not vest in the Municipality (a).

If the public have a right to go over the private pathway, then the Municipality, under certain later sections of the Act, have been given the power of control, the difference being that, in the case of roads vested in the Municipality, they are the body responsible for lighting, watering, sewerage and clearing the roads; and, in the other case, where the road is not so vested in the Municipality, they have only the power of control to prevent the road from becoming a nuisance or the rights of the public from being interfered with. Chairman, Howrah Municipality v. The expression “within a distance of two miles above or below the ferry” in S. 155, Act III B.O. of 1884 mean within a distance of two miles above or below the banks of the river or stream and not within a radius of two miles of the Municipal ferry.

Act III of 1884 (Bengal Municipal)—(Concl'd).

S. 155, Act III B.O. of 1884 cannot be construed in the light of the provision of Act I B.O. of 1885 since S. 4 of the later Act lays down that nothing in that Act contained shall apply to any ferry deemed or declared to be a Municipal Ferry under the provision of Act III B.O. of 1884 (a).

The words used in defining the limits of a public ferry under Act I of 1866 and the limits of a Municipal Ferry under Act III B.O. of 1884 are not used in the same sense as those in S. 16 of Act I, B.O. of 1885.

Chatterjee, J.—Where the words used in a section are plain and construed in their ordinary sense mean one thing, Courts cannot construe the section in a different way merely because the construction of words in their ordinary sense may, in some cases lead to results which might seem anomalous.

The banks referred to in the last clause of S. 155 of Act III B.O. of 1884 are banks of the same river and the clause applies only to cases where one of the two banks of the same river is within and the other without the limits of the Municipality.

Richardson, J.—The word "ferry" in the expression "Municipal Ferry" must denote a place. It is the place where passengers are conveyed by boat from one side of a river to the other. A right of ferry is the right so to convey passengers at such a place.

A ferry boat must mean any boat used for the purpose of carrying passengers across the river whether at that place or some other place. Kasim Ali v. Chairman of Municipal Commissioners, Chittagong, 35 Ind. Cas. 782.

(8) Ss. 1, 44 and Sch., III. Art. 1 (a)—S. 1, as amended by S. 3 of Act I (B.O.) of 1907—Land in suburb of Calcutta let out in 1898 for 5 years—Lessee holding on till sued in ejectment in 1910—Status of lessee, non-occupancy raiyat—"Town of Calcutta," extension of, by Amending Act—Statute not declaratory but amending—No retrospective operation—Limitation—Sch., III, Art. (1) (a)—Non-occupancy raiyat holding over after term, if holds on from year to year.

Defendant on 16th December 1898 took a five years' lease from plaintiff of an agricultural holding situated within the present Municipal limits of Calcutta but beyond the limits of the town of Calcutta as determined by the proclamation of the Governor-General in Council, dated the 10th September 1794, issued under S. 159 of Statute 33, Geo. III, c. 52. Plaintiff on 9th November 1910 having sued to eject the defendant:

Held—That, until the Bengal Tenancy Amendment Act of 1907 came into force, the Bengal Tenancy Act applied to the case and defendant had in consequence acquired the status of a non-occupancy raiyat when the Amendment Act came into force, and this status was not affected by the provisions of S. 3 of the Amendment Act which gave a new definition of the expression "Town of Calcutta" as used in S. 1 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, making it co-extensive in area with the present municipal limits of Calcutta,

The explanation added to sub-S. (3) of S. 1 of the Bengal Tenancy Act by S. 3 of Act I B. C. of 1907 is an amending statute and not merely one of a declaratory character and cannot therefore be given retrospective operation.

Statutes which are properly of a declaratory character have a retrospective effect.

But the nature of the statute must be determined from its provisions, and the mere fact that the expression "it is declared" has been used is by no means conclusive as to the true character of the Legislation.

Held—That the suit was barred by Art. (1) (a) to Sch., III of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Under the Bengal Tenancy Act, there is no raiyat who holds from year to year, and if the tenant is a non-occupancy raiyat who does not hold under a lease for term, he cannot be ejected under the provisions of cl. (c) of S. 44. Jotiram Khan v. Jonaki Nath Ghose, 20 O.W.N. 268—38 Ind. Cas. 54.

D. CHATTERJEE and BRACHROFT, JJ.

(4) S. 5—Tenancy—Lease deed—Character of tenancy as stated therein, if conclusive—Option to renew lease—Terms of renewal uncertain—Option unenforceable.

Although, where it is shown by a lease, unambiguous in its terms, that the land was originally required by the tenant for cultivating it by himself or by hired servants or by members of his family, the character of the tenancy is not altered by the mere fact that the land was subsequently let out to tenants, and, although in such a case the land may, as between the lessor and the lessee, be taken to have been acquired for the purpose as stated in the lease itself it is certainly open to a person who is no party to the contract (e.g., a sub-lessee) to show that the real purpose for which the land was acquired by the lessee was other than what was stated in the lease. (a) (Per N.R. Chatterjee, J.).

The term 'jote' does not necessarily mean the interest of a cultivator.

A non-occupancy raiayat, where he has been admitted to occupation of the land under a registered lease is liable to be ejected on the expiry of the lease.

Where in a kabuliat there is a clause that, on the expiry of the term, the tenant shall give up the land or take settlement of the land according to the terms on which the lessors wish to lease it out in future: Held that the terms being undefined and depending upon the will of the lessor cannot be enforced.

Quere :—Whether a mere statement in a lease that the land is let to the tenant for the purpose of being cultivated by himself or his servants is conclusive even as against the landlord to show that the tenant is a raiayat, whatever the area of the land may be or whatever may be done under the lease. (Per Richardson, J.). Rajani Kanta Mukherjee v. Yusuf Ali, 84 Ind. Cas. 92.

the Act—Sub-division of tenancy—Incidents of divided tenure—Tenancy, real nature of, how determined—Occupancy raiyat holding at a rent not changed for 40 years, if raiyat at fixed rate.

Cl. 5 of S. 5 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is not restricted in its application to suits or proceedings between landlords and tenants under the Act. Neither is it limited to cases of tenancy of more than 100 bighas in existence as such at the date of the institution of the suit wherein the question of the nature of such a tenancy arises for determination.

The clause is a provision, not of substantive but of adjective law; it lays down a presumption and changes the burden of evidence. The presumption is applicable to tenancy which existed before the commencement of the Act. The clause only codifies what had been a recognised doctrine under the old law.

The clause is applied to determine the character of the tenancy of 126 bighas, although that tenancy has been sub-divided into two tenancies before the Bengal Tenancy Act came into operation.

The tenure being divisible, the fact of sub-division does not create a breach of its continuity; and each fragment carved out of the original tenure retained its incidents (a).

The fact that some tenants of the land themselves carried on cultivation and did not collect rent from under-tenants, is not by any means decisive as to the character of the tenancy. The real nature of the tenancy is determined by proof of the purpose of the original grant (b).

The mere forbearance on the part of the landlord to claim enhancement of rent from an occupancy raiayat for 40 years, does not lead to an inference that the original contract was for payment of rent by the tenant at a fixed rate for ever. Jagabandhu v. Magnamoyi, 24 C. L.J. 363—36 Ind. Cas. 884.

In a suit by the landlord for rent at the rate mentioned in the kabuliati, the tenants pleaded that the kabuliati was obtained by undue influence and that the real rent was at a lower rate.

Held that, as the defendants subsequently ratified the kabuliati, it was not open to them to plead undue influence; and that, though the document did not say that any heritable and transmissible status was given to the tenants, the intention of the landlord was to create a permanent mukarrari interest within the meaning of S. 179, Bengal Tenancy Act, and S. 29 of that Act cannot therefore apply to such a lease.

Held also that, in order to make out a claim for enhancement for improvements, it is necessary to comply strictly with the provisions of S. 33 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Gur Sahai Mahto v. Keshwar Sahu, 1 Pat. L.J. 76 = 35 Ind. Cas. 137.

Principles of enhancement discussed.

In the matter of determining the amount of enhancement of rent under S. 30 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) regard must be had to the nature of the land on which rent is to be assessed. If it is upland the prices of the upland staple crop must be considered, while if it is lowland the prices of the lowland staple crop must be ascertained. Sajwan Mahto v. Gulab Chand Lal, 1 Pat. (22-a) Ss. 30, 113, Ch. X—Prevailing rate—Enhancement of rent—Entry of certain sum as rent at settlement—Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, O.I. r. 4.

A settlement of rent with reference to the prevailing rate is not illegal merely for the reason that it involves an enhancement of more than two annas in the rupee. There is no limit to the amount of enhancement which can be effected on the ground of prevailing rate.

If the entry of a certain sum as rent at a settlement is merely an entry of the existing rate, then there is no bar to a proceeding for settlement within 15 years. It is only if the entry resulted from an actual settlement of rent that the bar of 15 years under S. 113 of the Bengal Tenancy Act would be applicable.

Under the new Civ. Pro. Code an appeal cannot be defeated merely upon the ground of non-joinder of parties. Bhagaban Mahapatra v. Palturam Singh, 32 Ind. Cas. 749.

(36) Ss. 67, 179—Permanent mokurari lease—Stipulation to pay interest on arrears of rent "at 75 per cent. with full damages," if by way of penalty—Contract Act (IX of 1872), S. 74—Mere high rate if sufficient to demand interference—Facts and circum-stances to be proved—Position of tenant under permanent lease and debtor compared—Onus of proof.

Per N. R. Chatterjee, J.—S. 179 of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not exclud-e the con-sideration of the question whether a stipulation in a permanent mokurari lease to pay interest at a higher rate than that provided by S. 67, is affected by provisions of law other than the Bengal Tenancy Act. And although Courts should not lightly interfere with contracts between landlords and tenants in cases of per-manent mokurari leases, a stipulation for pay-ment of interest on arrears of rent at a rate which is unconscionable should not be allowed to be enforced even in such cases.

No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to what is unconscionable and exorbitant, which must be determined with regard to the facts of each case.

Interest represents compensation for the detention of the rent and a stipulation in a mokurari lease to pay "75 per cent. interest plus full damages" appears rather to have been intended as an effective means of securing punctual performance of the contract than to represent the damages which the landlord was to suffer by reason of non-payment of the rent.

Per Richardson, J.—The lessee of a permanent lease at an invariable rent is not prima facie entitled to the indulgent consideration which might be extended to a needy and improvident debtor in the clutches of a grasping money-lender, and though it may be that the provisions of S. 179 of the Bengal Tenancy Act must be read subject to the power of the Court to intervene under the Contract Act, they cannot be overlooked or left out of account.

Stipulation to pay interest at a high rate may be proved to be one by way of penalty, but to justify an inference that it is so, it is not enough to show that it was a hard bargain. In general, evidence of facts and circumstances outside the contract is necessary to justify the Court's interference.

The onus to prove such circumstances is on the lessee. Nabo Kumar Chuckerbutty v. Syed Abdul Jubbur Mlyan, 21 C.W.N. 112 = 36 Ind. Cas. 721.

The question whether any particular item is or is not an abwab must depend upon the construction of the contract of lease in each case, and the question in each case is whether the sum claimed is really part of the rent agreed upon to be paid as consideration for the lease.

The question whether in a case where there is a written engagement, a specified sum which is neither indefinite nor arbitrary and which is agreed upon to be paid as part of the rent in the lease creating the tenancy can be recovered, was not referred to the Full Bench in Radha Prosad Singh v. Bal Kowar Koori, 17 C. 726.

A stipulation in a kabulyat creating a mokurari lease to pay interest at 75 per cent. on arrears of rent and damages at 300 per cent. is intended to secure punctual payment of rent rather than represent the loss to which the landlord is put for the non-payment of the rent. Being by way of penalty such a stipulation comes under S. 74 of the Contract Act, and is also unconscionable. Upendra Lal Gupta v. Meheraj Bibi, 21 C.W.N. 108.

(38) S. 85—Under-raiyati lease for 9 years . with covenant of renewal if valid—Ejection, suit for, at termination of term.

Notwithstanding the provisions of S. 85 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, a stipulation in a lease granted by a raiyat to an under-raiyat that, after the expiry of the nine years for which the lease was granted, the raiyat would grant the under-raiyat a fresh lease of the land is valid (a).

2.—Bengal Acts—(Continued).Act VIII of 1885 (Bengal Tenancy)—(Contd.).

When there is a covenant for renewal, if the option does not state the terms of the renewal, the new lease would be for the same period and on the same terms as the original lease in respect of all the essential conditions thereof except as to the covenant for renewal itself.

If it is possible to interpret an agreement between the parties so as to make it operative, effect should be given to it and the contract should not be pronounced unenforceable.

Held—that the only reasonable interpretation of the covenant in this case was that the parties agreed that the lease would be renewed on the same terms and for the same period as the original lease. Lal Mia v. Muhammad Easli Msa, 20 C.W.N. 948 = 33 Ind. Cas. 448.

In a suit for damages by a lessor against a lessee for breach of a covenant contained in a registered lease purporting to have been granted by the lessor as tenure-holder to the lessee as under-tenure-holder, it was found that in fact the lessor was an occupancy raiyat, and the lessee urged that the lease, having been granted and registered in contravention of S. 85 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, was void and inoperative. Held—that the lessee was estopped from showing that the lease was void and that no interest passed to him (a).

That the Court was not precluded from so holding by the previous decisions of the High Court.

The Bengal Tenancy Act is not a complete Code even in respect of the law of landlord and tenant; much less does it profess to incorporate the general principles of the law of contract and the doctrines of equity jurisprudence in so far as they may have to be applied in the determination of disputes between landlords and tenants. Bamandas Bhattacharyya v. (44-b) S. 93—Co-sharer with separate account in Collectorate—Continuance as "co-owner"—Appointment of common manager.

An estate is still a single estate for Revenue purposes, though separate accounts have been opened in respect of it. A co-sharer continues to be a "co-owner" though there is a separate entry in respect of the share in the Collectorate.

The dispute as to the management of an estate within the meaning of S. 93 of the Act need not be between all the co-owners of the estate. Nor the dispute need be as to the management of all and every part of the estate. What is required is a dispute between co-owners "as to" the management of the estate, that is, a dispute relating to or affecting the management of the estate. A dispute between the opposite parties, who own the greater part of the estate, even if the dispute be only as to the management of their share, is sufficient. Similarly a dispute as to the terms on which or the person with whom a particular holding or a number of holdings should be settled, is a dispute as to the management of the estate, though only a part of the estate is involved.

A manager of part of an estate is not a manager of the estate, because the part does not include the whole. A dispute as to the management of part of an estate is a dispute as to or relating to the management of the estate, because the whole includes the part (a).

The District Judge has power to appoint a common manager under the section though there may be disputes between the co-owners as to management of the estate involving a dispute as to boundaries between that common estate and another estate separately owned by one of the co-owners. *Kumar Soradindu Roy v. If the rent entered in the Record-of-Rights was the rent settled under Chap. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, then S. 113 of the Act precludes the landlords from obtaining on the strength of a provision for such enhancement contained in a contract entered into with the tenants prior to the date of the entry in the Record-of-Rights, a decree for rent at a higher rate than that entered in the Record-of-Rights.

S. 113 applies to rents settled under Chap. X. Under that chapter rent may be settled in accordance with the provisions contained in Ss. 104—104-J, or rent may be settled under S. 105 or S. 112. S. 113 does not apply to cases of rent otherwise settled.

There is really no inconsistency between S. 103-B and S. 113 and if there were any inconsistency between them, the general provisions of S. 103-B would have to give way to the particular provisions contained in S. 113.

In a suit by a landlord for settlement of fair and equitable rent the under-tenants of the tenants are proper parties though not necessary parties to the suit.

In settling a fair rent under S. 105 of the Act there is nothing to prevent the Revenue Officer and the Court from taking into consideration the terms and conditions embodied in the lease or other written document by which the rights of the parties are regulated (a).

A landlord applied under S. 105 of the Act for settlement of fair and equitable rents in respect of lands held by his tenants. The tenants were entered in the Record of Rights as tenure holders. The landlord disputed the correctness of these entries and asserted that the tenants were rayats and liable to pay rent as such. Upon this question an issue was raised which the Revenue Officer refused to try on the ground that for that purpose the under-tenants or the sub-tenants of the tenants were necessary parties. The same view was held by the District Judge also. Held that the under-tenants could not be denied to have been the proper parties, if they had been joined as parties to the proceedings, but they were not necessary parties in the sense that the proceedings must fail in their absence. Held also that the Revenue Officer should not have refused to try the

The proviso to S. 111-A applies only to a case where the record of rights has been framed in pursuance of an order made under S. 101, sub-S. (2) cl. (d), that is, to a case where a settlement of land revenue is being or is about to be made but not to a case where the Record of rights was prepared at the instance of the landlord under the provisions of S. 101, sub-S. (2), cl. (4).

Where after the assessment of a fair rent under S. 105, a subsequent suit for a two-fold declaration was brought by the tenants. Held that in so far as the tenants sought for a declaration that they were maurasi mokarari raiyats and not tenure holders and that the lands held by them constituted not one tenure but distinct raiyati holdings, the suit was maintainable, but that in so far as the tenants sought for a declaration that the landlord was not entitled to realise the rent assessed under S. 105, the suit was clearly barred by S. 109.

As the introduction of S. 105-A has not altered the scope of S. 109, S. 109 must be construed on the same lines as before the introduction of S. 105-A. To attract the operation of S. 109, it is essential to establish that the Civil suit has for its subject-matter what has already formed the subject of an application under S. 105 (a).

It cannot be held, on the analogy of the doctrine of constructive res judicata that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court has been constructively excluded even when a point has been neither raised nor decided under S. 105

In a proceeding under S. 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the landlord's case was that the area in the occupation of the tenant as found on measurement in the settlement proceedings under Chap. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act by the Revenue authorities exceeded the area mentioned in the kabuliyat, wherein it was stipulated that the landlord could have the land measured within the term and if the area or the classification was found to be wrong the tenant would be bound to pay additional rent or be entitled to a reduction as the case might be. The landlord claimed assessment of rent on the difference between these two areas and prayed for a fair and equitable rent being settled for all the lands in the holding. The tenant denied that he was in possession of excess lands. The Settlement Officer found that the tenant was in occupation of excess area and he assessed fair rent on this basis. In appeal the Special Judge held in substance that the tenant was not in occupation of excess lands because he must be deemed under his contract to be in occupation of the area mentioned therein. Against this decision of the Special Judge the landlord preferred an appeal to the High Court.

Held—That, when in a proceeding under S. 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the Settlement Officer is asked to increase the rent under sub-S. (4) in accordance with the rules laid down in S. 52, and the claim is refused on appeal to the Special Judge on the ground that the land of the tenant is not proved to be in excess of the area for which rent had been previously paid, a second appeal to the High Court is not barred by S. 109-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

That in the present case a second appeal lay to the High Court and should also succeed on the merits, inasmuch as the finding of the Special Judge involved an error of law. Jnanada Sundarl Chowdhraui v. Adu Sheikh, 20 C. W. N. 428 = 23 C.L.J. 281 = 48 C. 603 (F.B.) = 39 Ind. Cas. 148.

In this case the Record-of-Rights which was finally published on 14-11-1905 showed the plaintiff to be liable to pay rent to the landlord at a certain rate. The landlord sued for rent and got a decree against the plaintiff on 1-8-1912. Plaintiff now sued on 7-10-1912 for a declaration that he was a lakhiraj raiyat on the land and was not liable to pay rent to the defendant landlord.

Held, that the suit was one substantially under S. 111-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and although no reference was made to the record-of-rights in the plaint, the effect of VII, rr. 10 and 11—Plaint kept in the file until expiry of three months—Suit if may be dismissed later on—Jurisdiction of the Court, to proceed to try suit on the merits.

In view of the provision of S. 111-B of the Bengal Tenancy Act that a suit shall not be instituted in any Civil Court for the decision of certain issues within three months from date of the certificate of final publication of the record-of-rights, the proper course for the Court, when such a suit is brought within that period, is to reject the plaint under O. VII, r. 11, cl. (d) of the Civ. Pro. Code.

If, the defect being overlooked, the plaint is registered, the Court on subsequently discovering it when the three months have expired, would not be justified in dismissing the suit.

As the section does not take away the Civil Court's jurisdiction altogether it should, in such a case, proceed to try the suit on the merits.

Per Richardson, J.—If a plaint presented during the prohibited period be not at once returned or rejected under O. VII, r. 10 or r. 11 of the Civ. Pro. Code (as the legislature undoubtedly contemplates) and remains on the file of the Court, the suit may be treated, subject always to any question arising under S. 109, as though the plaint had been received and the suit instituted on the day following the expiration of such period (a). *Fran Krishna Saha v. The plaintiffs sued for Khas possession of land held by the defendants under a lease for five years on the ground that they were entitled to re-entry at the expiration of the agreement. It was found that the defendants were not in possession of the land before they entered it under their lease and that the land in suit was khas khamar. 'rent' may possibly include whatever is recoverable as rent under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act as also sums ancillary to rent, such as interest on rent in arrears, or statutory damages for non-payment of rent.

A suit was brought for recovery of Rs. 82-8 as arrears of rent and damages and of Rs. 50 as damages for breach of contract, i.e., for recovery of the sum of Rs. 132-8. A decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff, which was confirmed on appeal:

Held, that a second appeal was barred under S. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, in so far as the claim for rent was concerned, and in respect of the claim for damages for breach of contract, a second appeal was equally barred under S. 102 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Held, that no second appeal lies under S. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, as it does not involve a question of the amount of rent annually payable by the tenant.

Jeth raiyats have to perform certain duties under the landlord, as for example, calling tenants for the collection of rent and such similar duties and for that they are allowed by the landlord, by way of wages and instead of payment in cash, a mafi from the total rent instead of payment in cash. Mafi is not rent because it is a sum of money payable by the landlord to the tenant, whereas rent is money payable by the tenant to the landlord and mafi is a set-off against the rent. *Shalikh Safait Hossain v. S. 160, cl. A permission to create an interest of a particular description given in the lease granted by the landlord is sufficient for the purposes of S. 160, cl. (g) of the Act.

Held, that the words were sufficient to authorise the creation of a sub-tenancy within the meaning of S. 160, cl. When the occupancy right of a judgment-debtor has been advertised for sale in execution of a decree for rent, the transferee of the occupancy holding, whose name has not been registered in the books of the landlord and who has in no way been recognized by the landlord, is not a person who, within the meaning of S. 170, sub-S. Such an unregistered transferee of an occupancy holding is not entitled to make a deposit under S. 170 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885.

The interests voidable on the sale referred to in S. 170 are those interests which are incumbrances within the meaning of S. 161 (a).

In determining what Art. 3 of Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act means, the purpose and scope of the Act, which governs the relations of landlord and tenant only, must not be left out of sight. It was not the design of the Act to deprive a tenant of the rights that he otherwise possesses against a third person between whom and himself there was no relationship of landlord and tenant. It was only intended to deal with such rights as existed between landlord and tenant.

To deprive a tenant of his right of suit, there must be a plain dispossession within the meaning of Art. 3 of the schedule. Krishna Chandra Bagdi v. Satish Chandra Banerji, 20 C.W.N. 872 = 35 Ind. Cas. 365.

The Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899, provides that the Corporation shall compensate every person who suffers damage by the removal of fixtures erected before June 1, 1863.

The Corporation served J with notices under S. 341 to remove certain structures and thereafter obtained orders from the Magistrate for their demolition; but took no steps to enforce these orders. J brought a regular suit in the Court of Subordinate Judge against the Corporation claiming (1) declaration that the fixtures were erected before June 1, 1863; (2) declaration that she was entitled to compensation for loss she would suffer by their removal; (3) declaration that the Corporation could not remove them till compensation was paid; (4) that the Court should fix the amount of the compensation; and (5) an injunction restraining removal till the compensation was paid.

Held, (1) that on the true construction of S. 341 (3), the assessment of compensation was not a condition precedent to the demolition of the structures, (2) that Courts other than the Small Causes Court were, by S. 617, debarred from fixing the compensation, and therefore as the suit sought relief under any but the first two heads, it was misconceived, but that J was entitled under S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act I of 1877, to a declaratory decree for the first two claims, the Corporation having denied her right to compensation until the hearing of in the suit put up the holding to sale and purchased it, but meanwhile, in the course of settlement proceedings, the land was recorded as the mundari khuntkati of the defendant.

Under S. 83 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, the Settlement Officer has jurisdiction to decide a dispute between landlord and tenant as to whether the latter was a mundar khuntkatar and to record an entry to the effect in the record-of-rights.

Held that, although the new Act did not apply to the suit, it governed proceedings in execution instituted after the suit had terminated in a decree; and the entry that the land was the mundari khuntkati of the tenants being conclusive evidence under S. 256 of the Act, the landlord acquired no title in the land. *Jogendra Nath Dey v. The expression “relating to the execution” includes an order passed in respect of a payment for the purpose of getting a sale set aside.

An applicant under S. 212 need not prove that the interests have been lawfully acquired. If he is able to satisfy the Court that he claims an interest and alleges lawful title, the mere fact of the claim will be sufficient to bring him under S. 212. It will not be necessary for him to prove his title. The section clearly means that parties who desire to have a sale set aside should not be held down to strict proof, which may require elaborate evidence for the purpose of showing that the origin of the title was lawful. The proceeding contemplated by the section is a summary proceeding in which the mere claim to a lawful title will be sufficient. Panchanon Mahata v. Kanai Mahata, 36 Ind. Cas. 829.

The Calcutta Improvement Act does not authorize the trustees to acquire land compulsorily for the purpose of recoupment. S. 69 is the only provision in the Act for compulsory acquisition and under that section land can be compulsorily acquired only for carrying out any of the purposes of the Act. Recoupment is not one of the purposes of the Act which are enumerated in the Preamble and are formulated in detail in Ss. 36, 39 and 52.

Ss. 41, 42, 78, 81, 122 and 123 do not by necessary implication authorize the compulsory acquisition of land for recoupment.

Ss. 41 and 42 specify matters which must or may be provided for, in an improvement scheme; they do not confer a right to acquire land compulsorily.

Ss. 78 and 81 treat of the abandonment of acquisition of unnecessary land and disposal of superfluous land respectively; neither section creates a right to acquire land compulsorily.

Ss. 122 and 123 relate to methods of account and do not touch the question of right of compulsory acquisition for recoupment.

The trustees are not competent to initiate a street scheme for one of the purposes mentioned in S. 39 and specified in their resolution, and then proceed with the scheme as if they had assumed jurisdiction for a different purpose.

The area which is intended to be benefited by a street-scheme must be first determined under S. 39, and then the scheme has to be drawn up with reference to the elements mentioned in S. 40. The area so determined is larger than the land to be acquired for the execution of the improvement works.

2.—Bengal Acts—(Continued).Act V of 1911 (Calcutta Improvement)—(Ctd.).

The expression "providing building sites" in S. 89 means making it possible to use as building site land which cannot be now used as building site; it does not mean buying up land already fit for building site, pulling down houses existing thereon and selling the land at a profit for erection of buildings.

The expression "laying out or re-laying out" in S. 41 (b) cannot apply to the entire land comprised in the area intended to be benefited by a street-scheme.

The expression "street" does not include the abutting lands on both sides and the houses thereon, as it does in the English Local Government Act, 1858; it has the same meaning as in S. 3 (37) of the Calcutta Municipal Act.

The term 'affected' in S. 42 (a) means neither 'beneficially affected or improved in value' nor 'prejudicially affected or impaired in value,' but signifies 'acted upon physically or materially.' Land is affected by the execution of an improvement scheme within the meaning of S. 42 (a) when by the construction of the improvement works, there is a physical interference, with any right, public or private, which the owner is entitled to exercise in connection with that property.

S. 49 (2) does not bar the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to determine whether the trustees have or have not acted in violation or excess of statutory authority. As Ss. 155 and 160 show, S. 49 does not bar suits of all descriptions; it merely shows that after the publication of the notification of sanction by the Local Government, it must be assumed that the scheme has been framed and sanctioned duly, that is, in conformity with the procedure prescribed by the Act.

S. 156 does not apply to a suit brought not because of an act done but for the purpose of an injunction to restrain an act threatened to be done.

The term 'acquisition' does not necessarily mean compulsory acquisition under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act; Ss. 68 and 69 indicate the distinction between acquisition by agreement and compulsory acquisition.

In any concrete case, if the competence of the Board to compulsorily acquire land, is called in question, the test to be applied is, whether the land is proposed to be acquired for carrying out one or other of the purposes of the Act as indicated in the Preamble and developed in Ss. 36, 39 and 62.

Mode of construction of Statutes which confer on a corporation extensive powers of interference with private rights explained. Where the objects of the Statute do not obviously imply such an intention, it must be presumed that the Legislature does not desire to confiscate private property or to encroach upon private rights; it is expected that if the Legislature intended to confer on the executive authorities unlimited powers of interference with private rights, it would manifest its intention plainly in express words, at any rate by clear and necessary implication.

Distinction between acquisition for recoupment and taxation for purpose of recoupment explained. When a proposed acquisition is abandoned on condition of periodical payment by the owner of a sum fixed in perpetuity or the payment in lump of the capitalised value thereof, a tax is in essence imposed on the land; such a tax can be validly imposed only with the sanction of the proper authorities duly obtained under S. 43 of the Indian Councils Act, 1861, and the Statute imposing the burden must do so in clear and unambiguous language.

Proper use of judicial precedents explained; they are of value only in so far as they enunciate principles. No useful purpose is served, when a question arises as to the construction of an Act, by reference to judicial decisions on the meaning of other Acts which, though similar in scope and purpose, are couched in different terms and provide machinery of a different type to carry out their objects. *Trustees for the Improvement of Calcutta v. The power to call for the records of other Courts is a power which is inherent in the Judge of a Land Acquisition Court and consequently in the Special Tribunal. Nareesh Chandra Bose v. Hira Lal Bose, 20 C.W.N. 360=43 C. 239=34 Ind. Cas. 268.

The Manager, Encumbered Estates, Sind, is not a Revenue Officer as that term is defined in S. 3 of the Revenue Jurisdiction Act, and S. 11 of that Act is no bar to the institution of a suit against him without first preferring an appeal against his order.

Owing to the minority of a Talukdar, the revenue administration of his village was entrusted to the Talukdari Settlement Officer and under him to the Mamlatdar of Prantij, under a guardianship order passed by the District Court. To recover the arrears of assessment for past years from one of the Khatedars of the village, the Mamlatdar attached ornaments belonging to the Khatedar (plaintiff). The plaintiff having sued the Mamlatdar to recover damages for the wrongful attachment:

Held, that the Mamlatdar was authorised to distrain moveable property of the plaintiff, both under S. 154 of the Land Revenue Code, because he was invested with the power of making attachment of moveables by delegation from the Collector of Ahmedabad, and under S. 111 of the Land Revenue Code, as modified by S. 33 of the Gujarat Talukdars' Act.

To ascertain the liability of the plaintiff to pay income-tax, a Mamlatdar removed the account-books belonging to the plaintiff from his house, against his will and in spite of his protests. The plaintiff having sued to recover damages for the wrongful seizure of his account-books by the Mamlatdar:

Held, that the seizure having been unauthorised and wrongful, the Mamlatdar was liable in damages. Daluchand Fulchand Gandhi v. Gulabhai Kanthadji, 18 Bom. L.R. 323=34 Ind. Cas. 198.

- (4) Ss. 10-A, 9 (y)—Suit by money-lender to enforce a lease—Oral evidence to show that the purchase relied on by the plaintiff was really a mortgage—Benami transaction.

In enacting S. 10-A of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, the intention of the Legislature was to apply its provisions to suits by a money-lender suing to enforce either a lease or a sale-deed against an agriculturist, though the instrument sued on was really according to the intention of the parties in the nature of a mortgage.

Reading cl. (y) of S. 3 by the light of S. 10-A of the Act, it appears that the nature of the suit under cl. (y) should not be determined by the frame of the plaint, but by the allegations of the parties which raised the question of mortgage or no mortgage. Gautam Jayachand Gujar v. building will not be permitted to project on or overhanging any public street or Municipal land, and where a person constructed a door each leaf of which was in two folding sections and the door opened outwards, and where each leaf, if opened with the sections folded, would not project into the street, but if opened with the sections extended would project beyond the line of the street.

Held, that the door, when opened with the sections extended, projected into the street, and it therefore infringed the directions given by the Municipality (a).

The Municipality has, under S. 96 (2) of Bombay Act III of 1901, power to impose a condition as to the location of doors in reference to a street, and therefore a condition that a door shall be so made that it cannot swing over the street is such a condition; for a door that swings outwards has a different location to a door that swings inwards.

S. 96 of the Bombay District Municipal Act gives the Municipality a very wide power of regulating buildings.

The general power is to pass such orders with reference to the building as the Municipality thinks proper. The power is one within the discretion of the Municipality and it is subject to two restrictions, viz., (1) the general limitation as to all statutory powers of public functionaries that the orders issued under it are reasonable; and (2) the particular limitation expressed in the section that the orders are not inconsistent with the Act (b).

Compensation is not payable unless the land left vacant is included in a public street (c).

If, by giving the words of an Act the meaning which they naturally and ordinarily import and bear, a result is obtained which is consistent with the Act, it matters not that it may be in excess of what the Legislature had in view (d). *The Municipality of Karachi v. Act I of 1905 (Bombay Court of Wards)—(Concluded).

Guardian not named in the suit—Irrregularity of procedure.

A suit was brought under the provisions of S. 92 of the Civ. Pro. Code, against the defendants as trustees of a Mahomedan religious institution, to recover trust-moneys from them. Defendant No. 1 was a Government ward and his estate was in charge of the Talukdari Settlement Officer, under the Bombay Court of Wards Act. No notice, as required by S. 31 of the Act, was given; nor was the Talukdari Settlement Officer named as a guardian of defendant No. 1. A decree was passed in the suit against defendant No. 1 for Rs. 6,000. On appeal it was contended that the suit was bad for want of notice under S. 31, and for omission to name the guardian under S. 32:

Held, (1) that S. 31 had no application, for the suit was merely one relating to the property of a religious institution, and not to the property of defendant No. 1;

(2) that S. 32 did not provide that if the Court of Wards was not named as guardian from the commencement of the suit, the suit was bad;

(3) that the omission to name the guardian in no way affected the merits of the case, and might be treated as a mere defect or irregularity in procedure. Sayad Amin Saheb v. Sheikh Masleudin, 18 Bom. L.R. 563=40 B. 541.

The Court of the District Judge of Sambalpur has taken the place of the Deputy Commissioner as the Principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction under the Act of 1885. Therefore the decision of the Deputy Commissioner must be deemed to have been a decision of the District Judge and consequently an appeal lay to the High Court and not to the District Court. *Padman Lochan Misra v. The words 'and the previous sums (if any) secured by mortgage of it' in S. 38 (2) of the Tenancy Act of 1883, which corresponds word for word with S. 41 (4) of Act XI of 1898, should be construed as including not only sums due to the person who is taking the contemplated mortgage but also the sums due to him and to another creditor.

There seems to be strong reason in the object of the Legislature which was mainly to protect the interests of the landlord, for placing on the expression 'and the previous sums secured by the mortgage of the holding' the unrestricted meaning to which the words used are prima facie open and which from their generality they should receive (a).

The rule of ejusdem generis or noscitur a sociis does not apply to the three items under

The word 'give' in connection with notices in S. 41 (2), C.P. Tenancy Act, is equivalent to 'serve' (vide S. 27, General Clauses Act, 1897), and S. 26, C.P. General Clauses Act, (1914) (a).

To put a notice into the post is hardly to 'give' it to the addressee, and the month's time allowed to the landlord under sub-S. (2) of S. 41 begins from the date of the receipt of the notice.

The object of the Legislature in prescribing a notice to the landlord as a condition precedent to certain alienations was to place him in a position to keep out undesirable strangers. Incidentally the interests of tenants are also served, inasmuch as they have to think twice before determining to make an out and out transfer or to take a considerable loan on the security of their holdings. But the tenor of S. 41 throughout its considerable length is to vest the landlord with a power of acquiring the land himself to the exclusion of tenant and transferee alike. *Dina v. Where an absolute occupancy tenant makes a transfer in contravention of S. 41, Central Provinces Tenancy Act, and the landlord brings a suit for avoiding the transfer and for possession on the ground that the transfer was without his (landlord's) consent, the question of abandonment by the tenant does not arise, whether the tenant be made a party or not.

(7) Ss. 46, 47 and 95—Trespass, suit for, whether cognisable by Civil Court—Mortgage—Foreclosure.

Where the claim is based on trespass, and the defendants are proved to be in occupation of the lands without colour of title and are thus trespassers the provisions of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act do not apply.

Consequently the Civil Court is not deprived of jurisdiction to hear and dispose of such a claim.

It is an elementary principle when statutory right and liabilities are being created and jurisdiction has been conferred upon a special Court for the investigation of matters which may possibly be in controversy, such jurisdiction is exclusive and cannot concurrently be exercised by the ordinary Courts. (a)

Quære:—Whether in the case where a mortgagee forecloses and goes into possession of a tenancy within the provisions and terms of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act under a decree in a foreclosure mortgage suit, the provisions of Ss. 46 and 47 of that Act would apply to any such case. We are rather inclined to think that they would not, because the mortgagee is in possession, not by virtue of the mortgage, but by virtue of a decree of the Civil Court founded upon the mortgage; and that consequently his possession is not attributable to the mortgage but to the decree in which the mortgage itself has become merged. Act II of 1864 (Madras Revenue Recovery).

Government revenue, Government's right for, nature of—Jodi—Assignment—Assignees, if entitled to a first charge.

Per Wallis, C.J.—The right of the Government as regards Government revenue is only a right to a charge on the land and a right to forfeit, by due course of law, the title of the person holding the land who does not pay the charge (a).

The statutory charge for rent now possessed by landholders and certain Inamdars is a creation of the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1909). Prior to that, it was well settled that, where the Government assigned its right to revenue to the Inamdar, subject to the payment of a Jodi, the Inamdar did not acquire a charge upon the land but was left to recover his rent from his occupiers under the provisions of the Madras Rent Recovery Act (VII of 1865).

Where the Jodi payable by an Inamdar to the Government has not been assigned, it is recoverable by the Government, like peishkush, by sale of the Inamdar's interest under the Revenue Recovery Act, 1864. Where the right to collect the Jodi has been transferred to a Zemindar or Mittahdar, in consideration of his undertaking to pay a fixed peishkush, the Zemindar or Mittahdar has no charge upon the lands therefor and he can only recover arrears of Jodi in a suit for rent.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—The Government has a first charge for Jodi which is directly payable to it, as by the Common Law of this country as well as the Revenue Recovery Act, 1864, a debt due to the King takes priority over other debts except possibly those due to Brahmins (b).

6.—Madras Acts—(Continued).Act II of 1864 (Madras Revenue Recovery)—(Concluded).

The term Jodi or quit-rent is applied indiscriminately in several decisions to what is recoverable by a proprietor from his under-tenure holders as well as to payments due to Government by way of assessment.

According to the principle enunciated in S. 141, Contract Act, an assignee of Government revenue is entitled to the security which the Government had, although he may not be entitled to all the statutory remedies of his assignor and consequently an assignee of Jodi as such will have a first charge therefor (c). Nor does such a transfer of registry constitute the transferee the agent of the transferor under S. 79 of the said Act since it would have the effect of defeating the provisions of the Act.

In the case of an undivided Hindu family all the members need not join in tendering pattas and the manager of the family is competent to grant pattas and sue for rents on behalf of the family (b). Parthasarathi Aiyangar v. Rangasamy Aiyangar, 4 L.W. 654.

Plaintiff sued the Taluq Board for recovery of fee levied for granting license for continuance of his market. He had already paid a fee under the Act when the market was opened and the Board demanded a fresh fee for a fresh license.

The lower Court granted plaintiff a decree holding that S. 117 (e) contemplates levy of a fee only for opening a new market and not for its continuance.

On revision, held, that under S. 117, cl. (b) (3), there is no option to the Board to refuse a license for old markets established before the Act but it can refuse to grant license for other markets. That cl. (5) makes it clear that the grant endures for one year only and that cl. (1) says that the fee levied is per annum. The Board was therefore entitled to impose a fresh levy and plaintiff cannot recover. The Taluq Board, Bowlipatti v. Janakiammal, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 253=4 L.W. 336=36 Ind. Cas. 384. SESHAGIRI IYER, J.

S. 41—Bona fide exercise of discretion—Specific Relief Act, S. 45—Mandamus—Commissioner of Police—Refusal to issue license to conduct procession, though right established by Civil Court—Apprehension of breach of the peace.

Under S. 41 of the Madras City Police Act (III of 1888) the Commissioner of Police can, in the exercise of his discretion, refuse to issue a license to conduct a procession through a particular street, although the right of the applicant to use that street for the procession has been declared by a decree of a competent Civil Court. Such refusal may be justified if, owing to the short time that elapsed between the judgment and the proposed procession, it may not be possible to take sufficient precautions to regulate the procession without any likelihood of the breach of the peace, or any other special circumstances of strain and difficulty of any particular year renders such refusal necessary for the preservation of the public peace and public safety.

In cases of such justifiable refusal of license by the Commissioner, the High Court will not order the Commissioner of Police to issue a license.

But if the Commissioner goes on continuing such refusal year after year so that it would really be an attempt to evade the judgment of the Civil Court, the High Court will interfere for giving effect to the decree of the Civil Court. In re T. Nagalinga Mudaliar, 31 M.L.J. 426.

It is no doubt desirable that bad characters should be prevented from practising in Village Courts and the Act may need amendment, but, as it stands, such an order is illegal.

Where, at the blind end of a private street, the Corporation purchased a house and pulled it down and converted the site into a street connecting the private street with other streets beyond and enabled traffic to pass through it, and the plaintiff erected demarcation stones to prevent carriages and cattle passing through the private street: Held—

Phillips, J.—That, in a town, private owners have to put up with inconvenience in many respects pro bono publico and the Corporation cannot be said to have done any wrong in pulling down the houses and they will not forfeit whatever right of access to the private street they had as owners of the site. The Municipal Act gives the Corporation considerable powers for the purpose of protecting the health, safety and convenience of the public, and the erection amounted to an obstruction within the meaning of S. 247, and the Corporation cannot be restrained by injunction from requiring the owner (plaintiff) to remove such obstruction under the powers given to them under that section.

The sections of the Act which give powers or restrict the rights of individuals must be strictly construed.

Wallis, C.J.—The demarcation stones do not amount to an obstruction but would constitute a fence, in fact, a boundary fence, within the meaning of S. 247. S. 247 gives very wide powers to the Corporation. It may seem strange that the Legislature should prevent the owners of a private street from erecting a fence for the preservation of their rights, but the language is express. *Rudrappa Achary v. Under the Madras Land Encroachments Act, it is perfectly legal for a Tahsildar, acting under the written order of the Collector, to evict a person from the possession of land encroached upon by him.

S. 14 of the Madras Land Encroachments Act is very wide in its terms and gives a remedy to any person who deems himself aggrieved by any proceeding under the Act.

A suit to recover possession of land from which a person has been evicted under the provisions of the Madras Land Encroachments Act is one under the special statute and not one for the recovery of real property under the general law and is governed by the shorter period of limitation prescribed by that Act. *Gangamma Naidu v. Act I of 1908 (Madras Estates Land).

(1) Suit for rent—Land situated in a Zamindari—Ryoti land—Ijara lease—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to try.

Prima facie a land within the ambit of a zamindari must be deemed to be ryoti land unless the zamindar shows it is private land. When there is no allegation in the plaint as regards the nature of the land, being an 'estate' and the claim being one for rent, the suit lies in the Revenue Courts.

Where there is a ryoti land and the suit is for rent, the proper forum is the Revenue Court and not the Civil Court, notwithstanding that the claim for rent arises out of an ijara lease.

Where in a connected batch of suits the High Court has held that the proper forum is the Revenue Court and not the Civil Court, it would be creating an anomalous state of affairs now to hold that the proper forum is the Civil Court. *Goplaetti Narayanaaswami Naidu v. of the landlord from Fasli 1815 to 1818. They however applied for pattas in Faslis 1818 and 1820 and payments were accepted from them; but no pattas were given them. In Fasli 1821 the landlord decided to reserve the land for forest and directed the filing of the suit to eject delinquents. Held that there was a presumption that the land was "old waste ryoti land" within the meaning of S. 2 (3) of Act I of 1908 (Madras Estates Land); that the defendants were "admitted to possession" of the land and were "ryots"; and that under S. 163 (1) of the Act, they were not liable to be ejected as trespassers, but that the suit came under the purview of Ss. 153 and 157 of the Act and should be brought in Revenue Court (a).

Oldfield, J.—It is for the party, who seeks to oust the jurisdiction of the ordinary Civil Courts, to establish his right to do so (b).

The burden of proof that the land comes within one of the exemptions in S. 2 (16) (b) or 6 (4) of Act I of 1908 (Madras Estates Land) is on the party asserting it.

A person from whom a landholder has received the payment due under S. 45 in respect of his occupation of old waste must be deemed to have been admitted to possession, and S. 163 confers a right of suit in the Civil Court only against those who are liable under S. 45, but have made no payment, those who have made such payment being treated as having been admitted. The payment under S. 45 is referred to in the section itself as "rent"; and persons, who continue to hold after making a payment voluntarily and in consequence of the Collector's decision must be treated as holding on condition of making such payment and are, therefore, within the definition of S. 2 (15) of Act I of 1908 (Madras Estates Land). Suits to eject them will, therefore, lie under S. 153 in the Revenue Court. The provisions of S. 153 are not exhaustive of all possible causes of eviction.

Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—Actual cultivation by a tenant without his having been obliged to incur any extraordinary expense or trouble in bringing the land under cultivation, is almost conclusive evidence that the land is cultivable land. The whole policy of the Madras Estates Land Act is in favour of raising a presumption that a land in an estate is ryoti land.

Sivai jama rent paid by tenants is not in the eye of the law merely damages agreed upon between the landowner and the trespasser. It is rent payable by persons who are really entitled to be called 'tenants.' President, District Board, Tanjore v. Kannaswami Thondaman, 35 Ind. Cas. 121.

Act I of 1908 (Madras Estates Land)—(Old.).

The fact that a village, —granted as an Inam and containing Inam and ryotwari holdings, — was treated as a whole Inam village at the Inam Settlement and the Revenue authorities themselves subsequently recognised it as such, is a clear proof that the whole village was granted as an Inam and is an "estate" within the meaning of Act I of 1908. *Kasturi Aiyangar v. (4) S. 3—"Rent"—Meaning—Money payable for land let for building houses—"Jerayati."

Money payable on account of land let for purposes of building houses is not rent within the meaning of S. 3 of the Madras Estates Land Act and a suit to recover the said amount is cognisable by the Civil Court and not by a Revenue Court.

"Jerayati" may mean cultivable land but it is also used in the Madras Presidency as opposed to Inam land. Ramachandra Mardaraja Deo v. Dukka Podhano, 31 Ind. Cas. 852.

(4-a) Ss. 3 and 40—Estate—Grant to Brahmin before Permanent Settlement for subsistence—Onus—Suit for commutation of rent.

Where at some time previous to the Permanent Settlement a Zemindar granted a village to a Brahmin for subsistence and there was a jodi payable at the time of the Permanent Settlement to the Zamindar it is a correct presumption to make that the grant was of the melvaram only. The question of onus whether the village granted constitutes an estate within the meaning of the Madras Estates Land Act depends on the circumstances of each case.

The ryots in occupation of certain lands in an Inam village instituted a suit under S. 40 of the Madras Estates Land Act for commutation of rent in kind into money rent. The evidence showed that the ryots have been in possession of their holdings at more or less fixed rates for years and their fathers before them and that there were at times exchanges of land according to custom, that there had been no relinquishment and that the relinquishment clause had not been acted upon.

Held that the burden of proving that the grantee was the owner of the kudivaram lay on the defendant landlord and that, in the absence of evidence, the village must be deemed to be an estate under S. 3 (2) (d) of the Act and that commutation should be allowed. *Radha Krishna Das Goswami v. In this case a personal grant for subsistence was originally made by the Nabob of the Carnatic to a member of his family. At the time of the grant the villages in question were mirasi villages, and long before 1843 plaintiff's predecessors had become the owners of both the kudivaram and melvaram therein, and no occupancy right had been acquired, before the coming into force of the Estates Land Act, by the defendant or his predecessors who were let in as tenants for cultivation of the lands.

Held, the grant, though styled a jaghir, was only an 'Inam' within the meaning of S. 8 (2) (d) of the Estates Land Act, and an action to evict the defendant (tenant) was maintainable in the ordinary Civil Courts (a).

The nature of Jaghir tenure and the distinction between 'Jaghir' and 'Inam' discussed (b).

The suit lands had remained uncultivated for ten years immediately preceding 1900. In 1900, they were left for cultivation on a lease for five years. In 1906 the lands were let to the defendant under a lease for three years and were in the defendants' occupation at the time of the passing of the Madras Estates Land Act. In 1910 the landholder sued to eject the defendants as the lease had expired on 30th June 1909. The defendants contended that they had acquired occupancy rights under S. 6 of the Estates Land Act. The contention of the landholder was that the lands were "old waste" within the meaning of S. 3, cl. 7, sub-cl. (1) and that therefore no occupancy right could be acquired under S. 6:

Held per curiam (1) that the lands are not "old waste" but "ryoti land" and that under S. 6 (1) the ryots had acquired occupancy rights therein;

(2) that the words "time of letting" in S. 3, cl. 7, sub-cl. 1 and 2, refer only to the time of admission of the particular person who is claiming occupancy right by virtue of such admission and not to be first letting of land which till then remained uncultivated.

Semble: The words "letting" and "tenant" are used throughout the Act only in cases where no occupancy right is conferred.

Per Wallis, C. J., and Srinivasa Aiyangar, J.—The period of "ten years" referred to in sub-cl. 1 must also be "immediately prior to the letting," even though these words do not appear in sub-cl. 1 as they do in sub-cl. (2).

(9) S. 3, cl. 7 (2), S. 6—Old waste—Expiry of lease and tenants giving up possession on 30th June 1908—Land let to the tenants after the 1st July 1908—No occupancy rights previous to the Act—Nature of the land—Whether tenants acquire occupancy right under the Act—"Passing of the Act," "coming into force of the Act," meaning of.

The tenants who were in possession of certain Lankas in which they had no occupancy rights under leases gave up possession of the Lankas on 30th June 1908. The Madras Estates Land Act which received the assent of the Governor-General on 28th June 1908, came into force on the 1st July 1908. The lands were again let to the tenants and possession given to them about a month later. The letting was, however, for the whole of the Fasli 1318 as well as for the two subsequent faslis.

Held, that although the tenants obtained the right to possession of the lands from the 1st July 1908, the date of the commencement of the period of the lease, still since they had no possession either legal or actual on that date, they could not be said to be "ryots now in possession" of the lands within the meaning of S. 6 of the Estates Land Act.

Held also, that whatever might be the meaning of the expression "the time of letting" in S. 3, cl. 7 (2) whether the date from which the lease took effect or the date when it was executed since that date was subsequent to 28th June 1908, on which the Act was passed by receiving the assent of the Governor-General and since at that time the land had remained without occupancy rights for over ten years, they came within the definition of "Old waste" in S. 3, cl. 7 (2) of the Act and consequently S. 6, cl. (1), was inapplicable.

The word "possession" in S. 6 does not cover a mere right to possession.

The words "passing of the Act" do not mean the same thing as "the coming into force of the Act." Under S. 1, the Act came into force on the 1st July 1908, but the Act was Kanganam fee which is a contribution paid by the tenant to reimburse the landlord for the cost of the supervision of harvest out of which Melwaram has to be delivered to the landlord falls under S. 3 (ii), cl. (a) of the Estates Land Act and is not an illegal cess within the meaning of S. 143 of the Act. Consequently a term in the patta providing for its levy is not improper.

The claim of the Zamindar to enter upon the holding for the purpose of forming an estimate of the outturn is opposed to S. 73 of the Act and should not be allowed.

The Act does not cast on the tenant any liability for Panchamati or compensation to the landlord for loss caused to the crop by cattle, theft or clandestine removal.

Where it is proved that by custom only cultivated extents were being charged with rent and not lands left uncultivated, no rent can be charged in respect of the uncultivated portion.

The liability of the ryot to pay rent under S. 4 of the Estates Land Act is subject to any custom or contract to the contrary that may be established.

In the case of kulam korvai lands i.e., lands in the tank bed, in the absence of proof of any custom by the tenants to put up ridges on the land, the landlord has got the right to prevent tenants from putting up ridges so as to prevent the tanks having the full benefit of the rain water flowing into them. Therefore the tenants are bound to pay sarasari if they should put up ridges and cultivate kulam korvai lands.

The tenants are liable to pay sarasari wet rates if they raised dry crops on Nanja land while they could have raised wet crops, but to pay the usual dry rates if they raised dry crops owing to insufficiency of water. *Arunachalam Chettiar v. Act I of 1908 (Madras Estates Land)—(Old.).

A tenant does not become a ryot in respect of land held by him only for pasturing purposes, though, it may be, that the use of the land solely for pasture may not deprive him of his claim to be called 'ryot' provided he has the right to use it for agriculture (a).

Unless a land is of such a nature that it is ordinarily cultivable, or cultivable at intervals of not unusual length, it is not 'cultivable' land and, therefore, not 'ryoti' land and the tenant of such a land is not a 'ryot.'

The term 'Jeroyati,' as used in some parts of the Telugu country, means merely 'non-inam' (b).

Saline land used only for grazing purposes is old waste within the meaning of S. 3 (7) (1) of the Madras Estates Land Act.

The ordinary meaning of 'agriculture' is the raising of annual or periodical grain crops through the operation of ploughing, sowing, etc. (c).

A tenant in possession of saline grazing land let only for the purpose of pasture is not entitled to claim occupancy right therein by virtue of S. 6 of the Madras Estates Land Act.

A 'ryot' under the Estates Land Act is a person who holds for the purpose of agriculture ryoti land in an estate.

Ryoti land is cultivable land in an estate other than private land.

Land fit usually only for pasturing cattle and not for ploughing and raising agricultural crops is not ryoti land (a).

Where a piece of land has for a great many years not been cultivated but has been used only for pasturing cattle, the onus of showing that it is cultivable is on those who assert it is ryoti.

Waste land is land not under cultivation and it may or may not be cultivable land. Land which is not ryoti does not become ryoti land, merely because it is let for pasturage.

Admission for purposes of pasturage only, to waste land even though ryoti does not confer on the person so admitted any right of permanent occupancy.

A village will not cease to be an 'estate' within the meaning of cl. 2 (d) of S. 3 of Madras Estates Land Act, merely because the grantee owned the kudivaram in certain lands included therein. To remove a village from the definition, it is necessary that the 'grantee' should at the time of the grant own the kudivaram of all the lands then brought under cultivation.

Though the fact that the tenants had no occupancy rights in the suit lands may give rise to a presumption that the landlord owned the kudivaram in those lands, that is insufficient to remove the case outside the definition in cl. (d), sub-S. (2), S. 3 of the said Act.

The exception to S. 8 of the Act does not apply to cases where, at any time before the passing of the Act, the kudivaram was held by a person who subsequently became, as inamdar, possessed of the land revenue. At the time of the suit, however, they were not in possession of the holding having been ejected by the defendant but they based their claim on their possession on 1-7-08. The lease differed from the ordinary jeroyiti patta in the following respects:—(1) The Isaradars were not the residents of the village; (2) the lanka was leased in an auction and the lessees were called Isaradars; (3) the rent was a lump sum and not so much per acre; (4) the land was periodically sold in public auction to the highest bidder; (5) the Isaradars and the rent changed at the end of lease; (6) the Isaradars had no right to relinquish before the expiry of the lease; (7) the lanka was watched by the estate servants and repaired at great cost; and (8) the lessee was not entitled to reduction or remission of rent for any cause.

Held, that the plaintiffs were not ryots within the meaning of the Estates Land Act, and therefore did not acquire rights of permanent occupancy.

Where the kudivaram right of a ryot is purchased by the landholder under S. 8, cls. 1 and 3 of Act I of 1908, the ryoti land cannot cease to be such owing to such merger of the melevaram and kudivaram rights, and the landlord, purchaser, is entitled to continue to treat the land as a ryoti land.

S. 8, cls. 1 and 3 of the Act prevents lands once ryoti from being converted into private lands, on the ground of merger of the Kudivaram rights into melevaram rights. It is only when there are acts of strong and unequivocal character that the Court would be justified in giving an exceptional finding in favour of the conversion of ryoti into private land. *Methuku Sivaramayya v. S. 8, cl. (1) of the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), simply enunciates the general law of merger, and the same is subject to qualifications to be found in other portions of the Act.

Act I of 1908 (Madras Estates Land)—(Ctd.).

S. 8, cl. 2, is an application of the general rule in cl. (1) to the particular case where one amongst several co-landholders subsequently acquires the occupancy right.

But where one out of several mirasidars or ryots becomes entitled to the rights of a landholder in respect of the same land it is the converse of S. 8, cl. (2), and is specifically provided for by explanation to cl. 6 of S. 6.

Where one of two persons jointly entitled to the occupancy right in a certain estate became entitled by purchase to the semindari or melvaram right also.

Held (1) that he does not thereby lose his occupancy right; (Bengal Tenancy Act, S. 22, Explanation and 28 A. 763, referred to);

(2) that the restriction that such acquisition should be by inheritance or devise applies only to cl. 6 of S. 6 and not to the explanation to cl. (6).

The Madras Estates Land Act is a comprehensive tenancy Code and wherever it is explicit, a discussion of the general law is irrelevant.

In an ejectment suit where the defendants did not plead any want of notice in the first Court and there was no issue regarding it, held that the plea of insufficiency or invalidity of notice cannot be allowed to be raised for the first time in second appeal. *Muthu Reddi v. Under S. 40 of the Estates Land Act, the occupancy ryot has the right to sue for commutation. The Act gives him this right and it is not a matter resting within the option and discretion of the proprietor, but is within the discretion of the Court to allow or refuse.

It is to the convenience of both parties to have a fixed money rent and the advantages are generally in favour of commutation. Gopala Krishna Aiyar v. C. Srinivasa Row Sahib, 34 Ind. Cas. 935.

Certain ryots in Kallikota and Attagada applied under S. 74 of the Madras Estates Land Act to the Deputy Collector to depute an officer to make a division of the produce. Notice was served on the landlord under S. 75, who after 17 days filed an objection petition before the Deputy Collector that an estimate had already been made by the estate Revenue-Inspector which had not been objected to by the ryots and that the latter had already carried away nearly half the produce. The officer deputed made an award on 28th May 1912 noting the objection of the Estate Manager about removal and divided the crops. No objection was filed by the landlord against the award and after a month it was confirmed by the Deputy Collector under S. 75 (7). There was no appraisal of the standing crop, no finding as to the removal and no determination of what would be a full crop as the tenants had already harvested the crops and stored it on the threshing floor even before they applied for the deputation of an officer.

The landlord contended that the award was therefore no award in law but a nullity.

Held (1) that the award was final and the landlord was bound by it;

(2) that if the landlord had any grievance against the award he should have filed an objection within a week of its delivery under S. 75 (7);

(3) that where the law provides a means of questioning the legality of an award, and the landlord had not chosen to avail himself of it, he has no right to question it afterwards (a).

Per Krishnam, J.—A landholder's claim for rent becomes merged in the award confirmed by the Collector under S. 75 (7) of the Act and he has no cause of action afterwards to sustain a suit for arrears of rent.

Per Curiam.—Under S. 205 of the Madras Estates Land Act the Collector and the Board of Revenue alone have the power to revise an order of a Revenue Officer and the High Court has no power to revise an order made under the Act. Ramachandra Marda Raja v. Mull Podhano, 4 L.W. 278—35 Ind. Cas. 640.

Certain lands belonging to the plaintiff were attached as belonging to defendants 2 and 3 and for arrears of rent due by them. The plaintiff preferred a claim petition, but, as, in spite of his objections, the land was about to be sold, he paid the rent due under protest and instituted the present suit for recovering that amount, impleading therein both the landlord (the 1st defendant) and the tenants, who had committed default (defendants 2 and 3).

Held per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—S. 128 of the Madras Estates Land Act permits a third party, whose property has been attached, to protect that property by paying the arrears said to be due on it. In such a case a derivative owner will, under cl. (1) of the section, be entitled to a charge for the amount so paid and he can tack it on to his mortgage if he has one. On the other hand an independent owner's rights are not restricted to the charge under cl. (1), but are saved by cl. (2), and he is free to institute other proceedings for enforcing them. S. 213 does not bar the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in such cases.

A person, whose property is sought to be sold wrongfully and who pays the money to save it from sale, has a right of suit, independent of the Madras Estates Land Act, for money had and received (a).

The restrictive language of S. 213 of the Madras Estates Land Act does not debar the jurisdiction of a Civil Court where a claim is made not only against the landlord for acts done under colour of the Act, but also against the tenants in the alternative for recovery from them of moneys payable by them but paid by the plaintiff under protest, as such a suit does not sound in damages. S. 213 applies only where the relationship of landlord and tenant subsists and the landlord has used the remedies given by the Act wrongfully, and not to a case where, ex concessi, no proceedings are taken against the plaintiff, because he is not regarded as owner of the property. In the latter case the fact that the plaintiff is also a tenant of the common landlord is immaterial.

The scope of S. 213 of the Madras Estates Land Act is to give a speedy remedy as between landlord and tenant in matters in regard to which the landlord, while purporting to invoke the aid of the Act, has failed to comply with the provisions enacted therefor; in other words, its object is to give a summary remedy to those against whom irregularities in procedure have been committed. The section does not cover cases where there is no power in the landlord to invoke the aid of the Act against an individual. This view is favoured by the analogy furnished by Ss. 89 to 91 of the said Act.

Per Bakewell, J.—The suit is one for damages within the meaning of S. 189 and Art. 21 of Sch. A to the Madras Estates Land Act, and the Civil Court's jurisdiction is barred by S. 213 of the said Act. The *Rajah of Vizianagaram v. A deposit in the Sub Treasury is equivalent to a deposit with the Collector. The presentation of a challan containing purpose and particulars of the deposit seems to be a sufficient application (a).

The Court of Wards of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh has jurisdiction to deal with the property of a disqualified proprietor situated outside the limits of the territories subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of the said Province.

As S. 15 makes no distinction at all between moveable and immoveable property it is quite clear that properties both within the limits of the Provinces of Agra and Oudh as well as outside thereof are subject to the administration set up by the Act in the event of a person coming under the terms of the Act.

S. 35 of the Court of Wards Act of the United Provinces gives a general power to the Court of Wards to sell or mortgage any part of any property under its superintendence. The power conferred by the Act is subject to a proviso, namely, that where the property has been taken charge of by the Court of Wards under S. 9 of the Act, the sale should not be made without the consent of the proprietor.

On the death of a ward, a disqualified proprietor, the Court of Wards may retain charge of his property until the debts and liabilities of the ward have been discharged.

Act I of 1900 (U.P. Municipalities)—(Old.).

A notice by the Municipal Board partly under S. 87 and partly under S. 88 for re-erection of a building without confirming to the permission given, is a valid notice and the only remedy open to a person aggrieved by such notice is laid down by S. 52. Such aggrieved person cannot bring a regular suit in the Civil Court for contesting the validity of that notice. S. 87 is not applicable only to that part of a building which abuts on and overhangs a public street since a building may adjoin a public street and yet may not overhang or project into it. *Rahas Bihari Lal v. (1) Tank land — Acquisition of right of occupancy — Continuous occupation for twelve years.

The land from which the plaintiff sued to eject the defendant was a tank or depression which could only carry crops of singhara or paddy in years of heavy rainfall. The rent carried very largely from year to year. The defendant admittedly paid no rent in the years when there had been no cultivation, but he claimed that he had been in continuous possession on the ground that he grazed cattle when cultivation was impossible. Held that this was not the same as the case in which cultivated land was left fallow for a year or two without the period necessary for the acquisition of a right of occupancy being interrupted and that under the circumstances occupancy rights were not acquired by the defendant as he did not hold the lands continuously for 12 years. *Naunihal Singh v. The Maharaja of Benares brought a suit for arrears of rent against the defendant, describing him as a fixed rate-tenant, under S. 102 of the Tenancy Act in the Court of an Assistant Collector of the second class. The defendant was entered in the revenue registers at the last revision of settlement of the Benares district as a fixed-rate-tenant. The defendant denied the relation of landlord and tenant between the Maharaja and himself and disputed the amount of rent claimed. The Judge in Second Appeal held that the plot in suit did not fall within the definition of the word "land" in the Tenancy Act and that upon the plaint as framed a suit would not lie in the Civil Court.

On an application for revision being presented, held (per Piggott, J.)—(1) that the application could not be brought within the narrow compass of S. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure, inasmuch as the District Judge had not refused to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him by law, or acted with material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction; (2) that, having regard to S. 167 of the Tenancy Act, the High Court could not entertain the application for revision.

Held that the tenant did not sacrifice his right of exchange under S. 14 of the Agra Tenancy Act, because he had not lost possession of his first holding before he got possession of the new one.

A tenant must be admitted to possession of a new holding within a year of loss of possession of the old one to claim a right of exchange; but there is nothing to prevent the landholder from giving possession of the new holding before the old holding has been actually vacated; nor would the tenant thereby be deprived of his right of exchange in the new holding. *Mohammad Husain Khan v. (38) Ss. 47, 97—Agreement to pay enhanced rent—Not registered—Effect of.

Defendant, zamindar, in 1907 sought to eject the plaintiffs from their holding. In the course of the proceedings a compromise was arrived at under which the zamindar consented to drop the ejectment proceedings, thereby allowing them to acquire occupancy rights and the latter agreed to pay a rent of Rs. 200 instead of Rs. 180 per annum. The compromise embodying the above terms was endorsed upon a paper bearing upon a general stamp of eight annas but the document was not registered under the Registration Act. The Assistant Collector in whose Court it was filed dismissed the ejectment suit, but no decree was framed embodying its terms so as to make it binding on the parties. The endorsement by the Assistant Collector on the document did not show that he had satisfied himself as to the matters provided in S. 97, Tenancy Act. Defendant in 1913 distrained the crops on the holding for arrears of rent at the rate of Rs. 200 per annum. Plaintiffs contested the distraint.

Held, that the original rent of Rs. 180 per annum payable by the plaintiffs could be enhanced by agreement between the parties only if the agreement in question were made by a registered instrument, and the provision of S. 97 of the Tenancy Act did not apply to the case. *Dat Prasad Singh v. There was no evidence whatever on the record to show that the landlord entered into any contract with the grove-holder to pay rent or was admitted to the sub-tenancy by the grove-holder. Held that if the grove-holder was to be treated as a tenant of a holding, he had his remedy under S. 79 of the Tenancy Act to sue for possession within six months. If a contract of sale was entered into which included an agreement to transfer by the surrender of the exproprietary rights as soon as they were created, such a contract would be unenforceable in law. If, however, after a sale-deed has been executed of the proprietary right and if after the occupancy tenancy has come into existence, the exproprietary tenants choose to execute a deed of relinquishment in favour of the landlord there is nothing to prevent them from doing so even though it was all along intended that they should do so. (37) S. 87—Occupancy rights—Modes of determination—Abandonment, requisites of.

Under the Agra Tenancy Act occupancy rights can determine only by the tenant's abandonment of his holding or by his death without heirs. Abandonment implies not only that the tenant should leave the village but that he should leave the village without making arrangement for the cultivation of his land and the payment of his rent.

In a suit for ejectment of the defendant on the ground that he was a tenant from year to year, it was found that the occupancy tenant of the land had left the village leaving the land in possession of the defendant and making arrangements for its cultivation and for payment of rent. It was also found that in 1908 the plaintiff brought a suit for rent against the occupancy tenant, which showed that the tenant was then alive. Held that there was no abandonment of the holding by the occupancy tenant nor presumption of his death, and that the present suit was therefore not maintainable. *Jalkaran Singh v. under the Guardians and Wards Act by the Civil Court. When a proclamation was issued under S. 110, Act III of 1901, their aunt applied stating that she, as guardian, should have been made a party to the case and raised some objections to the partition which did not concern the shares of the minors. Her application was made on the last day of the time allowed by the proclamation. After several adjournments of the case the Court agreed to her standing as guardian. Within a week thereafter she filed an objection under S. 110 raising a question of proprietary title concerning the shares of her minor wards. The Assistant Collector dismissed the objection as time-barred. This order was appealed to the Deputy Commissioner who passed an order that the appeal was to be returned for presentation to the District Judge, and that meanwhile partition proceedings were to be stayed. Against the order of the Deputy Commissioner an appeal was preferred to the Commissioner and after rejection of the appeal by the Commissioner an appeal was preferred to the Board. Held that no such appeal lay to the Board, but in the circumstances of the present case there was ample reason for interference by the Board on revision. Held also that the Assistant Collector was wrong in having rejected the objection as time-barred. The guardian of the minors filed her amended objection raising a question of proprietary title within a week after she became a party to the case. Under r. 9, B.C. 21—II, such an objection might, for special reasons, be entertained at a period subsequent to the date fixed for lodging objections. It was the duty of the Assistant Collector to have decided the matter on the merits. Held, further that the order of the Assistant Collector not having been passed under S. 111, Act III of 1901, it was appealable to the Deputy Commissioner. In the result the Board set aside the orders of the Assistant Collector and of the Deputy Commissioner and directed the Assistant Collector to pass orders on the objection of the guardian under S. 111 of the Act. *Chaudhuri Amrul Rahman v. A made an application in the Revenue Court for partition of his four biswas share. Plaintiff and his brother were owners of $3\frac{1}{2}$ biswas. Defendant, beyond time, made an application for partition of his $\frac{1}{2}$ biswa share. Mahals were formed by partition in the following way:—A's mahal of 4 biswas; plaintiff's mahal of $\frac{1}{2}$ of $3\frac{1}{2}$ biswas; and defendant's mahal of $\frac{1}{2}$ biswa. Plaintiff brought a suit to recover possession of the mahal allotted to defendant:

Held, (1) that the suit was not barred by S. 233 (k) of the Land Revenue Act inasmuch as it was not a suit in respect of the partition or union of the mahals; (2) that O. II, r. 2, of the Code of Civil Procedure did not apply to proceedings under the Land Revenue Act; (3) that the rule of res judicata did not apply, because the Revenue Court would not be competent to try the subsequent suit for possession, and no question of title either was or could have been raised in the partition proceedings. *Kalka Prasad v. The Judge, who tried the case found that the defendants held the land under certain Qubuliats executed by their ancestors in favour of the predecessors-in-title of the plaintiff and were estopped from setting up a perpetual tenancy and that the plaintiff had a good cause of action for the claim. Held that the Court could only pass a decree for a declaration that the defendants had no superior proprietary or under proprietary rights without going into the nature of the tenancy. S. 233, cl. (i) of U. P. In 1875 a mahal was divided into several pattis. Patti No. 2 belonged to plaintiff who was a purchaser; pattis Nos. 4 and 5 belonged to defendant; and patti No. 9 was shamilat. Plaintiff brought the present suit for declaration of his title or in the alternative for possession: Held that the suit was not barred by the provisions of S. 233 (k) of the Land Revenue Act, and that the suit was not a suit "relating to the partition or union of a mahal". *Shambhu Singh v. One D together with his father and uncle formed a joint Hindu family. The father and uncle applied to have their property placed under the superintendence of the Court of Wards. Held, that S. 55 of the Court of Wards Act (IV of 1912) prohibits a ward from suing and being sued not merely with respect to such property of his as is under the management of the Court of Wards but in respect of every possible cause of action cognizable by a Civil Court.

S. 127 of the Act does not compel a person to recognise a trespasser as a tenant and sue him for arrears of rent at such rate as the Revenue Court may consider fair and equitable. A person, who finds his land in the wrongful occupation of another, has the option of either going to the Civil Court and suing him for possession and damages in the manner laid down in O. Held, that, under S. 58 (2) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, the sub-letting by an occupancy tenant creates a relationship of landlord and tenant between the landlord and the sub-tenant.

(12) S. 77 (3)—Jurisdiction—Civil or Revenue Court—Suit for injunction restraining defendant from building on occupancy land

Held, that a suit falling within the purview of S. 77 (3) of the Punjab Tenancy Act must be heard by a Revenue Court, whether or not, so far as the form of the suit or the particular remedy prayed for is concerned, it also comes within any of the provisions of the Specific Relief Act (a).

Therefore a suit for a perpetual injunction that the defendants, being plaintiff's occupancy

(13) S. 77 (3)—Mortgage with possession—Suit for redemption—Plea of occupancy right by defendant—Civil Court not competent to entertain the plea.

The plaintiff mortgaged the land in suit, with possession, to the defendants, who were then recorded as tenants-at-will of the said land. The plaintiff now sued for redemption. The defendants, without contesting his right to redeem, set up a plea that their real position was that of occupancy tenants and that consequently the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for physical possession of the property.

Held that the plea of the defendants could not be entertained by a Civil Court (Vide S. 77 (3) of the Punjab Tenancy Act). Jhanda v. Data Ram, 59 P.R. 1916=93 P.L.R. 1916=35 Ind. Cas. 597.

Where, in a civil suit cognizable by a Civil Court, the question arose whether the defendants were occupancy tenants or not of the land on which the trees in dispute stood.

Held that the proviso to sub-S (3) of S. 77 of the Punjab Tenancy Act applied and that the Court should have proceeded in accordance with the directions contained in the first paragraph of the said proviso (a).

The enactment of the proviso to sub-S. (3) to S. 77 has rendered obsolete the law laid down by the rulings in 24 P.R. 1907 and 76 P.R. 1909. Mihan Singh v. Mussammatt Bhagwan Kaur, 111 P.R. 1916.

Held, also that a judgment which does not dispose of the pleas raised by the defendant but is based on conjectures and farfetched theories is a defective judgment. Hanwants v. Ram Sukh, 4 P.W.R. 1916 (Rev.).

(1) Grant of land—Death of grantee before acquisition of occupancy rights—Widow acquiring full proprietary rights after his death—Interest taken by her—Gift to her daughter, validity—Husband's collaterals—No right to question gift.

In 1896 Government granted to one U abadkar rights in certain lands, apparently under Act III of 1893. Before U had acquired any occupancy rights in the land, he died in 1898 leaving him surviving a widow B and a daughter N. Mutation was effected in 1899 in favour of the widow B and in 1903 she was granted occupancy rights in the holding. In 1912 she paid the necessary money and acquired full proprietary rights in the land and made it over to her daughter N.

Held, that the widow acquired the property in her own right and not as representing her deceased husband and that her husband's

Held, that where a tenant under the Government Tenants Act, 1893, paid the purchase-money by instalments for the acquisition of proprietary rights, under the terms of cl. 17 of the statement of conditions applicable, proprietary rights pass to the tenant on the payment of the first instalment.

Held, further, that S. 14 of the Colonization Act, 1912, prevents S. 15 of that Act to operate with retrospective effect and the latter section does not deprive the instalment purchaser of a right of property already acquired because there was a small balance of interest still due from the ex-tenant to Government. Guru Dutt v. This case was brought by the near collaterals of A, a Gujar of Gujar Khan Tahsil in the Rawalpindi district, for a declaration that the will by which the said A, on the 24th December, 1899, bequeathed the whole of his property to to his mother K and to his maternal uncle G was invalid and would not affect the plaintiff's rights on the death or re-marriage of K. A died shortly after making this will and mutation was granted in accordance with the provisions of the will in spite of the objections of the collaterals on the 26th February 1901. Held that Art. 1 of the Punjab Limitation Act (I of 1900) applied to this declaratory suit, notwithstanding that it was brought after the alienor's death, and it was not barred by limitation (a).

Held also that, among Gujars of Gujar Khan Tahsil, a childless proprietor cannot alienate his properties to his mother and maternal uncle in the presence of near collaterals.

Custom is a fact which must be proved by authoritative pronouncement or by instances in which it has been followed; it cannot be established by dialectics. Gulab Khan v. Musammat Chiragh Bibi, 43 P.R. 1916=191 P.W.R. 1916=31 Ind. Cas. 909

- (1) Mortgage of land in favour of agriculturist who undertakes to pay debt due from an agriculturist to a non-agriculturist—Consideration—Transfer of Property Act, S. 58.

Held, that it is not the object of the Alienation of Land Act to prevent a non-agriculturist from recovering money due to him from an agriculturist by any legal means in his power and that if such a person can induce an agriculturist to pay off a debt due to him and to take a mortgage of land from his debtor as security for himself, there is nothing in this Act to prohibit such a course. It is immaterial whether the mortgagee pays in cash or gives his bond (a).

Held, also, that the said mortgagee has nothing to do with the correctness of the account or real amount due beyond what the debtor himself admits and asks the mortgagee to pay for him (b). Halidar v. Fattah Khan, 114 P.W.R. 1916=119 P.L.R. 1916.

M mortgaged certain land to A (2nd defendant). On 19-2-1914, G (1st defendant) obtained a money decree against A. On 5-3-1914, A mortgaged his mortgagee rights to plaintiff who was A's brother. On 27-4-1914, G got A's mortgagee rights attached in execution of his decree. Plaintiff brought this suit for declaration that G (1st defendant) had not by law the right to attach the aforesaid property.

Held that A's mortgagee rights were 'land' within the meaning of Ss. 2 (3) and 16, Punjab Alienation of Land Act, and could not be sold in execution of the decree (a).

Held also that the mortgage by A was made six weeks before the attachment, and according to law A (judgment-debtor) was not bound to keep his property in a shape convenient for his creditors to proceed against, and the mortgage to plaintiff, though it may have been sharp practice, was not fraudulent in law.

Held further that, as G (1st defendant) so acted towards A (2nd defendant) as to injure plaintiff's interests, plaintiff was certainly entitled to object to the action taken against the 2nd defendant. Karam Ilaht v. Gulab Rai, 39 P.R. 1916=102 P.W.R. 1916=33 Ind. Cas. 960.

T, a Jat of the Lyallpur District, promised to sell land in dispute situate in tahsil Jaranwala, district Lyallpur, to P, a Jat of the Hoshiarpur district. On 5-1-1914, T executed an agreement containing inter alia the stipulations that the sale-deed would be executed and registered by 21-2-1914, that the party committing a breach of the contract would pay Rs. 1,000 as damages to the other and that if there was any legal obstacle to the execution and registration of the sale-deed, neither party would be entitled to pay damages. T refused to execute and register the sale-deed by the prescribed date. P instituted on 24-2-1914 the present suit for the specific performance of the contract and for the possession of the land. No sanction for the sale was obtained by P from the Deputy Commissioner before the 21st February 1916 though he applied for, and obtained such sanction during the pendency of the suit.

Held that, as plaintiff was neither a holder of land nor a resident in Lyallpur district, he was not a member of an agricultural tribe qua the Lyallpur district and was not entitled to purchase land situate therein without the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner.

Held also, that because S. 17, sub S. 2, Punjab Alienation of Land Act, 1900, provides that an instrument requiring the sanction of the Deputy Commissioner shall not be admitted to registration unless a certified copy of the order granting such action is presented to the registering officer and because no such sanction was obtained nor even applied for on 21-2-1914, there was a legal obstacle which prevented the registration of the document on or before that date, the defendant was at liberty to put an end to the contract and was not therefore liable to pay damages. Pal Singh v. Thakar Singh, 120 P.R. 1916.
